21 you gathered in this investigation were quite voluminous?

22 A Yes, sir, there were quite a few phone records
23 retrieved.

24 Q And were those gathered over a period of a number of

1 months pursuant to subpoenas?
2 A Yes, they were.
3 Q And those -- A relevant portion of those phone
4 records would be the subject of some stipulations between the 5 parties that have been prepared. Is that correct?
6 A Yes, sir, that's correct.
7 Q The phone records that you gathered as part of this 8 investigation, when were those phone records turned over to 9 either Mr. Beaman or his attorney?
10 A Those phone records were turned over pursuant to a
11 discovery motion after the defendant's arrest in this case.
12 Q And would that have been sometime after his actual 13 indictment in July of 1994?
14 A Yes, sir, I believe so.
15 Q Okay. And as part of your procedures as a police
16 officer, who did you turn those records over to?
17 A I turned those records over to the state's 18 attorney's office. They correlated all discovery motions
19 going to the defendant.
20 Q So it was then the job of our office to get things
21 to the defendant and his counsel. Is that correct?
22 A Yes, sir, that is correct. I worked directly
23 through the state's attorney's office.
24 Q And that's normal procedure in all cases?

A Yes, sir, it is.

Q On August the 31st I'd ask you if you also had occasion to have a telephone interview with a Virginia Betteridge?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And is that the same Virginia Betteridge that previously testified in this case who had worked with Michael Swaine?

A I didn't meet her, it was a phone conversation. But I believe it to be the same Virginia Betteridge, yes.

Q When you talked to her, did she tell you the same thing she told us here in court basically?

A Yes, sir, she did.

Q Did you also have a phone interview with Stacey Gates on that day?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q On September the 1st of 1993, did you begin some efforts with the cooperation of Michael Swaine?

A Yes, sir, that is the day we got the first court-ordered authorized overhear.

Q First, would you tell us at that point in time, had you sufficiently eliminated Mr. Swaine as a suspect that you wanted to ask for his cooperation?

A Yes, sir, to my satisfaction we had established a

C09580

1 solid alibi for Mr. Swaine.

2 Q Would you tell us the process that you have to go
3 through in order to do what I'll hereafter refer to as what we 4 commonly refer to as overhears? Would you explain that 5 process?

6 A Yes, sir. The only way that you can record
7 somebody's voice or activities without their consent is 8 through a court-ordered authorized overhear, consensual
9 overhear. In order to do that, you must have the consent of 10 one of the two parties in the conversation. That overhear is 11 normally issued by the judge, and in order to get that 12 overhear, you must provide probable cause of why you think 13 that overhear is needed. And in this particular case we were 14 able to establish enough probable cause to obtain a court-
15 authorized overhear for a conversation between Michael Swaine
16 and Alan Beaman. We completed a request for overhear,
17 presented that to the judge. The judge reviewed it, and upon 18 his approval, he signed the court-authorized overhear form to 19 allow us to do that particular technique.

20 Q And just for simplification purposes, there were 21 several conversations involving Mr. Swaine that required an 22 order. Is that correct?

23 A Yes, sir, that is correct.

24 Q And later on there were several conversations

1 between yourself and Mr. Beaman that required overhear orders.

2 Is that correct?

3 A That is correct.

4 Q And on each of those occasions, did you follow the 5 same procedure and go back to one of the judges that works
6 here in the courthouse and obtain an overhear order by the 7 procedure you have indicated?

8 A Yes, sir. I believe on each case there was a
9 separate overhear order.

10 Q You're not -- You don't get just one overhear order
11 at the beginning of the case and go with that the whole way
12 through?

13 A No, sir. Circumstances change and people involved
14 in the overhears change, and therefore each time you attempt 15 an overhear you have got to get a fresh overhear order. Also 16 they are only valid for approximately ten days to two weeks,
17 and therefore they will expire and you have to get a new one
18 to replace that older order.

19 Q In the early part of September, did you have a 20 couple of overhear attempts by telephone using Mr. Swaine that 21 were basically unsuccessful?

22 A Yes, sir, we did.

23 Q There was no connection between him and Mr. Beaman

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q At that time did you go to -- or drive past the Beaman house at [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Did you, at that time, have occasion to see the gray Ford Escort with license plates BBB 282 there?

A Yes, I did.

Q And was that the day that you interviewed Mike Vanberringer, as he testified to here in court?

A Yes, that is correct.

Q Did you also go to Auburn High School where Carol Beaman is employed?

A Yes, I did.

Q At that time, did you attempt to ascertain whether there were any records for the week of August 23rd which might indicate her presence there, or possibly even the presence of her son, Alan?

A Yes, I made the attempt, but at that time school had not started. Teachers were in and out before and after classes, so it was very hard to find any recorded documentation of presence during that week.

Q Were you able to find any witnesses with any specific recollections of when they may have seen Mrs. Beaman and/or Alan there the prior week?

A No, no witnesses with specific dates and times.

Q On September the 5th did you have another unsuccessful telephone attempt overheard with a telephone?

A Yes, we did.

Q On September 8th, after obtaining another overheard order, then did -- with Mr. Swaine's cooperation and consent, did you conduct an overheard that day?

A Yes, I did.

Q Prior to that time, earlier that day, did you have occasion to get Mr. Swaine's fingerprints from him to use for laboratory examination purposes?

A Yes, I did.

Q I show you People's Exhibit 47 which contains some print cards, and ask you if those are the print cards that you took from Mr. Swaine that day?

A The top print card is a card that I took. Shows Michael J. Swaine's signature and my signature on it. The palm print card was taken by Detective Warner.

Q But those were both taken that day at the Normal Police Department?

Q And conveyed to the crime lab for comparison purposes by Mr. Dierker?

A Yes, both are dated 9-8 of '93.

Q When that day was the -- approximately was the overhear between Mr. Swaine and Mr. Beaman done?

A According to my report I picked up Mr. Swaine at approximately 6:30 P.M. We talked about the plans for the overhear. At about 9:40 P.M. the body wire was strapped onto Mr. Swaine. He then exited the van that we were sitting in and engaged Mr. Beaman in conversation.

Q Do you, in doing that, have to obtain some technical services from somewhere?

A Yes, sir, we did. You have to be specially trained in doing the body wire. You have to be certified by the state to operate the body wire. Therefore, our department always called upon the State Police Tech Services division to assist in that matter.

Q I take it when you're talking about body wire, you're talking recording equipment that's hidden from view?

A A Nagra recorder, about this tall with an elastic cord and two wires then come over the shoulders, each with microphones attached to them. And there's an RF transmitter that accompanies that unit.

C09585

1 Q And during the time that the overhear is actually
2 taking place, where were you located?

3 A I was located in a Dodge or a Plymouth minivan
4 sitting right across the street from McPherson Hall, along
5 with two individuals from tech services.

6 Q Could you and the technical people hear the 7 conversation at the time that it was taking place?

8 A Yes, sir. The Nagra recorder is a reel-to-reel
9 recorder, but as I mentioned, the RF transmitter that is also 10 stuck in the elastic in the front, and the RF transmitter
11 transmit all of the conversation back to the unit where the 12 tech services are monitoring the equipment. So we had the 13 receiver in the van with us and could hear the entire 14 conversation.

15 Q After the conversation ended, was the tape from the 16 tape recorder on Mr. Swaine's body recovered by yourself?

17 A It was recovered by the tech services individuals in 18 my presence, sir.

19 Q Did they then turn it over to you?

20 A Yes, sir, they did after making a recording onto an 21 audio cassette tape. We don't have the facilities to run a
22 reel-to-reel tape to play it back.

Q And at the appropriate time, did you have that transcribed by the secretarial help available to you?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Did you compare the transcript of those two tapes?

A Yes, I've listened to it numerous times, sir.

Q Did you also -- Is there a requirement pursuant to the overhear statute that you do something with the original of those tapes?

A Yes, sir. This again -- Since it requires a court order we obviously don't have Carte Blanche just to do whatever we want. We must give the original copy of that tape to the issuing judge so he can listen to it and approve what's contained within the tape before that tape can be used in this case. An overhear return was done to the judge.

Q And again for simplicity's sake, all the overhears that we're going to hear about today, did you follow that same procedure and have the transcripts made, keep copies of the tape, and return the original to the judge as required by law?

A Yes, sir, I did returns on all overhears.

Q On the 15th of September, did you do another overhear involving an in-person conversation between Mr. Swaine and Mr. Beaman?

A Yes, I did, once again involving the Nagra recorder,

1 RF transmitter, and a conversation between Mr. Beaman and Mr.
2 Swaine.

3 Q Where did both of these conversations take place,
4 the one on the 8th and the 15th?

5 A Both occurred on Illinois Wesleyan campus,
6 Bloomington, McLean County, Illinois.

7 Q And could you hear the conversation again as it was 8 going on?

9 A Yes, sir, I could. I was sitting in the same van
10 once again.

11 Q Did you follow the same procedure with a transcript
12 and copy of the tapes that we previously mentioned?

13 A Yes, sir, I did.

14 Q I call your attention to September 22nd of '93, ask 15 you if you had another occasion to make a trip to Rockford at 16 that time?

17 A Yes, sir, I did.

18 Q Did you have occasion to interview Dennis Brown,
19 who's testified in this case?

20 A Interviewed Dennis Clark, sir.

21 Q I've got Brown down. His name is Clark, isn't it?

22 A Yes.

Gray's IGA, correct?

A Yes, sir, the maintenance man for Gray's IGA.

Q And, at that time, did you also obtain Mr. Beaman's work schedule from the -- from the records there at the IGA?

A Yes, I did.

Q Call your attention to September the 23rd of 1993, and ask if you had occasion to go to the grand jury of McLean County on that day and request a subpoena of the defendant's bank records at Bell Federal Savings & Loan in Rockford, Illinois?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q How was it that you knew to seek those bank records?

A I got lucky, sir. I went to the Rockford phone book, went to the yellow pages, and started calling each bank in the yellow pages. I found Bell Federal to be one of the first or second banks.

Q Basically just called up the banks and asked if they had an account there?

A That's correct, sir.

Q Did you not receive that information from Mr. Beaman?

A No, sir, I did not.

Q All right --

A It also might have been contained in the credit

C09589

1 bureau report, but I can't be sure about that without looking.

2 Q Calling your attention to September the 24th of 3 1993, did you have some contact with people from Bell Federal 4 in Rockford on that date?

5 A Yes, sir, I did.

6 Q And was that the first time that you learned of Mr.
7 Beaman's presence at the bank on August the 25th of 1993?

8 A Yes, that was my first indication of that.

9 Q Did they later send you a video tape which you were 10 able to view and verify a week or two later?

11 A Yes, sir. I asked them if they had a video tape,
12 and they said they did, and they did send it to me.

13 Q What did that video tape show?

14 A The video tape showed Alan Beaman standing in the 15 Bell Federal Bank in Rockford, Illinois, at 11 minutes after 16 ten. If I could refer to my reports -- When I received the 17 video tape back from Bell Federal, showed him entering the 18 bank at 10:09 and 22 seconds of 8-25 of '93, remaining there
19 until 10:11 and 43 seconds on the same date.

20 Q And you personally viewed that and satisfied
21 yourself it was Mr. Beaman in the video tape?

22 A Yes, sir, I did.

23 Q On October the 12th of 1993, did you have your first 24 personal contact with Mr. Beaman in connection with this

1 investigation?

2 A Yes, sir, I did.

3 Q Now you were aware that he had been questioned
4 originally in Rockford by Detective Daniels?

5 A Yes, sir, I was well aware of that.

6 Q And obviously you've already indicated you were 7 aware of the conversations with Mr. Swaine in September?

8 A Yes, sir, I was.

9 Q As far as contact with actual police officers
10 between August the 28th or the early morning hours of the 29th
11 and your first conversation with him on October the 12th, were 12 there any other direct police contacts with Mr. Beaman?

13 A No, sir, there was not.

14 Q On that occasion, prior to your conversation with 15 him, did you have occasion to obtain a search warrant?

16 A Yes. Lt. Brown from the county sheriff's department
17 obtained that.

18 Q And what was that search warrant for?

19 A That search warrant was for body fluids and hair
20 samples from Alan Beaman.

21 Q And were those used for comparison purposes at the 22 laboratory?

23 A Yes, that is correct. What would typically be 24 called a rape kit is what we were attempting to get.

1 Q Did that also include fingerprints?

2 A Yes, sir, it did.

3 Q And what's the procedure you have to go through to 4 obtain that search warrant?

5 A To obtain the search warrant we have to once again
6 go in front of a judge. We have to show probable cause as to 7 why we feel we need the items listed in the search warrant.
8 We were able to establish that Alan was a boyfriend, and that 9 there was motive based on the letters. And after presenting 10 that to the judge, along with other items, we were able to 11 explain to the judge that we required to get this kit so we 12 could make identifications, matches, or attempt to make 13 matches from the evidence found at the scene. The judge
14 approved that and saw that there was need for that and signed 15 a search warrant for the body of Alan Beaman to recover those 16 samples.

17 Q At that time were you aware from the preliminary 18 laboratory analyses that there were possible prints that might 19 be compared in this case, and also possible semen stains?

20 A Yes, sir, I was.

21 Q As part of that search warrant process -- After you
22 completed the search warrant, what are you required to do
23 after you have done the actual gathering of the evidence?
24

A Well, just as in the overhear return, once again,

1. it's not Carte Blanche. We have to give a return to the judge
2 and tell him exactly what we took and when it was taken, and 3 then he approves that and says that it was done legal and 4 justly. So we did return -- or make a return on the search
5 warrant.

6 Q Did you and Lt. Brown locate the defendant that day?

7 A Yes, sir, we did, outside McPherson Hall, Illinois
8 Wesleyan campus.

9 Q And I think we've done that, but for the record is 10 the Alan Beaman that you have been dealing with throughout the 11 investigation in the courtroom?

12 A Yes, sir, he is, sitting to the right of Mr. Beu
13 with the long hair.

14 MR. SOUK: May the reflect the identification of the 15 defendant?

16 THE COURT: Record will reflect.

17 Q (By Mr. Souk) Prior to doing anything with Mr.
18 Beaman, did you have occasion to read him what are called his 19 Miranda Rights?

20 A Yes, sir, I did.

21 Q After doing that, did you obtain the samples that 22 were required by the search warrant?

23 A Yes, sir, we did.

24 Q Did Mr. Beaman cooperate in that process?

1 A Yes, sir, he cooperated with us.

2 Q The samples, other than the fingerprints, where were 3 they gathered?

4 A The samples were gathered at BroMenn Hospital in the 5 ER room.

6 Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 48, and there's a
7 48-D that's outside the package, and without opening it, ask
8 you if you recognize that exhibit?

9 A Yes, sir. That is what's known as a rape kit, the 10 samples that were taken from Alan Beaman.

11 Q And if we opened that, would we find another --
12 several other envelopes like this with samples in it?

13 A Yes, you would.

14 Q And were you personally present at BroMenn as those 15 were gathered by a nurse or someone at the hospital?

16 A Yes. They were gathered by a nurse by the name of 17 Ron Bartlett. He took all of it in my presence. After he did 18 that, then I placed this red evidence seal on the box, and 19 you'll see my initials, TJF, here, here, and up here.

20 Q And then do you send that to the lab for comparison
21 purposes?

22 A Yes, sir, we do.

23 Q When you got back to the station, before you had 24 your interview with him, did you take his fingerprints?

835

AB017833

APPENDIX 003017

1           A    Yes, sir, we did.

2           Q    And did you do that personally?

3           A    If I could look at the cards, I could tell whether 4 I did or not.

5           Q    Show you People's Exhibit No. 49.

6           A    Yes, sir, I did both the fingerprints and the palm
7 print cards.

8           Q    Okay. And again, did you then convey those to the 9 laboratory for comparison purposes?

10          A    Yes, sir, I did.

11          Q    After you finished the fingerprinting, did you have 12 a conversation with Mr. Beaman?

13          A    Yes, I did. When I first approached him I advised 14 Mr. Beaman he was under the effect of a search warrant. After 15 the fingerprints were completed, we obtained everything we 16 needed, I informed him that he was no longer under the effects
17 of the search warrant, no longer under arrest, and he was free
18 to leave at anytime, and I think asked if he would mind having 19 a conversation with me.

20          Q    Did he agree to do that?

21          A    Yes, he did.

22          Q    At that point in time, did you remind him of his 23 rights that you had read him before, his Miranda Rights?

24          A    I believe I did, yes.

1 Q During the initial portion of that conversation,
2 did you ask him about his relationship with Jennifer
3 Lockmiller and whether or not they had encountered any 4 problems in that relationship?

5 A Yeah, towards the very first part of the 6 conversation I just asked him about Jennifer in vague, what 7 she was like. And as he became more comfortable with the 8 situation, I focused on their relationship.

9 Q And what did he tell you about the relationship,
10 itself?

11 A Well again, if I could refer to my notes. He did
12 state that they would have psychological battles where one
13 would mention the other's past boyfriends or girlfriends as a 14 way to irritate the other. He stated that Jennifer would 15 always win the psychological battles. I mentioned, "Alan, it
16 sounded like Jennifer had really raked you over the coals."
17 To which he agreed. He further commented on a time that she 18 had sexual intercourse with Mike Swaine in the Sigma Chi
19 basement. Alan made it very clear that she was much less than 20 faithful. Took everything that he had. Left him a hollow
21 fucking shell. As we talked he would change his tone from the 22 normal talking voice to a whisper, and then back to a normal
23 talking voice.

24 Q When you're referring to your report, I take it that

837

C09596

AB017835

APPENDIX 003019

1 this particular conversation was not tape recorded in any 2 form?

3 A No, sir, it was not.

4 Q Okay. And did you take some notes and later reduce 5 those to the form of a police report?

6 A Yes, sir, I did. In cases --

7 Q I'm sorry.

8 A -- cases like this, it's hard telling how long we're 9 going to go, so I try to document everything I do at the time,
10 so at times such as this, I can refer back to my report and 11 refresh my memory.

12 Q The report that you're referring to now to refresh
13 your recollection, those are the reports that you wrote at the 14 time shortly after you had this interview with Mr. Beaman?

15 A Yes. This was an ongoing report, and I just 16 continued to add onto it as the case progressed.

17 Q After that initial conversation that covered
18 generally his relationship and the problems that they had, did
19 you have occasion to ask him anything about his whereabouts
20 the week of August the 23rd through August the 28th of 1993?

21 A Yes, I did.

22 Q Could you tell us how you went about that?

23 A Well, we took a short break. He stepped outside 24 with Lt. Brown to smoke a cigarette. Once he came back in, we

1 restarted the interview. I asked him if he would be willing
2 to talk with me for awhile longer. He stated he would. I
3 then -- We were sitting at my desk in the juvenile office. He
4 was sitting to the left of my desk. I handed him a blank
5 sheet of notebook paper and pencil. I asked him if he would 6 write down the numbers of the week, Monday through Friday, on 7 the left side of that paper. At that time he wrote down,
8 abbreviated the days Monday through Friday on the left side of 9 that paper.

10 Q And then what did you ask him to do?

11 A Then I asked him to go back and fill in what he did
12 the week of August 23rd through August 27th, 1993.

13 Q And what did he do then?

14 A He went immediately to Wednesday and started filling
15 in what he did on Wednesday. If I could refer to the article,
16 I could tell you exactly what he wrote.

17 Q Let me show you People's Exhibit No. 44 and ask you
18 if you recognize that document?

19 A Yes, sir, I do. That is the schedule which he wrote
20 out for me. Also in the top right corner of the schedule
21 says, schedule written by Alan Beaman on 10-12-93. Witnessed that a blow-up of People's Exhibit No. 44?
22 by Detective Tim Freesmeyer, my signature, TJF underneath.

A Yes, sir, it is.

Q Okay. The writing that you're referring to in the upper right-hand corner, that you just referred to, that shows on the slide in the upper right-hand corner?

A Yes, sir, it does. It's in very small letters. It's hard to read.

Q Everything else that was written on the piece of paper, was that written by Mr. Beaman?

A Yes, sir, it was.

Q All right. And the days of the week that you mentioned that he wrote, wrote down first, those are the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday that's written along the left-hand margin line there?

A That's correct, along the two vertical lines on the left.

Q And you indicated that he went directly to Wednesday, correct?

A Yes, that is correct.

Q At that point in time in the investigation, had you informed Mr. Beaman the day that it was believed that Jennifer Lockmiller had been murdered?

A No, sir. He was only interviewed one time prior to the interview, and that was by Detective Daniels up in 009599

1 Rockford, and I don't believe Detective Daniels knew the time
2 of death.

3 Q At anytime prior to October 12th, had it been made
4 public the day or time that the police investigation was 5 focusing on?

6 A No, sir, it did not.

7 Q Could we go to the next slide please?

8 A Yes, sir.

9 Q Again, this is another view of that same slide with 10 just a heading telling exactly what it is. Is that correct?

11 A Yes, it is.

12 Q And could we go to the next slide? And this has a 13 part, if you will, blown up with an arrow like we had on some 14 previous slides, correct?

15 A Yes, sir. This again is a computer-generated slide.

16 Q The blown-up portion here you have typed up rather 17 than doing it in handwriting, is that correct?

18 A That's correct, just to make it more legible I typed
19 what was written at that time.

20 Q And the part that's blown-up, is that exactly the 21 words that were written by Mr. Beaman?

22 A Yes, it is, and it's exactly the words that are in 23 my police report that I wrote at the time that this was done.

24 Q Those words that are up there, would you read them

please?

A "Church, ice cream social, seven o'clock, rehearsed," there's a dash, "Mitch Olson, Choir Director, Carbone - eight o'clock; Dave Olson's."

Q And is that what you observed him write when you say he went to Wednesday?

A Yes, that's the very first thing he wrote on the page.

Q What is the next thing he did on the page?

A The next thing he did was to go up to Monday and write in, "Jen called, I hung up, about five minutes."

Q Okay, and then thereafter, what did you observe him to do?

A From there he went on throughout the days of the week and filled in the rest of his schedule for that week.

Q Any -- was that in any particular order, or somewhat random order, or --

A The first two instances stuck out in my mind that he immediately went to Wednesday, and then to Monday. After that I don't recall what order he took them in, sir.

Q Is that the last slide in that series?

A Yes, sir, I believe it is.

MR. SOUK: And for the record, those would be slides 44-AX, BX, CX, DX and EX.

1 THE COURT: All right, back on the record. Counsel and
2 the defendant return to open court. The witness returns to 3 the witness stand. Jury is brought back into the courtroom.

5 (WHEREUPON THE JURY ENTERED THE COURTROOM
6 AND THE FOLLOWING WAS HAD:)

8 THE COURT: All right, for the record, the jury has now
9 returned to open court. Mr. Souk, you may continue your 10 examination.

11 MR. SOUK: Thank you, your Honor.

12 Q (By Mr. Souk) Sgt. Freesmeyer, I think we were at 13 October the 22nd of 1993, and I had asked you if on that date
14 you had a second interview with the defendant, Alan Beaman?

15 A Yes, sir, we did.

16 Q Where did that interview take place?

17 A That interview -- We first met him at his residence
18 at [REDACTED]. The interview took place at the state's 19 attorney's office in Lt. Brown's office.

20 Q At that time, was Lt. Brown serving as the 21 investigator for the McLean County State's Attorney's office?

22 A Yes, sir, he was.

23 Q And he's recently retired, correct?

24 A Yes, sir, within the last week.

1 Q Prior to arriving at the state's attorney's office
2 on this occasion, did you read to the defendant his Miranda
3 Warning?

4 A If I could refer to my notes for just a moment.
5 Yes, sir, I did.

6 Q And did he agree to go into the office and have a
7 conversation with you and Lt. Brown?

8 A Yes, sir, he did.

9 Q When you were in Lt. Brown's office, was anyone
10 present besides you and the defendant and Lt. Brown?

11 A No, there was just the three of us, sir.

12 Q During that conversation, did Lt. Brown have 13 occasion to ask Mr. Beaman about when the last time was that 14 he had had sex with Jennifer?

15 A Yes, sir, he did.

16 Q And could you refer to your notes, if you need to do
17 so --

18 A Yes, he did ask that.

19 Q What was Mr. Beaman's response at that time?

20 A He stated it was during the last week of June, and 21 the sexual intercourse occurred at Alan's apartment.

22 Q Did Mr. Beaman make any further comments during this 23 interview about his relationship with Jennifer and the ups and 24 downs of that relationship?

1           A     Again, if you'll give me a moment to refresh myself
2 with my notes. Yes, he stated once again their relationship
3 was rocky at best. Stated that Jennifer
4 had broken off the relationship with him 16 times in the last
5 year, and that he broke off the relationship twice, the second
6 time being the final time.

7           Q     How long did this interview last altogether?

8           A     It was not very long. It lasted maybe five to ten 9 minutes, 15 minutes at the most.

10          Q     And how did it terminate?

11          A     Well, the interview was being conducted, as I said, 12 in Lt. Brown's office. The door was closed. Lt. Brown and 13 Alan were seated in front of Lt. Brown's desk. I was seated
14 behind the desk taking notes for the interview. Lt. Brown
15 asked Alan what happened that day. Alan stated he didn't 16 know. Lt. Brown said, "I think you do know." At that point, 17 Alan lost his temper, and he stood up, grabbed his chair, his 18 coat off the back of the chair, grabbed the door to the room,
19 slammed the door open to the point that it shook the walls,
20 stated, "You're just like fuckin' Daniels," in a very loud
21 voice that the people outside could hear what was going on,
22 drawing the attention of the rest of the people in the state's 23 attorney's office. At that point he left the room, walked out
24 to the elevator.

1 Q Up until Lt. Brown had said that to him, what was 2 his demeanor like?

3 A Demeanor was absolutely calm, no tension that I
4 could see, no physical tension.

5 Q At the time that Lt. Brown was asking him questions
6 and made that comment to him, what was Lt. Brown's demeanor
7 like?

8 A Lt. Brown's demeanor was very calm, talking in a
9 voice very similar to what I'm talking like now.

10 Q He was not yelling or shouting at the defendant?

11 A No, sir. At no point did I hear Lt. Brown raise his 12 voice above a normal speaking tone.

13 Q Did you have occasion to follow the defendant or see
14 where he went, or what he did?

15 A I attempted to, yeah. I grabbed my keys. I went 16 out to the elevator area on the sixth floor. I saw Alan 17 waiting for the elevator. As soon as he saw me, he said,
18 "I'll take the fuckin' stairs." And he went down the 19 stairwell to the lobby. At that time, the elevator opened, I
20 got in the elevator, went to the lobby. As the elevator
21 opened and I stepped out, I saw Alan leaving the front door of 22 the Law & Justice Center, walking out in a northerly
23 direction. I followed him out and stated something to the 24 effect of, "Alan, this is your best chance to talk to us."

1 He turned around once and looked at me and kept walking.

2 Q Had you given him a ride down there that day?

3 A Yes, sir, I did.

4 Q Best of your knowledge, he walked home?

5 A Best of my knowledge, he walked home.

6 Q After that occasion, did you make an attempt on 7 October the 27th of 1993 to reestablish your own personal
8 contact with Mr. Beaman?

9 A Yes, I did. At that point, he had blown up at 10 Lt. Brown. I figured I would try to make an attempt to try to 11 contact him.

12 Q And where did you do that?

13 A I went to McPherson Hall to check the theater shop.
14 After I obtained approval of the building secretary, I entered 15 the shop area. Alan Beaman was there. He was working with 16 his back to me. He turned around and saw me standing there
17 and motioned me to the outside of the theater, and so he and 18 I walked to the outside of the theater.

19 Q At that time, were you able to have a conversation
20 with him for some period of time?

21 A Yes, sir. We stepped right outside McPherson Hall.
22 I took a seat on a little park bench that's outside there.

23 Q And this conversation, the one on October 22nd, and 24 the one on October the 12th, were any of these conversations

1 tape recorded by any means?

2 A On October the 27th, you mean?

3 Q Yes, 27th, and the 22nd, and the 12th of October?

4 A No, none of those conversations were recorded.

5 Q Okay, again --

6 A Not by electronic means, I should say, just in my 7 notes.

8 Q So again, the one on the 22nd, and for this one on 9 the 27th, did you prepare police reports based upon your notes
10 that you are now referring to to refresh your recollection?

11 A Yes, sir, I did.

12 Q I want to ask you some of the details about that 13 conversation on October the 27th. First, did you, at that 14 time, during what you were saying to Alan, inform him that he 15 was going to be arrested at some time for this crime?

16 A Yes, sir, I did.

17 Q And did you inform him that some laboratory results
18 were still awaiting finalization?

19 A Yes, I stated they were still pending. Lab work was 20 still being done.

21 Q And without going into the details, did you talk
22 with him some about some of the evidence that had been 23 uncovered in the investigation?

24 A Yes, I did.

C09607

1 Q Did you also, at that point, have some conversation
2 with him that involved the topic of the death penalty?

3 A Yes, I did.

4 Q What did you tell him about that?

5 A After speaking with the representative from the 6 state's attorney's office, I was authorized to tell him that 7 if he wished to talk to me and just get it cleared up and get
8 the matter over with, we would not pursue the death penalty
9 against him, and that is what I informed him.

10 Q Just to make it clear, he never confessed to you
11 that day or any other time about this crime. Is that correct?

12 A No, sir, I never did receive a confession from Mr.
13 Beaman.

14 Q At this point in time, during this conversation, did
15 you have occasion to confront the defendant with the 16 information that you previously had received back in September 17 that indicated he was at the bank at 11 minutes after ten on 18 Wednesday, August the 25th?

19 A Yes, I did. That was the first time that that -- 20 our knowledge of that information was disclosed to him.

21 Q And on that occasion in talking about that, did you
22 have occasion to ask him whether or not he had, in fact, even 23 told investigators on two prior occasions that he had gone
24 straight home?

1           A     Yes, sir, I did confirm that with him. I asked him,
2     "Didn't you tell the officers that you went straight home?"
3     He said, "Yes."

4           Q     Did you, in telling him about the bank information,
5     point out that inconsistency to him?

6           A     Yes, I told him it was in direct conflict with what 7     he had told us. He said he went straight home, we had 8     information he was at the bank.

9           Q     Did you ask him if he would explain that 10    inconsistency to you?

11          A     Yes, I did.

12          Q     What was his response to that?

13          A     His response was, "I did not go -- or I didn't go to 14    Normal."

15          Q     At that time, did he make any indication to you that 16    he had forgotten that information?

17          A     His only response was, "I didn't go to Normal."

18          Q     As part of your conversation with him that day, did 19    you directly inform him that there appeared to be a gap in his 20    alibi during the mid part of the day of Wednesday, August the 21    25th of 1993?

22          A     Yes, I did. If I can refer to my notes for just a
23    moment?

24          Q     If you would please.

1           A     Yes. I told him that there was an alibi -- a very
2 large alibi gap that he had not accounted for.

3           Q     And in so doing, did you again ask him for any 4 information he could give you about where he was during the 5 daytime hours on Wednesday, August the 25th?

6           A     Yes, sir, I did. I took a somewhat different
7 approach than Detective Daniels' did. I tried talking to him
8 in a very civil, calm demeanor, and asked him if there's 9 anything that you can give me to help prove you are innocent,
10 and he said there was nothing that he could give me.

11          Q     Did he again tell you where he was and what he was 12 doing on Wednesday, August 25th of 1993?

13          A     Yes, he did.

14          Q     And can you refer to your report -- would you do
15 that, but would you tell us what he told you that day about 16 his activities on August the 25th?

17          A     I then asked Alan if he recalled telling me that he 18 was home by himself and sleeping on Wednesday until 3:30 or 19 four o'clock when his parents arrived home to wake him.
20 Alan then confirmed that he was home by himself on Wednesday,
21 August 25th, from around ten or 11 hours until his parents
22 arrived home at around 1530 to 1600 hours, which would be 3:30
23 to four o'clock. I asked Alan if he had anyone over to his 24 house, and he stated no. I asked him if he made any phone

1 calls that morning, and he stated no. Once again I asked
2 Alan Beaman if there was anyway possible to clear him, and he
3 stated he couldn't.

4 Q And in fairness, he ended that conversation by 5 reiterating to you that he did not do this crime, correct?

6 A Yes, sir, that is the way he ended the conversation.

7 Q I want to call your attention to October the 29th of 8 1993, and ask you if upon that date you had Michael Swaine go
9 to BroMenn and give some samples similar to the ones that you
10 had done for Mr. Beaman earlier?

11 A Yes, sir, I did.

12 Q I show you People's Exhibit 51 and several packages,
13 51-C and D that are removed, and ask you if you recognize that 14 to be the rape kit and some of the packaging on Mr. Swaine's
15 rape kit?

16 A Yes, it is. On the small packages that's my 17 writing, pubic hair samples and head hair samples, and on this 18 package is one of the typical evidence cards we fill out, and 19 once again you see my signature on the evidence, TJF --

20 Q And if we opened that, we'd find some more similar 21 packages?

22 A Yes, sir, I believe so.

23 Q And did you follow the same procedure of that that 24 you had with Mr. Beaman, that is to be personally present when

1 those samples were gathered and place them in the envelopes?

2 A Yes, I did.

3 Q Did you then seal them in the big box and take them
4 to the lab?

5 A Yes -- I didn't take them to the lab myself, but 6 they were taken to the lab.

7 Q You had them sent to the lab?

8 A Yes, that's correct, sir.

9 Q Calling your attention to November the 3rd, 1993,
10 utilizing the same procedure that you have used before, did
11 you have occasion to obtain an overhear order to record
12 conversations between yourself and the defendant?

13 A Yes, sir, I did.

14 Q And on November the 5th, did you have such a 15 conversation with the defendant that was recorded pursuant to 16 that order?

17 A Yes, sir, on November the 5th, 1993, I did do that 18 order.

19 Q And was that the first of your conversations with 20 the defendant that was tape recorded?

21 A That was the first conversation with the tape --
22 with the defendant tape recorded that I did personally where 23 I was wearing the body wire, yes, sir.

24 Q And again was the same procedure used basically that was used with Mr. Swaine to use the Nagra recorder and put it hidden on your body using the tech services people?

A Yes, sir, it was the same procedure, except this time I was the consenting party instead of Michael Swaine.

Q Obviously Mr. Beaman did not know it was being recorded. Is that correct?

A That is correct.

Q Okay. Have you, prior to today, prepared some slides for use in court that basically contain the transcript from that third overhear?

A Yes, sir, I have.

Q What I'm calling the third overhear, would be your first overhear, but the third one you've done, correct?

A Yes, the first overhear that I did, but the third one for the case.

Q And was the slide prepared using a transcript that you'd already done and had prepared in this case after completing the conversation?

A Yes, sir, they were.

Q The conversation that you had with Mr. Beaman on November 5th, where did that take place?

A That took place in the quad area of Illinois Wesleyan University.

MR. SOUK: Your Honor, I'd ask leave to play the tape

C09613

1 which is People's Exhibit 78-A and show the slides which are
2 beginning with 69-A.

3 THE COURT: Any objection?

4 MR. BEU: This would be the tape of this particular
5 recorded conversation, and then the slides saying the same
6 thing as the tape?

7 MR. SOUK: Yes.

8 MR. BEU: No objection.

9 THE COURT: All right.

10 Q (By Mr. Souk) And for the record, we're now going
11 to play the tape, 78-A, and, detective, the transcript -- 12 first page of the transcript, 69-A, appears on the slide for 13 the jury. Is that correct?

14 A That is correct, sir.

15 Q Does it take awhile, or should we check it?

16 A You might want to check it. May I, sir?

17 THE COURT: Mr. Souk, do you want the witness to step 18 down and check?

19 MR. SOUK: Yes.

20 THE COURT: All right, you may.

22 (WHEREUPON PEOPLE'S EXHIBIT NO. 78-A, THE

24 SLIDES OF PEOPLE'S EXHIBIT NO. 69-A THRU 69-I

1 WERE DISPLAYED TO THE JURY. A COPY OF PEOPLE'S
2 EXHIBIT NO. 69-A THRU 69-I APPEARS AS FOLLOWS:)

4 Q (By Mr. Souk) Detective, did you just hear the tape
5 recording, People's Exhibit 78-A, played here in court?

6 A Yes, sir, I did.

7 Q And was this an accurate tape recording of the 8 conversation that you had with Mr. Beaman on November the 5th
9 of 1993?

10 A Yes, it is, with the exceptions of the long spans
11 where there was no talking, I shortened the tape up for court
12 purposes.

13 Q The slides that we saw beginning with 69-A, I
14 believe ending with 69-I, did those slides have a transcript
15 of that tape that was true and accurate based on your review
16 of the tape and the transcript?

17 A Yes, with two exceptions. First, at the very 18 beginning of the tape, tech services is talking about what 19 this is. This is referenced PD on the screen. You didn't 20 see that on the screen. And also I mentioned I'm standing in 21 a certain hall at Illinois Wesleyan. I'm not certain it was 22 Fell Hall, but it was where Alan was having class.

23 Q But you did say Fell?

24 A I did say Fell Hall on the tape, and I'm not sure

1 that's accurate. But it was the hall where he was.

2 Q I want to call your attention to November the 16th
3 of 1993, and ask you if you had occasion to go to Peoria in
4 connection with this investigation?

5 A Yes, sir, I did.

6 Q And did you have occasion to interview the principal
7 at Harrison School where Stacey Gates was employed at that 8 time?

9 A Yes, sir, I did.

10 Q And did you obtain his employment records at that 11 time for the week of August 23rd through 25th?

12 A Yes, I did.

13 Q I'm sorry, through the 29th?

14 A The 27th I believe.

15 Q 27th?

16 A 23rd to the 27th, yes, sir.

17 Q All right, thank you. Calling your attention to 18 November the 17th of '93, and ask you if you had occasion to 19 go to Elmhurst, Illinois that day?

20 A Yes, sir, I did.

21 Q And, at that time, were you obtaining further
22 information relating to verifying -- doing the final
23 verification of Mr. Swaine's whereabouts that week?

24 A Yes, sir, I was.

1 Q When you went up there, did you keep track of your
2 time for the trip when you went both ways?
3 A Yes, sir, I did.
4 Q Where did you leave from when you left down here?
5 A I left from the parking lot of [REDACTED],
6 Jennifer's apartment.
7 Q Where did you go to?
8 A I drove directly to Mike Swaine's residence, parked
9 in the street in front of his house.
10 Q Is that [REDACTED] in Elmhurst?
11 A Yes, sir, it is.
12 Q When you drove up, what speed did you drive?
13 A If I could refer to my report for just a moment?
14 On the way up I drove the speed limit, sir, the entire way.
15 Q How long did it take you to get from Jennifer's
16 apartment to Mr. Swaine's house?
17 A Once again referring to my report, the trip took two 18 hours and five minutes to complete one way.
19 Q Did you go to York High School after you got to his 20 house?
21 A Yes, sir, I did.
22 Q Did you drive that or walk that?
23 A I walked that distance, sir.
24 Q How long did that take?

C09617

1           A     Once again referring to my report, I left my vehicle
2 at 12:20 P.M. and arrived at the school on foot
3 at 12:33 P.M. It was a .8 mile walk. It took 13 minutes.
4           Q     While at the school, did you obtain employment
5 records regarding Mr. Swaine's employment that week of August 6 23rd?
7           A     Not particular at York High School, sir. I was sent 8 to a different school to obtain those records.
9           Q     Those were basically similar and identical to the 10 ones that we saw here in court from Virginia Betteridge?
11          A     Yes, sir, they were.
12          Q     On the way back, where did you leave from?
13          A     On the way back I left from Swaine's residence where 14 I had originally left my car parked when I walked to the 15 school.
16          Q     Where did you go back to?
17          A     I went directly back to Jennifer's apartment at 18 ■■■ ■■■ ■■■.
19          Q     What speed did you maintain on the trip back?
20          A     On the return trip, I tried to average around five 21 to ten miles over the posted speed limit for the entire trip.
22          Q     How long did the trip back take?
23          A     The trip back, according to my report, took one
24 hour, 51 minutes.

1 Q Now at that point in time, had you obtained some 2 phone records which indicated the 7:17 P.M. call on August the 3 25th by Mr. Swaine?

4 A Yes, sir, I had.

5 Q Is that the same one that we heard the answering
6 machine tape during his testimony?

7 A Yes, sir, it is.

8 Q For the record, People's Exhibit 5-A, the original
9 answering machine tape, is that the tape that was recovered
10 from Jennifer's apartment?

11 A Yes, sir, that is the original tape recovered from 12 her apartment.

13 Q And I believe we had some testimony perhaps from 14 Dean Kennedy that he released that to some member of your 15 department?

16 A Yes, sir, I believe he released that to Dave Warner, 17 Detective Dave Warner.

18 Q Did Detective Warner give it to you, and did you do
19 a lot of work with that tape?

20 A Yes, sir. Basically we had a transcript made of 21 that tape, and I was working off of the transcript.

22 Q We've heard a number of excerpts from that tape
23 regarding witnesses; Claudine Moss, Morgan Keefe, Lori Itano,
24 Mike Swaine, and Stacey Gates, and their testimony in court?

1           A    Yes, sir.

2           Q    Those were grouped together in an edited tape,
3 People's Exhibit No. 5?

4           A    That's correct. For convenience sake, we put all
5 the calls from one individual all together so we didn't have 6 to waste the court's time.

7           Q    The tapes that we heard were not all of the messages
8 on the recorder, were they?

9           A    No, sir, they certainly weren't.

10          Q    Were the ones that we heard here in court, were the 11 ones that you pulled out for witnesses that were going to be 12 testifying and that you thought were relevant to the 13 investigation?

14          A    Yes, sir, they were.

15          Q    The other messages that were on there, were there
16 some where there was actual messages and some were basically
17 like a hang-up type call?

18          A    Yes, there were calls where all you would hear would 19 be the dial tone, then you would hear a busy signal, things of 20 that nature.

21          Q    And at some point in time in working with the 22 transcript and the phone records, did you basically match up
23 the transcript to help prepare the phone stipulations that we 24 have in regards to the answering machine?

1           A     Yes, sir, on several of the messages left on the 2 answering machine, someone would call and state who they were,
3 possibly even state a time they were calling. For instance,
4 Mrs. Lockmiller stated she called at 12:29. Stacey Gates
5 stated he called at such a time. By taking the phone records
6 we were able to match up which call was which. Also by 7 listening to the actual tape and listening to the length of 8 the message, you could make a rough estimate as far as how 9 long the message would take. And all the raw phone records
10 again showed how long the phone calls lasted. So by doing
11 that and matching up which call came which we were pretty much 12 able to verify when calls came, where they came from, and 13 exactly what time they came in due to the phone messages and 14 the transcript of the answering machine.

15           Q     Have we now, through the prior witnesses; Claudine
16 Moss, Morgan Keefe, Lori Itano, Mike Swaine, and Stacey Gates
17 heard at one time or another all the messages that you
18 discovered on that answering machine tape that you considered
19 relevant to this investigation?

20           A     Yes, sir, I believe we have.

21           Q     Now there was some prior testimony from Mr. Dierker 22 about additional prints that he obtained from Mr. Beaman at 23 some point in time. Did you have anything to do with that?

24           A     Yes, sir, I did.

Q And what did you have to do with that?

A Well, I contacted Mr. Beaman and asked if he would be willing to accompany me to Morton so that John Dierker could take the fingerprints that he needed. This is something that I've never done, taking the additional prints that Mr. Dierker needed, and I didn't know exactly what he needed. So I asked him if he would be willing to do it at the Morton Crime Lab. I called Alan and asked if he would accompany me. He stated he would. So I made arrangements for that trip.

Q As a preliminary to that trip, were any efforts made to obtain an overhear order to record any conversations you and Mr. Beaman might have that day?

A Yes, they were. We were looking at about a 45-minute drive from Normal to Morton, and I thought that might be a good opportunity to try to engage Mr. Beaman in some conversation. And once again so we could accurately record what was said, I tried to get an overhear order for that trip.

Q And was one granted?

A Yes, sir, it was, the same procedure as before.

Q And did you, in fact, get the equipment on and proceed to Morton with Mr. Beaman on that day?

A Yes, sir, I did with the assistance of the Illinois State Police tech services crew.

1 Q On that day, did you remind him or read him his
2 rights again?
3 A Yes, sir, I did. When I picked him up at his 4 apartment at Wallis Hall I told him, I said, "Alan," I'm 5 paraphrasing, but I mentioned, "Alan, you're not under arrest,
6 but by the same token, you can't get out of the car at 55
7 miles an hour. Therefore, I want to advise you of your 8 Miranda Rights again." And I advised him of his Miranda
9 Rights.
10 Q And did he basically have a conversation with you
11 most of the way over and most of the way back?
12 A Yes, sir, he did.
13 Q Have you prepared for court a tape and transcript on 14 slides again that contains portions of that conversation that 15 are relevant to the issues in this investigation?
16 A Yes, sir, I have.
17 Q And would that be the tape, People's Exhibit No. 78-
18 B, and slides starting with People's Exhibit No. 69-J?
19 A Yes, sir. We started out talking basically about 20 his home life and his family, and then progressed on to his 21 relationship with Jennifer.
22 Q So there was actually much in the conversation that 23 was general conversation and didn't really relate to the 24 investigation?

C09623

1           A    Yes, sir. I certainly wasn't going to come right
2 out and begin talking about the relationship, so I eased into 3 it by talking about his family.

4           MR. SOUK: If we may play the tape, People's 78-B now,
5 and show the slides?

6           THE COURT: Any objection, Mr. Beu?

7           MR. BEU: No.

17           Q    (By Mr. Souk) Detective Freesmeyer, have you 18 just listened here in court to the tape recording of People's 19 Exhibit 78-B?

20           A    Yes, sir, I have.

21           Q    Was that an accurate tape recording of certain 22 portions of your conversation with Mr. Beaman on February the 23 16th of 1994?

24           A    Yes, sir, it was.

866

CG9624

AB017863

APPENDIX 003047

1 Q Now the quality of that tape recording was not as
2 good as the prior one that we have heard, correct?

3 A Yes, that's correct.

4 Q Is that because most of that is while you're driving
5 in a vehicle?

6 A Yes, sir. That was in the winter months I believe.
7 I was wearing a leather coat over the top of both microphones
8 which are strapped over my shoulders, plus we were in a moving 9 vehicle with the road noise behind it, so it was very hard to 10 hear.

11 Q And the transcripts of those portions of the tape, 12 or the portions of the conversations that are on 78-B, which 13 was slide 69-J through 69-FF, did you prepare those slides
14 based on the transcripts that had been prepared and then 15 checked by you for accuracy?

16 A Yes, sir, I did.

17 Q And when you were checking those transcripts for 18 accuracy were you able, out of court, to perhaps hear a little 19 better some of the softer portions, especially of what Mr.
20 Beaman was saying?

21 A Yes, sir, I was using a dictation machine. I had an 22 earplug in my ear, and it's a little bit clearer than it is on 23 a box trying to make it louder.

THE COURT: All right, ladies and gentlemen, we're going to be in recess now until nine o'clock tomorrow morning. We will follow the same procedure that we did last evening, and that is that I'm going to give the jury an opportunity to depart before I release the rest of the individuals in the courtroom. If you would please leave your notebooks on your chairs, they will be collected by the bailiffs and secured during the evening, and you are to report back at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. JURY TRIAL CONTINUED

PRESENT - SAME AS BEFORE

THE COURT: All right, this is 94-CF-476, People vs. Alan W. Beaman. People appear by assistant state's attorneys, James Souk and Teri Dimmick. Defendant appears in person and by attorney, William Beu. This case is scheduled for a continued jury trial.

Mr. Souk and Mr. Beu, are you ready to proceed?

MR. SOUK: Yes.

MR. BEU: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, the jury will be brought back into the courtroom.

(WHEREUPON THE JURY ENTERED THE COURTROOM

AND THE FOLLOWING WAS HAD:)

THE COURT: All right, for the record, the jury has now returned to open court. I'll ask the bailiff if a daily juror affidavit has been signed by the jury. The court has now been tendered and will file a daily juror affidavit.

Mr. Souk, are you ready to proceed with further evidence?

C09629

1 MR. SOUK: Yes, your Honor. We recall Detective
2 Freesmeyer.

3 THE COURT: Would you be resworn again?

5 TIMOTHY FREESMEYER,

6 recalled as a witness herein on behalf of the People, having 7 been first duly sworn on his oath, was examined and testified
8 as follows, to-wit:

10 CONTINUED DIRECT EXAMINATION

11
12 BY MR. SOUK:

13
14 Q Would you state your name again for the record?

15 A Timothy John Freesmeyer.

16 Q And are you the same Timothy Freesmeyer who 17 testified yesterday?

18 A Yes, sir, I am.

19 Q A couple of preliminary matters, Detective
20 Freesmeyer. First, while obviously you're testifying about 21 extensive matters that you did in this investigation, were 22 other officers, not just Detective Daniels and Hospelhorn and 23 Lt. Brown, but other officers of the Normal Police Department
24 involved, especially in the early stages of this investigation

871

C09630

C09631

AB018133

APPENDIX 003054

1 doing substantial amounts of work and interviews?

2 A Yes, sir, there were quite a few people involved.

3 Q Were there a number of people interviewed in 4 connection with this investigation who have not appeared here
5 as witnesses here in court?

6 A Yes, quite a few.

7 Q And would it be ballpark accurate to say that 8 probably several thousand pages worth of documents and 9 interviews and so forth have been produced as you have 10 proceeded with this investigation, correct?

11 A Yes, sir. I believe as it stands now, there's about 12 five or six binders this thick full for the case.

13 Q Another preliminary matter, you mentioned about 14 subpoenaing phone records and that there's some stipulations
15 that are prepared that are going to be presented at a later
16 time. I want to ask you in terms of interpreting those, there
17 are some phone records that are going to appear on there with 18 either the origination or the destination of them simply 19 saying trunc call.

20 A Yes, that's correct.

21 Q Would you tell us what that means?

22 A Yes, it would appear in the origination section.

23 A trunc -- it's spelled T-R-U-N-C -- it's short for truncated
24 call. What that means is a long distance call coming into a

1 residence where they're unable to tell where that call came 2 from when you ask for phone records of all incoming and 3 outgoing calls through the long distance billing. But 4 incoming calls basically you're searching for any calls
5 throughout a wide area that are coming into one number. That 6 might be carried by AT & T long distance, by SPRINT, by MCI,
7 by a number of different companies, and therefore you have to 8 check all those companies. They will check all those records
9 and find something terminating at that destination that you're 10 looking for. Some of those were unable to be found obviously 11 because of the enormous search that had to be done. So in the 12 phone records, you'll see some parts where it will say trunc,
13 and those were long distance calls we weren't able to find.

14 Q You knew they came in, but you just didn't know the 15 origin of them?

16 A That's correct, we did not know the caller. We knew 17 what time they came in.

18 Q I believe, getting back to yesterday, call your 19 attention to February 21st of 1994, and ask you if you had 20 occasion to interview Jeannie Sieg on that date?

21 A Yes, sir, I did.

22 Q And prior to your interview with her, had she 23 previously been interviewed by another officer at the 24 department sometime before that?

C09633

1 A Yes, she had.

2 Q On the day that she came in to talk with you on
3 February 21st, did she make you aware of an additional item
4 that she thought she ought to tell you about?

5 A Yes, she did, sir.

6 Q Was that particular item that she mentioned --

7 MR. BEU: May we approach, your Honor?

8 THE COURT: You may.

10 (WHEREUPON A DISCUSSION WAS HAD AT

11 THE BENCH AS FOLLOWS:)

13 MR. BEU: Unless this is more than some prior consistent
14 statement that's otherwise relevant, your Honor, I think it 15 would be an improper consistent statement of a witness who has 16 testified already.

17 THE COURT: What is it?

18 MR. SOUK: I'm not offering it as a prior consistent 19 statement. I'm only offering it to show what information he 20 got from Jeannie Sieg that day that he thereafter, in his next 21 conversation with Mr. Beaman, asked Mr. Beaman a question to 22 verify the information he had gotten from Miss Sieg.

MR. SOUK: As to when the defendant knew that Mike Swaine was living there. That he didn't know until after her death.

THE COURT: And that would explain why he then took the action that he took in asking the additional question of Mr. Beaman?

MR. SOUK: Right.

THE COURT: Is that correct?

MR. SOUK: He got Mr. Beaman to confirm that.

THE COURT: Are you intending to offer that testimony then for the limited purpose of showing why the officer did what he did?

MR. SOUK: Right.

THE COURT: And for no other purpose, not for the truth of the matter asserted?

MR. SOUK: Right, Miss Sieg has already testified.

THE COURT: Bolster her testimony?

MR. SOUK: Bolster her testimony.

THE COURT: I think for the limited purpose it would explain why the officer did what he did.

(WHEREUPON THE FOLLOWING PROCEEDINGS WERE HAD IN THE JURY'S PRESENCE:)

THE COURT: All right, proceed, Mr. Souk.

C09635

1 Q (By Mr. Souk) What was the item that you recall
2 that she told you about that day?

3 A Sir, referring to my report, Jennifer stated while
4 talking with Alan before break, December, 1992 or December,
5 1993, he told her that he didn't know Swaine was living with 6 Jennifer until the detective told him about it while
7 investigating Jennifer's death.

8 Q First, let me ask you if during the course of this 9 investigation in any of your contacts, either in person or on 10 the phone which you actually talked or communicated with Mr.
11 Beaman in any way, whether you ever told Mr. Beaman that Mike
12 Swaine had been living with Jennifer?

13 A No, sir, I did not.

14 Q The contacts that Lt. Brown had with this case in 15 terms of having personal contact with the defendant, were 16 those all in your presence?

17 A Yes, they were.

18 Q Did Lt. Brown ever tell him that?

19 A No, sir, to my knowledge, he never did.

20 Q From your knowledge of the investigation, are you
21 aware from any reports or any sources that any detective ever
22 told Mr. Beaman that?

23 A No, sir. The only contact any other detective, 24 other than myself, would have had with Mr. Beaman would be

1 Detectives Daniels and Hospelhorn while in Rockford. Every
2 interview and every contact with Mr. Beaman since that time I
3 conducted myself or was present while Lt. Brown had conducted
4 the interview.

5 Q On February the 24th of 1994, did you have occasion
6 on that day to get some evidence from Detective Daniels that 7 he had been keeping?

8 A Yes, sir, I did.

9 Q And what was that?

10 A That was three bags of trash that were removed from 11 the apartment, [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED], shortly after the body was 12 discovered.

13 Q Show you People's Exhibits 55, 56, and 57, and 14 without opening the bags, can you identify those from the 15 markings on the outside?

16 A Yes, sir, I can. All three are marked -- two are 17 marked trash, one is marked plastic bag with contents. This 18 again is the evidence receipt that we normally would use at 19 that time at the Normal Police Department, and on the bottom, 20 submitting officer number 694, that's my officer's number.

21 Q When you received those, were the bags sealed or did
22 you seal them?

23 A When I received them, I placed them in the paper
24 bag, sealed them with my initials on each one of the tapes,

1 and put the evidence card on the outside.

2 Q Did you then submit them to the lab for Mr. Dierker
3 to do some fingerprint work on them?

4 A Yes, sir, I believe I did.

5 Q On March 9th of 1994, did you have occasion to have 6 another conversation with Mr. Beaman on that date?

7 A Yes, sir, I did at his residence at [REDACTED] [REDACTED].

8 Q Did you have an overheard done on that occasion?

9 A No, sir, I don't believe I did.

10 Q Was this another occasion in which there was no tape
11 recording at all?

12 A That is correct, sir.

13 Q You made a report and included it in your reports?

14 A Yes, I did.

15 Q During that conversation, did you ask Mr. Beaman
16 about that item of information that Miss Sieg had brought to 17 your attention shortly before that?

18 A Yes, I believe I did. I wanted to confirm what she 19 had told me and see if I could get it from Alan himself.

20 Q Would you tell us what you asked him and what his 21 response was at that time?

22 A Yes, sir. Once again I'll refer to my report. I
23 then asked Alan when he first found out that Michael Swaine
24 was living with Jennifer, and he stated he didn't know until

Jennifer was already dead.

Q Did you, during that conversation, again ask him if he had anything else he could provide the investigation?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q What was his response?

A Once again, sir, I'll refer to my reports. I asked Alan if there was anything else he could add, and he stated that he had told me everything. After explaining the process of what we were getting into, Alan responded by saying, "Bring it on, I've told you everything I know."

Q Was that your last conversation with Mr. Beaman prior to his arrest?

A Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Q On May the 17th of 1994, did you arrest Mr. Beaman on that day for the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Did he go through the normal booking process that day?

A Yes, sir, he did.

Q Was a photograph taken in the course of doing that booking then?

A Yes, it was. A photograph was taken at the county jail.

Q Do you recall looking at The Pantagraph the next day

C09639

1 after the arrest?
2 A Yes, sir, I do.
3 Q And was Mr. Beaman's picture in the paper?
4 A Yes, it was, front page.
5 Q Was it -- what photograph was used for that?
6 A It was the booking photograph from the county jail.
7 Q I show you People's Exhibit No. 65, and ask you if 8 that's the photograph you're referring to?
9 A Yes, sir, it is. This is the one I collected from 10 the records section of the county jail.
11 Q On May the 18th of 1994, were you personally present
12 when -- when the defendant's parents, Barry and Carol Beaman,
13 were interviewed?
14 A No, sir, I was not.
15 Q Were you made aware by Detective Daniels or Lt.
16 Brown about information received during that interview?
17 A Yes, sir, I was made aware after the interview had 18 concluded.
19 Q Specifically were you made aware, at that time, of 20 the existence of a Sears receipt showing mileage on Mr.
21 Beaman's Ford Escort as of Tuesday night, August the 24th?
22 A Yes, sir, that was one piece of information that was 23 forwarded to me.
24 Q And were you also made aware that the Beamans apparently had a photograph showing the odometer reading on the 1st of September of 1993?

A Yes, sir, I was told about it. I did not see the picture myself.

Q Later on in the investigation, did you see those items?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Was -- when you learned that from Detective Daniels, was that the first time in this investigation that you became aware of the existence of such evidence?

A Yes, sir, that was the first time I'd heard of any photograph taken of the odometer shortly after the interview.

Q After receiving that initial evidence, did you begin in the investigation to make some more precise measurements as to times, and distances, and mileage, and that sort of thing?

A Within the City of Rockford and to and from Rockford, yes, sir, I did.

Q Prior to that time, you'd driven to Rockford several times during the investigation, correct?

A Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q And so had some other detectives involved in the investigation. Is that correct?

A Yes, sir, I believe Lt. Brown accompanied me a few times.

1 Q Up until that point in time of May 18th of 1994,
2 would it, I suppose, be accurate to say that your measurements
3 of driving time and so forth would have been somewhat --
4 somewhat rough up until that point?

5 A Yes, they had.

6 Q Had Detective Daniels also made you aware, or by 7 reading the transcript of the interview of the Beamans, did
8 you also learn that Mrs. Beaman had indicated that she was 9 home that day at about 2:30 to three o'clock?

10 A Yes, sir.

11 Q After learning that at that time, on or shortly
12 after May 18th of 1994, was that the first time in the 13 investigation that you had learned that anyone might be able 14 to verify the presence of the defendant earlier than the times
15 that he had been giving you all winter basically?

16 A Yes, sir, through my numerous contacts with him he 17 continued to state around four or five o'clock for his mother
18 getting home. Overhears he would say fourish for her arrival.
19 This is the first time I heard anytime prior to that,
20 specifically 2:30 or three o'clock.

21 Q I want to call your attention to June the 22nd of 22 1994. I believe 206 of your report.

23 A Yes, sir.

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Did you do some mileage and time measurements on the trip going up and the trip coming back?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And would you tell us about the trip up, where you left from and where you went to in Rockford?

A Yes, sir. Once again referring to my report, sir, I left the driveway of [REDACTED] in Normal at 8:28 A.M. Drove straight to Alan Beaman's house, driving strictly at the posted speed limit. I arrived at Alan's house at 10:45 A.M., making the trip in two hours and 17 minutes.

Q And did you measure the mileage on your odometer?

A Yes, I did. Total mileage from [REDACTED] to Alan Beaman's residence was 139.7 miles.

Q Was that the [REDACTED] residence that's previously been mentioned here in court?

A [REDACTED].

Q The road to Rockford, could you tell us what that route is and what route you traveled, and what type of roadway it is?

A Yes, sir. Jennifer's apartment is on [REDACTED]. That is a four-lane road. It's two lanes going either direction. It's the main road to the City of Normal. I got onto Main Street, which is actually Route 51, took that

C09643

1 north directly out of town until I connected up with I-39.
2 Then got on I-39, which is an Illinois interstate. Traveled
3 all the way up to Rockford. When I-39 got into Rockford, I
4 took I-20 around Rockford. I-20 is also a four-lane highway,
5 state route. I took that all the way to Meridian Road.
6 Meridian Road is just outside of Rockford. It's kind of a
7 rural road. I believe it has a posted speed limit of 45 or 8 55. I'm not sure exactly. I then turned north on Meridian
9 Road. I believe I went up through two stop lights, a stop
10 light and stop sign. Continued traveling north, and in a 11 rural area outside of the town until I came to [REDACTED].
12 Meridian Road is a county road. [REDACTED] [REDACTED] seems to be a 13 rural subdivision street. I then turned right onto [REDACTED] and 14 proceeded onto [REDACTED].

15 Q You don't -- in going directly to the Beaman
16 residence, you don't have to drive through, if you will, the 17 more populated areas within the city limits of Rockford?

18 A No, sir. I take 39 to State 20, bypassing all the 19 way around to Meridian Road, and straight north to [REDACTED].
20 You do not go through Rockford.

21 Q The town driving you would have to do would be the 22 little bit of town driving here in Normal to go north on Main
23 Street til you got to 39?

24 A Yes, sir, roughly about three miles.

1 Q Before we go all through all the routes that you
2 measured while you were there that day, let's just cover your
3 trip back. Would you tell us about your trip back?

4 A Yes, sir, and again I'll refer to my report. We
5 left Bell Federal Bank at 4:43 P.M., drove straight to Normal
6 observing the speed limit. We arrived at [REDACTED] at 6:44
7 P.M. We made one stop along the way which consumed seven
8 minutes. The return trip, therefore, took one hour and 54
9 minutes. The total mileage from Bell Federal to [REDACTED]
10 was 126.7 miles.

11 Q And on the Rockford end of this trip, could you tell
12 us where Bell Federal is located?

13 A Yes, sir. Bell Federal is located at the corner of 14 Alpine and Newberg Road in Rockford. It's again roughly 3.6
15 miles north of State Route 20 off of Alpine Road. If you pull 16 out of the parking lot of Bell Federal onto Newberg, make a 17 left onto Alpine, take that street south until you hit 20. As 18 you get onto Interstate-20, you stay in the right lane, and 19 you exit immediately onto Route 39 headed directly to Normal.

20 Q On that portion of that trip from Bell Federal until 21 you get to 20, is that in-town driving in Rockford?

22 A Yes, sir, it is. That's a two-lane road going
23 either direction. Alpine is a very busy street, seems to me
24 anyway in my travels in Rockford.

1 Q Alpine is one of the major north-south roads within
2 the City of Rockford?

3 A With my limited knowledge of Rockford, I would say,
4 yes, sir.

5 Q While you were in Rockford that day, did you do some 6 mileage measurements of various routes within the City of 7 Rockford?

8 A Yes, sir, I spent the majority of the day there
9 driving intercity routes.

10 Q Prior to doing that, had you reviewed all of the 11 various statements that Mr. Beaman had given to law
12 enforcement at anytime during this case?

13 A Yes, sir. After he had repeatedly told me he had 14 given me everything, I reviewed all of the reports and looked 15 for intercity driving that would have accounted for miles on 16 his odometer. I took all of those intercity drivings, 17 combined them into what route I would need to cover in 18 Rockford to account for what mileage should be on his 19 odometer.

20 Q Have you, to help us understand that evidence in 21 court, prepared some -- some slides that will show those 22 perhaps a little more graphically than just the driving?

23 A Yes, sir, I have.

24 MR. SOUK: With the court's permission, I would like to

1 show some slides. Could we have the lights, please?

2 A I'll need to progress the carousel a little bit.

3 MR. SOUK: Can he get down?

4 THE COURT: Yes.

5 A Thank you, sir.

7 (WHEREUPON A BRIEF INTERRUPTION WAS HAD.)

9 Q (By Mr. Souk) The first slide that we're looking 10 at, People's Exhibit 70-AX, could you tell us what's depicted
11 on this slide, detective?

12 A Yes, sir. What this is basically, a blow-up of a 13 picture of Rockford out of a road atlas. Over the top of that 14 I've done an overlay on the computer which shows the route in 15 yellow that Alan would have taken from Bell Federal Bank to 16 his residence in Rockford. You see Bell Federal in the lower 17 right, his residence, [REDACTED], upper left.

18 Q Did you measure either the mileage or the time that 19 it takes to make this trip?

20 A Yes, sir, I believe I measured both, if I'm not 21 mistaken. I know I measured the time for sure.

22 Q If you need to refer to your report, would you give 23 us that information?

24 A Yes, I will. I stand corrected, sir. I only

1 measured the time that the drive took. I don't believe I
2 recorded the mileage at that time.

3 Q And how much time did it take you to make that 4 drive?

5 A Again referring to my report, the time required to 6 drive from Alan Beaman's residence to the Bell Federal Bank,
7 observing all speed limits, was 31 minutes.

8 Q Do you recall if this was on a week day?

9 A June 22nd I believe it would have been, sir. At 10 that time I was working Monday through Friday, and I don't 11 believe I would have done this trip on overtime.

12 Q Did you, while you were there -- well, strike that.
13 At that point in time in terms of measuring that distance by 14 time, what was your purpose in doing that in terms of 15 furthering the investigation?

16 A According to the phone records, there was a call 17 coming out of the Beaman residence at 10:37 and 10:39. We had 18 Alan on video tape at the bank at 11 minutes after ten. By 19 driving that distance I wanted to see if it was possible for 20 Alan to make it home to make that first phone call at 10:37
21 A.M. If he left the bank at 11 minutes after ten, made the 31
22 minute drive, it would put him home at 10:42.

23 Q And up until that point in the investigation in your 24 interviews with Mr. Beaman, had he ever indicated that he had 888

C09648

AB018150

APPENDIX 003071

1 made any phone calls or had any phone contact with anyone once
2 he got home that day?

3 A No, sir, he didn't. While interviewing outside of 4 McPherson Hall I asked him specifically, "Did you make any 5 phone calls?" And he stated, "No."

6 Q After measuring that distance, did you then measure
7 a number of other distances within the Rockford area as you
8 have previously indicated?

9 A Yes, sir, I did.

10 Q Did you prepare a slide -- several slides to help
11 present that evidence?

12 A Yes, sir, I have.

13 Q Could we have the next slide? Now would you tell us
14 what's depicted on this particular slide?

15 A Yes, sir. Once again this is the same background
16 format on the computer, the City of Rockford. The red dots
17 that you're seeing appearing on the screen are different 18 locations that he reported to have been during the time that 19 he had the tires changed on his car to the time that they took 20 the photographs of the car on that Sunday. The red box that 21 you see on top is basically an index to tell you what each red 22 dot is and what that location corresponds to.

23 Q And for the record, that's People's Exhibit No. 70-
24 EX. Once again, the (A) up in the corner is the Beaman

1 residence, correct?

2 A Yes, sir, it is.

3 Q And then all the other locations are as listed

4 there, correct?

5 A That is correct, sir.

6 Q Did you also prepare a slide that basically

7 summarizes the various trips that you made based on his

8 statements and mileage that you recorded?

9 A Yes, sir, I did.

10 Q Could we see that slide please? For the record,

11 that's People's 70-FX. The list you have there contains what 12 appears to be, oh, 20 or more different -- different trips,

13 correct?

14 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

15 Q And it starts at the top with an origination of 16 Sears to the Beaman residence, correct?

17 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

18 Q And what trip is that supposed to start with?

19 A That starts when he had the tires changed at Cherry

20 Vale Mall at the Sears store, and then returned home with his 21 parents -- or following his parents.

22 Q And what trips -- at the bottom, you've got two

23 trips; Beaman residence to Christ United Church, and then

those?

A I believe those would have been Sunday morning before he went to church before the picture was taken of the odometer.

Q That would be the August 29th church attendance?

A Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q All of the ones in between, without going through each and every one of them, are each of those a -- a route with the note of origination and destination that was given by Mr. Beaman, himself, at some time during the statements that he had given to either you or Detective Daniels?

A Yes, sir, this is my best attempt from anything that I could get through the reports of his itinerary for those specific dates. You'll notice on the right the destination will be the same place as the next column down as the origination. For instance, Sears to Beaman residence, then Beaman residence to Dave Olson's, and Dave Olson's to Sandy Hollow, and so on and so forth.

Q At the bottom, you have that totaled up at 206.5 miles. Is that correct?

A Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q And is that figure, 206.5 miles, basically the total distance that you got driving everywhere that you had reason to believe that Mr. Beaman had been between getting his tires

C09651

1 -- from the time he got his tires changed on Tuesday night
2 until Sunday morning after he went to church?

3 A Yes, sir, that's my best estimate.

4 Q Did you -- I'm not sure of the date, but did you, at 5 a later date, recheck your mileages and drive all those one
6 more time?

7 A Yes, sir, I believe I drove those at least twice, if 8 not three times.

9 Q And when you -- when you redrove it, how close were 10 you to the 206.5?

11 A I was very close. My first estimate was around 197,
12 I believe. The second estimate was around 198, or 199. I
13 then found out I had one distance that was incorrect. The 14 Beaman residence to Cafe Esperanto I had 2.6 instead of 8.2
15 miles. So I went back and corrected that. I came up with an 16 average of approximately 206.5 miles.

17 Q So you're saying, looking in your report we'd see a 18 hundred and ninety there, but you discovered you made one
19 error in arithmetic?

20 A That's correct, and I believe it's reflected in my 21 narrative on page 60 that I wrote after I did that last check.

22 Q I want to call your attention in particular to the 23 Sandy Hollow IGA/the Beaman residence, where it shows 13.8

A Yes, sir.

Q Is that the store that Mr. Beaman had indicated he was working at during the week of August 23rd?

A Yes, that is correct.

Q Did you prepare another slide, which I think you may have passed by a moment ago, that indicated the route from there to his -- to his home and back to the bank?

A Yes, I did.

Q Could we see that slide please? For the record, this is People's 70-DX. What's depicted on that slide, Detective Freesmeyer?

A That's the route depicted from Sandy Hollow store to the Beaman residence at [REDACTED], then back to the Bell Federal Bank. I'm afraid I failed to label the Sandy Hollow store. I would be happy to point that out if you'd like me to.

Q Perhaps you better do that. May he step down?

THE COURT: He may.

A Sir, the Sandy Hollow store would be located right here at 11th and Sandy Hollow. Just go right up onto State 20, all the way out Meridian Road north to [REDACTED] and then this is the route I showed earlier going through Rockford back to Bell Federal Bank.

Q (By Mr. Souk) Okay. That's the same route that you

1 previously said took you 31 minutes to drive?

2 A That is correct, sir.

3 Q I know you indicated you measured the distance of 4 Sandy Hollow to [REDACTED]. Did you time that on any of your 5 trips?

6 A I don't recall if I did or not. It's in my report.
7 I don't believe I did.

8 Q Based on all the driving that you did around 9 Rockford, can you estimate about how long it would take to get 10 on that route from the store to Mr. Beaman's home?

11 A I would estimate probably 20, maybe 25 minutes.

12 Q Did you measure the distance or the time from the 13 Sandy Hollow store to go directly to the Bell Federal Bank
14 facility?

15 A From Sandy Hollow to Bell Federal?

16 Q Yes.

17 A I believe I would have, if I could look at my 18 report.

19 Q Okay, if you would do that.

20 A That I'm not finding in my report. It might be on 21 the listing that I showed on the slide earlier. If I could go
22 to that slide, I could check that for you.

23 Q Sure, if you could.

24 A Yes. The third one down lists Sandy Hollow IGA/Bell

1 Federal Savings, 4.6 miles.

2 Q And based on your driving in Rockford, approximately 3 how long would it take to make that trip?

4 A I would guess probably about seven minutes.

5 MR. SOUK: Okay, thank you. I think we can have the 6 lights on now.

7 Q (By Mr. Souk) Shortly after that Rockford trip,
8 sometime the next several days after that, did you have 9 occasion to talk to Mrs. Carol Beaman on the telephone?

10 A Yes, sir, I did.

11 Q And did she make you aware, at that time, of some 12 additional evidence that she felt was relevant to the 13 investigation?

14 A Yes, she did.

15 Q What did she tell you?

16 A She told me that she had found a store receipt from 17 her brother's store, Gray's IGA, showing a checkout time on 18 August 25th of 1993 of 14:03, which would relate to 2:03 P.M., 19 three minutes after two.

20 Q And did she tell you, in that conversation, make any 21 change in when she said that she thought she was home?

22 A Yes, she said based on that receipt, she would say
23 that she was home at 2:15 P.M. approximately.

24 Q Was that phone call the first time in the

C09655

1 investigation that you became aware of an IGA receipt, or any
2 other receipts connected with this investigation?

3 A Yes, sir. Once again, after asking numerous times
4 if Mr. Beaman had anything else, this was the first time I was 5 made aware of an IGA receipt on that day.

6 Q Right about that same time, I think maybe June 24th,
7 did you have occasion to interview Mr. Heyse, who previously
8 testified here in court?

9 A Yes, sir, I did.

10 Q Prior to taking a formal statement from him, had you
11 talked with him previously at all on the phone?

12 A Yes, I had.

13 Q And how long before had you talked with him?

14 A I can't recall exactly. I don't believe I
15 documented that anywhere, but that was a rather busy month as 16 I recall. Could have been a week, could have been two weeks,
17 I don't recall exactly.

18 Q You basically had him make an appointment and come
19 in sometime later?

20 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

21 Q On June the 27th of 1994, did you have occasion to 22 go to Rockford again?

23 A Yes, sir, I did.

24 Q And was that the second occasion that you drove the mileages that you have just testified about?

A Yes, sir, I believe it is.

Q Did you also, on that day, have occasion to go to Independence Village, a retirement home there?

A Yes, sir, I did, located on North Alpine Road.

Q What was your purpose in going there?

A That was the residence where Alan Beaman's grandmother lives, Chris Gray. According to Mrs. Beaman's testimony earlier I believe to Detective Daniels, she stated that she picked up her mother that morning for a doctor's appointment, went to the doctor, dropped her off, and then did some other shopping. I was attempting to find out if Mrs. Gray remembered anything about that day and that trip to the doctor's office.

Q And you were able to obtain a log from there which is now the subject of a stipulation that basically indicated that ten o'clock drop-off time, right?

A Yes, sir. While I was there, I noticed there was a sign-in log, and I was able to obtain a copy of that sign-in log.

Q I want to call your attention now to June the 30th of 1994, and ask you if you had occasion to be present in this building when some grand jury proceedings were held in connection with this case.

A Yes, sir, I was.

Q And prior to and perhaps subsequent to the testimony of Carol and Barry Beaman at that grand jury proceeding, did you have occasion to be provided some receipts and documentary evidence in connection with this case?

A Yes, sir, I believe I issued a subpoena for documents to the Beamans for the IGA store receipt and checks, a canceled check that would back that up.

Q During the Beamans -- or Mrs. Beaman's testimony before the grand jury that day, was the investigation made aware of for the first time of some receipts relating to Wal-Mart and Union Hall?

A Yes, sir, once again more receipts were produced for the first time.

Q And were that day also some notes that Mrs. Beaman had made the week after the murder also produced?

A Yes, they were.

Q I show you first People's Exhibit No. 52, and ask you what that document is?

A People's Exhibit 52 is a receipt from the Sears store, 200 Harrison, Rockford, Illinois. It's printed in the name of Barry Beaman, and it appears to be a receipt for two Super Guard 40 tires, along with some other items.

Q Is that the so-called Sears receipt that's been referred to now in this trial?

A Yes, sir, it is.

Q And is that the receipt that shows the Tuesday night mileage on the Ford Escort?

A Yes, it does.

Q And what is that mileage figure?

A 77,479.

Q And is there also, if you turn it over on the back, is there a notation made there in handwriting?

A Yes, sir, there is.

Q And is that a notation Mrs. Beaman had previously indicated she made?

A I believe so, yes, sir.

Q And what is that notation?

A That note says, "77,801 on 8/30/93."

Q Now the photograph that was eventually produced regarding the odometer mileage shown with a newspaper on September the 1st had ten more miles on it than that, did it not?

A I believe so, yes, sir.

Q Okay, and -- well, strike that. And People's Exhibit 52 appears to be the original of that receipt, or at least the original copy that the Beamans would have gotten?

A Yes, sir, it does.

C09659

1 Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 52-A and ask you if
2 you recognize that item?

3 A Yes, sir, I do. People's Exhibit 52-A is a store
4 receipt from the Gray's IGA at 3214 Auburn Road, dated August
5 25, 1993, with a checkout time at the bottom of 14:03.

6 Q And People's Exhibit 53 is what?

7 A People's Exhibit 53 is a check in the account of 8 Barry B. Beaman and Carol G. Beaman, check number 2388,
9 written August 25th, 1993, to Gray's IGA. It's in the amount
10 of $48.25, signed by Carol G. Beaman and endorsed on the back.

11 Q And were those two items provided to you by the 12 Beamans on June 30th of 1994?

13 A Yes, sir, they were.

14 Q I want to show you People's Exhibit 52-B, which is 15 also marked Grand Jury Exhibit 3, and People's Exhibit 52-C
16 which is also marked Grand Jury Exhibit No. 4, and ask you if 17 you recognize those items?

18 A Yes, sir, I do.

19 Q And what are each of those?

20 A 52-B is a photocopy of a Wal-Mart receipt. Once
21 again dated 8-25 of '93 with a time of 11:10 and 34 seconds.
22 People's Exhibit 52-C appears to be a photocopy of a Union
23 Hall receipt from Loves Park dated August 25, 1993, 12:39 P.M.
24 The back page of that appears to be a credit card receipt. I

C09660

1 believe it's Master Card, I'm not sure. 8-25-93, 12:34 P.M.,
2 signed by Carol Beaman in the amount of $26.25.

3 MR. SOUK: Could I have just a moment, your Honor?

4 THE COURT: You may.

5 Q (By Mr. Souk) The receipts, 52-C and 52-B, the 6 Wal-Mart and the Union Hall receipts, after you received
7 those, did you attempt to do any follow-up investigation to 8 see if you could discover any further evidence, video tape or 9 anything like that, that would confirm the arrival or 10 departure of Mrs. Beaman from those facilities on those days?

11 A Yes, sir, I started checking on that immediately.

12 Q First as to Wal-Mart, were you able to obtain any -- 13 any such information?

14 A No, sir. I called the Wal-Mart store and talked to 15 the security person there. I asked if they had any video
16 tapes that would show people coming into the facility or out
17 of the facility at certain times. They stated they did. I
18 asked them how long they kept the tape. They indicated only 19 three weeks or three months. At this time, nine months would 20 have passed and they could not produce any video tapes that 21 would show what time Carol Beaman would have entered or exited
22 the store.

23 Q How about the Union Hall store, what did you find 24 out when you investigated that?

1           A     When I tried to call the Union Hall store, I believe
2 I found that they were closed, and I was no longer able to 3 contact anybody from that store because they were out of 4 business.

5           Q     Now, could you tell us please, how and when in your 6 investigation that you located a bank memo from Bell Federal 7 indicating that Mr. Beu had made an inquiry there on September
8 the 3rd of 1993?

9           A     Yes, sir, I believe it was overheard in a hearing
10 somewhere within this case that Mr. Beu had made contact with 11 the bank checking on his client, or a memo to the bank,
12 something to that effect. Then I was asked by the state's 13 attorney's office to call the bank and see if any contact had 14 been made between Mr. Beu or Alan Beaman and the bank.

15          Q     And they provided you with some information in this 16 regard?

17          A     Yes, sir, they did.

18          Q     That information was not provided to you by the 19 defense?

20          A     No, sir, it was not.

21          Q     Or Mr. and Mrs. Beaman?

22          A     No, sir, it was retrieved from the bank, itself.

23          Q     Now show you People's Exhibit No. 84, and ask you if 24 you recognize that item?

1           A     Yes, sir, I believe these are some of the notes that
2 were provided from Carol Beaman in reference to the activities
3 that occurred the week of August 23rd through August 27th.

4           Q     Okay.     Again were those provided to the 5 investigation on that June 30th date when the grand jury met?

6           A     Yes, sir, I believe they were.

7           Q     And was that the first time that you'd ever seen
8 those?

9           A     Yes, sir, it is.

10          Q     That particular exhibit is a photocopy rather than 11 the original. Is that correct?

12          A     Yes, sir, it is a photocopy.

13          Q     In that particular exhibit, 84, did Mrs. Beaman make 14 any mention of the IGA, Wal-Mart, or Union Hall visit that 15 day?

16          A     I would have to review the exhibit first, sir, to be 17 able to say for certain.

18          Q     If you would do that please.

19          A     Sir, the closest thing that comes to mentioning
20 Union Hall or Wal-Mart was when she states, "After having 21 breakfast I took my mother home and did some shopping before
22 returning home." There's a ". Three P.M., Alan was sound
23 asleep." That's the only mention there is. It does not 24 mention Wal-Mart or Union Hall specifically.

C09663

1 Q Moving ahead now to December 5th of 1994, were you
2 personally present at the inspection of the Ford Escort that's 3 already been testified about extensively here in court?

4 A Yes, sir, I was.

5 Q The inspection that was done that day, did you have 6 occasion to take some photographs?

7 A Yes, sir, I did.

8 Q Okay. And like many of the photographs that have 9 been presented here in court, are those the ones that you
10 took?

11 A Yes, sir, those would all be my photographs.

12 Q Do you remember the defense representative, Dr. Van
13 Etten, being present there that day?

14 A Yes, sir, he met us at the Normal Police Department
15 before we even went out to the vehicle.

16 Q Was he allowed to take any photographs that he 17 wanted to?

18 A Yes, sir, he was. Before we progressed to any 19 stages I asked him if he had done anything he wanted to do,
20 and we then proceeded to the next step. After that, I asked 21 him if he wanted to take anything else, and we proceeded to 22 the next step.

23 Q I'm going to go through these just briefly with you,
24 since we've been through them before. Ask you about People's

1 31-A, does that depict the vehicle before it was towed into 2 town?

3 A Yes, People's 31-A shows where it was sitting in the 4 rural Bloomington area.

5 Q And 31-B?

6 A Yes, 31-B shows the inside of the vehicle. It's 7 missing the radio area. The wires are pulled out where the 8 radio once was.

9 Q It was in that condition when you found it that day?

10 A Yes, sir, it was in that condition.

11 Q The vehicle was towed in, was it not, in an 12 operating condition?

13 A It was towed in on a City of Normal tow truck. We 14 did not actually drive the vehicle that day. We pushed it
15 back until we could get the tow truck hooked onto it.

16 Q Were you informed -- I mean, why was it towed? Were 17 you informed it couldn't be driven?

18 A We were informed, I believe, it had a cracked head
19 on it.

20 Q People's Exhibit 31-C?

21 A Yes, sir, this picture is a picture of the inside of 22 the vehicle as you're looking from the driver's door. You'll 23 see Mr. Kryszak in the right side of the picture with his left 24 hand holding the equipment cluster and his right hand holding the flashlight.

Q Were you viewing this as it was being undone?

A Yes, sir, I was.

Q I guess obviously you were, since you took the picture?

A Yes, sir.

Q Was that your first view of the speedometer cable?

A No, sir, this is not my first view. My first view was from the passenger side. I was doing some other things at that time. I then went back to get my camera, and this would have been the first photograph that I took with the camera.

Q And is 31-D a closer-up view of the cable?

A Yes, I just zoomed in on the cable behind the instrument cluster.

Q 31-E?

A That would have been my first view of the vehicle as I was standing on the passenger side.

Q And 31-F?

A 31-F is a closer view of the speedometer cable tip where it sits in the housing behind the instrument cluster.

Q 31-G?

A This again is even a closer shot with a macro lens going down onto the end of the speedometer cable. The small thing you see inside is a penlight adapter which Walter

C09666

1 Kryszyk was using to light the area, since I was using a macro
2 lens.

3 Q 31-H?

4 A This is a view of the speedometer cable as it plugs
5 into the transmission down on the interior of the engine
6 compartment.

7 Q 31-J -- I'm sorry, I.

8 A This is a speedometer cable that we removed from 9 Alan Beaman's vehicle. After we returned to the Normal Police
10 Department I laid each piece out on the table and photographed
11 those pieces by themselves.

12 Q 31-J?

13 A This photograph was taken at the scene. The part
14 that you see sticking up is the back of the speedometer
15 housing, and this is the cable, how they connect on to each 16 other.

17 Q 31-K?

18 A This is the end of the speedometer cable. It was 19 taken out of Alan Beaman's car, showing the white plastic
20 retaining clip.

21 Q 31-L?

22 A This is the back of the speedometer as it was still 23 in the instrument cluster, just a close-up view using a macro
24 lens once again.

Q 31-M?

A This is a photograph provided to me by Walter Kryszak. I did not take this photograph myself. It shows the speedometer cable taken from Alan Beaman's car with the tip of the replacement inner cable that was put in, and the tip of the new cable which I had purchased in Roscoe, USC-1, placed on a nail to show the comparative size.

Q We'll look at that photo in just a minute. Had you provided the new tip to Mr. Kryszak?

A Yes, sir, I had.

Q All of those photographs truly and accurately represent the car and the cable as you saw it that day, December 5th?

A With the exception of the last photo. That photo was not taken on that day. But the rest of the photos do accurately depict, yes.

Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 62 and ask you if you recognize that item? If you would take it out of there please.

A You want me to remove it, sir?

Q Yes.

A People's Exhibit 62 is the instrument cluster that was taken out of Mr. Beaman's vehicle, the 1987 Ford Escort.

Q And what is the present odometer reading on the --

A The present mileage on this instrument cluster is 83,677 miles.

Q Other than perhaps a little movement of the odometer from the experiments that have been done with the drill, is that the same mileage or very close to the same mileage that would have been on there the day that it was taken out of the car?

A Yes, sir, it would have been. This was taken out of the car, transported to the Normal Police Department by myself, and put into evidence. So there's no reason it should have accrued mileage while it was sitting in evidence.

Q While we're on this topic, let me show you People's Exhibit No. 63. Can you recognize that document?

A Yes, sir, I do.

Q What is that?

A People's Exhibit 63 is an odometer disclosure statement. It was written by Strandquist Motors, 601 W. Jefferson St., Rockford, Illinois. Shows the transfer signature of Gervaise Sparhawk and the printed name of the transferee signature being Mike Strandquist.

Q And does it give a mileage on the date of the sale?

A Yes, sir, it does.

Q And what was the mileage?

A The date of the statement was 12-27-91. The mileage

C09669

1 is 60,013 miles.
2 Q Okay. And you previously have indicated that the 3 second mileage that would be known was on the Sears receipt
4 which was 77,479, correct?
5 A I'm sorry?
6 Q 77,479 on the Sears receipt?
7 A Yes, sir.
8 Q And that would be on August 24th of '93, correct?
9 A Yes, that is correct, sir.
10 Q And then the next mileage that would be known would 11 be the 77,811 that was in the photograph taken by Mrs. Beaman,
12 correct?
13 A That is correct.
14 Q That would have been on September the 1st of '93,
15 correct?
16 A It would have been 8-30 of '90 -- yeah, I believe --
17 Q Well --
18 A I'm sorry, the photograph, yes.
19 Q The photograph?
20 A Yes, sir, I'm sorry.
21 Q Within a few days after the murder, correct?
22 A Correct.
23 Q And then the mileage as recorded on the car at the 24 time it was inspected, December 5th, 1994, would be the last

C09670

1 known mileage on the odometer, correct?
2 A Yes, sir.
3 Q Now I'll show you People's Exhibit No. 66, ask you
4 if you recognize that item?
5 A Yes, sir, I do recognize that item.
6 Q And what is that?
7 A That is the speedometer cable taken out of Alan
8 Beaman's 1987 Ford Escort.
9 Q Both that and item number 62, did you recover those 10 as evidence that day and package them and take them to the 11 crime lab for examination?
12 A Yes, sir, I did.
13 Q And are both those items, other than the lab
14 markings and fingerprint residue, in substantially the same
15 condition as when you recovered them?
16 A Yes, sir, I believe they are.
17 Q Did you also, in connection with this investigation,
18 purchase a new speedometer from a Ford dealer, and a new 19 speedometer cable from a Ford dealer?
20 A Yes, sir, I did.
21 Q Show you first People's 62-A, and ask you if you
22 recognize that item?
23 A Yes, sir, that's the new speedometer which I bought
24 from Dennison Ford in Bloomington.

Q And People's 66-A?

A Yes, sir, that appears to be the cable, speedometer cable, which I bought from Dennison Ford in Bloomington, Illinois.

Q Now when you purchased the new cable, was the -- did you have to purchase -- this has an inner cable in it, correct?

A Yes, it does.

Q And did you have to purchase a new inner cable and put it in there, or does it come with the inner cable?

A No, sir, it comes as one assembly, inner cable and outer sheathing.

Q And as far as the tip of the Ford replacement part, does that differ at all from the universal tip in the replacement universal parts that you bought?

A Yes, the tip in the new cable which I bought is a white plastic tip. The tip in the universal tip which I bought is a silver tip, silver metallic tip.

Q And you previously indicated at some point in time you went to Roscoe to Jerry's Auto Parts and purchased some parts there, correct?

A Yes, sir, on two different occasions.

Q And did you also have occasion to be allowed by Mr. Fehler to go through their records and attempt to locate

C09672

1 receipts that related to the December, 1991 time period that 2 you learned may have related to some work on the odometer or 3 the speedometer?

4 A Yes, sir, he did allow me to go through his records
5 for December of '91.

6 Q First let me show you People's Exhibits 64-A, H, G,
7 F and B, and ask you if you recognize those receipts?

8 A Yes, sir, I do.

9 Q And what are those?

10 A These are receipts that I found in boxes at Roscoe's
11 -- or Jerry's Auto Parts in Roscoe, Illinois, after searching
12 for records in December of 1991.

13 Q And in particular is People's Exhibit 64-B a receipt 14 for December the 26th of '91?

15 A Yes, it is, sir.

16 Q And what does that show purchased on that date?

17 A Shows a one -- quantity of one, the part number is 18 Advantage USC-1, description is a cable kit. It also shows
19 one part number, KRY1613, which was told to me to be a black 20 spray paint.

21 Q And when you later purchased the various items at 22 Jerry's Auto Parts, did you get the receipts from those 23 purchases also?

24 A Yes, sir, I did.

1 Q Let me show you 64-D, C and E, and ask if you
2 recognize those receipts?

3 A Yes, sir, I do.

4 Q And what are -- what are those?

5 A These are receipts given to me after I purchased an 6 Advantage USC-1 cable kit.

7 Q Now you got three receipts there, right?

8 A Yes, sir, I do.

9 Q How many of these Advantage parts did you purchase?

10 A I purchased two. I purchased one December 22nd of 11 1994, and one on February 15th of 1995.

12 Q And what's the third receipt for?

13 A The third receipt is for a different type of repair
14 kit which I purchased on February 15th, 1995.

15 Q And what's the notation on there for that different
16 type of repair kit?

17 A This, instead of saying cable kit under description,
18 says repair kit. And instead of a part number of Advantage
19 USC-1, this says DOR705-707.

20 Q All right. On the dates that you purchased the two 21 Advantage replacement kits, what does those entries say?

22 A Those entries say Advantage USC-1, and under 23 description they say cable kit, both on December 22nd and 24 February 15th?

1 Q And was that the same notation that was on the old
2 receipt that you found in 1991, particularly the one on 3 December 26th?

4 A Yes, sir, they say Advantage USC-1, cable kit.

5 Q And show you now People's Exhibit 66-B and C, and 6 ask you if you recognize those two items?

7 A Yes, sir. People's Exhibit 66-B is an Advantage,
8 part number USC-1, part one, universal cable kit, which I
9 purchased at Jerry's Auto Parts in Roscoe, Illinois. This is 10 the same Advantage speedometer cable kit which I gave to the 11 Morton Crime Lab.

12 Q This one has been opened, correct?

13 A Yes, sir, it has.

14 Q Presumably to use the tip for comparison purposes?

15 A I assume so. I wasn't there when it was opened.

16 Q You've seen the photographs. You weren't actually 17 present when Mr. Kryszak did that?

18 A That is correct.

19 Q And 66-C?

20 A People's Exhibit 66-C once again is an Advantage
21 part number USC-1, universal speedometer cable kit. This 22 would be the cable kit that I purchased on February 15, 1995,
23 at Jerry's Auto Parts in Roscoe, Illinois.

24 Q The two different types of replacement kits that you

1 said you bought at Jerry's, were those the only two that they 2 carried?

3 A Yes, sir, they said that was the only two.

4 Q Call your attention to the week of December 12th.
5 Did you, as part of your investigation at that point, make an 6 attempt to find who the prior owner of the Ford Escort would 7 have been?

8 A Yes, sir, I did.

9 Q And how did you find out that information?

10 A I went through the Secretary of State's office and 11 asked them to do a title search on the vehicle. By a manual
12 look-up through the Springfield office they were able to tell
13 me who owned the vehicle prior to then.

14 Q And were you, by that process, able to locate Mrs.
15 Sparhawk, who's testified here?

16 A Yes, sir, I was.

17 Q And did you, thereafter, interview her and her son,
18 Gilbert, and Mr. Angotti as part of the investigation?

19 A Yes, I did.

20 Q Did you also go to Strandquist Motors at some point
21 and obtain records of the trade-in and the subsequent sale to 22 the Beamans?

23 A Yes, sir, I did.

24 Q Once you interviewed Mrs. Sparhawk and her son,

Gilbert, was that your first indication in the investigation that the speedometer cable on this car had any prior problems?

A Yes, sir, it was.

Q On January 18th of 1995, did you have occasion to make another trip to Rockford and do some more measuring of mileages and times?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Was that also a weekday?

A Yes, sir, I believe it was.

Q If you could refer to your report please, do so, but would you tell us what measurements you made on the trip up?

A According to my report I began at [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], [REDACTED], drove directly to Alan Beaman's residence at an average of about 75 miles per hour. Total distance was recorded as a hundred, eighty-three miles, with a driving time of one hour and 56 minutes.

Q And I believe you previously indicated at the speed limit, it took two hours and 17 minutes?

A Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q Most of the -- the great majority of the route is interstate highway, correct?

A Yes, sir, Route 39, State 20, all interstate.

Q And what's the speed limit on those roads?

A On 39 it's 65 miles an hour. On State 20, I believe

1 it's 55 miles per hour.

2 Q On that day, before we go into the driving you did
3 while you were there, would you tell us about the trip back
4 and the measurements you made on the trip back?

5 A Yes, sir. Once again referring to my report, after 6 finishing the intercity driving, we checked the distance from 7 Bell Federal to [REDACTED], Normal, at an average of 8 75 miles per hour. The total distance was a hundred and 9 twenty-three, point nine miles, with a travel time of one hour
10 and 48 minutes.

11 Q And while you were there, did you do some intercity
12 driving to measure some routes that related to the information
13 you had learned from Mrs. Beaman?

14 A Yes, sir, I did.

15 Q And have you prepared some slides that would help us
16 to understand that evidence?

17 A Yes, sir, I have.

18 Q For the record, we are now looking at slide -- just 19 a minute, 70-DX. Could you tell us what's depicted on the 20 slide, detective?

21 A Yes, sir. Once again, this is a background of the 22 insert from the atlas from the City of Rockford. Overlaying
23 that are the yellow routes of Carol Beaman driven on August 24 25, 1993, to the best of our knowledge due to her reports and

C09678

1 her disclosures to us. You'll notice on the sheet
2 Independence Village, which is the residence of Chris Gray,
3 Wal-Mart, Union Hall, Gray's IGA where she received the 4 receipt at three minutes after two, Auburn High School where 5 Carol Beaman is employed, and the Beaman residence at [REDACTED]
6 [REDACTED] [REDACTED]

7 Q Did you -- excuse me -- make certain distance and 8 time measurements relating to those various places?

9 A Yes, sir, I did.

10 Q Okay. Is that on a slide or just in your report?

11 A It's in my report, sir.

12 Q Would you give us that information based on your 13 driving that day?

14 A Yes, I would. From Chris Gray's residence at 15 Independence Village to the Beaman residence at [REDACTED] [REDACTED]
16 [REDACTED], the total mileage of 9.9 miles, the travel time of 16
17 minutes. From the Beaman residence to Wal-Mart, the distance
18 of 9.7 miles, travel time of 15 minutes. From Wal-Mart to 19 Union Hall, the distance of 1.9 miles took me approximately 20 seven minutes. From Union Hall to Gray's IGA on the Auburn
21 Road site was a distance of 4.9 miles, a travel time of 13.5
22 minutes. From Gray's IGA on Auburn to the Auburn High School
23 is a distance of 1.6 miles, took me approximately four 24 minutes. From Auburn High School to the Beaman residence, the

1 distance of 6.3 miles, took a travel time of eight minutes.
2 Q When you're doing the driving that day, could you
3 tell us about your speed?
4 A Yes, sir, I was driving to stay within the speed
5 limit, right at the posted speed limit.
6 Q Basically traffic on a normal weekday?
7 A I assume it was, sir. I don't live in Rockford. I
8 don't know how traffic is normally, but I would assume it was 9 a normal day.
10 Q But you were there on a weekday during a business
11 day?
12 A Yes, sir, I was.
13 Q Okay, thank you.
14 A Would you like me to continue with the list, sir?
15 Q Oh, do we have some more on this slide?
16 A Just the Auburn High School to Beaman residence --
17 I guess I would have finished up on that.
18 Q I think you mentioned that, yes.
19 A Okay.
20 Q Detective, you were present here in court and, in 21 fact, assisting Mr. Kennedy when we used the drill and ran the 22 demonstration the other day on People's Exhibit 62, 66, 62-A,
23 and 66-A, the old and new speedometer cables, correct?
24 A Yes, sir, I was.

C09680

1 Q And you had a chance as you were assisting in that
2 to observe the operation of those as the cable was both locked
3 on the back and then unlocked and moved slowly back off until 4 it was removed, correct?

5 A Yes, sir, I was able to observe that.

6 Q And during that operation did you observe that it --
7 after being unlocked, that it would still operate properly and 8 fully if it's on there enough of a distance?

9 A Yes, sir, I did observe that.

10 Q And did you also observe at a certain point as 11 you're backing it off that it operates in basically an 12 intermittent position?

13 A Yes, sir, I observed that as well.

14 Q Then at a certain point it goes to zero and it will 15 not operate at all, correct?

16 A That is correct.

17 Q All right. Prior to doing that in court the other 18 day, had you participated at all with either Mr. Kennedy or 19 anyone else in doing that same operation outside of court?

20 A Yes, sir.

21 Q On how many occasions was that done?

22 A Three times, sir.

23 Q Outside of court, did the operation always go the 24 same way that it went in court?

1           A    Yes, sir. There was a different drill used each
2 time, but I believe, yes, it operated the same.

3           Q    Now would you agree that the locking mechanism on 4 the old cable is, how should we say, not in pristine
5 condition?

6           A    Yes, sir, it's not in the condition that a new one
7 would be.

8           Q    And sometimes if you fiddle with it you can get it
9 to lock, and sometimes it doesn't lock, right?

10          A    Yes, sir. From the experience that I had with it,
11 if you push the notch in, it will stay, but if you don't push
12 the notch, it will slide on and off without locking.

13          Q    Was the locking mechanism, itself, was it in that 14 same condition when it was removed from the car as best you
15 know?

16          A    Yes, sir, it was.

17          Q    As far as you know, nothing about the old cable,
18 itself, has been changed or damaged in any way by any 19 examinations or inspections done by anyone?

20          A    To my knowledge, no, sir.

21          Q    I want to call your attention to this past weekend.
22 I believe it would have been March the 18th, Saturday, March 23 the 18th of 1995, and ask you if you had occasion to make 24 another trip to Rockford to make yet another check on distance

1 and time?

2 A Yes, sir, last Saturday morning I drove to Rockford
3 again.

4 Q Would you tell us what you did on that trip and the 5 results?

6 A Yes, sir. If I could refer to my notes?

7 Q Do you not have those up there?

8 A No, sir, I don't. They're in my notebook on the 9 prosecution table.

10 MR. SOUK: May I?

11 THE COURT: You may.

12 A Okay, sir, would you ask the question again please?

13 Q (By Mr. Souk) Would you summarize, for us, the 14 distances that you traveled and the times on this last trip to 15 Rockford?

16 A Yes, sir. On the 18th of March, I left Jennifer's
17 apartment at 7:15 A.M. I left from the parking lot area. I
18 traveled to Alan Beaman's residence at an average of 75 miles
19 per hour. Leaving at 7:15 A.M. I arrived at 9:10 A.M. in 20 front of Alan Beaman's residence. The total distance
21 registered on the odometer of the vehicle I was driving was 22 138.5 miles. The entire trip took one hour and 55 minutes.
23 On the way back --

24 Q Well, let's -- did you do some driving while you

C09683

1 were there?

2 A Yes, sir, I did.

3 Q Let's go through that, if you would.

4 A Okay. I left the Beaman residence at 9:13 A.M.,
5 arrived at Wal-Mart at approximately 9:28 A.M., 15 minutes
6 later. And then arrived at the grandmother's residence at 7 9:29 A.M., one minute after Wal-Mart, 16 minutes after the 8 Beaman residence.

9 Q Did you -- was that the only route of Mrs. Beaman's
10 that you redrove that day?

11 A Yes, sir, it is.

12 Q Did you -- could you tell us about the trip back
13 then?

14 A Yes, sir. I went to Bell Federal Bank at the corner
15 of Alpine and Newberg. I walked inside the bank, stood inside
16 the doorway where we observed Alan Beaman on film at 11
17 minutes after ten. As soon as my watch said 11 minutes after,
18 I walked out of the bank, walked to the parking lot, unlocked
19 the vehicle I was driving, got in, drove to Normal at an 20 average speed of 75 miles per hour. I drove to [REDACTED] [REDACTED], 21 pulled into the parking lot, got out of my vehicle, locked my 22 vehicle, walked to the door of [REDACTED] at [REDACTED] [REDACTED] and 23 checked my watch.

24 Q And what time was it?

A Twelve o'clock, sir.

Q Did you also, last Saturday, go to the location on the ISU campus where Jennifer attended her last class?

A Yes, sir, I did, Edwards 211.

Q And did you walk the route from her classroom where she had her last class to the entrance of [REDACTED] [REDACTED] [REDACTED]?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And just to make sure we're clear, were you outside the building at Edwards Hall, or did you actually go up where the classroom was?

A No, sir, I walked up to the doorway of Edwards 211. The door was locked, so I started at the locked door of the classroom, walked at a moderate pace to Jennifer's apartment, [REDACTED], walked to [REDACTED], up the stairs to the front of Apt. [REDACTED] at that location.

Q Did you time that trip?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And how long did it take?

A At a moderate pace, eight minutes, 52 seconds.

MR. SOUK: Judge, I believe that's all I have, but if we could have a recess I could make certain of that.

THE COURT: I think we'll take about a ten-minute recess at this time. If the bailiffs would please take charge of the jury, and the jury is to leave their notebooks here as well.

THE COURT: All right, for the record, reflect that the jury has now returned to open court. Before I call upon you to examine, Mr. Beu, let me just clarify. I understand that some additional paper was made available to the jurors. If you need a moment to put any additional paper into your notebooks, would you take that time to do that please.

(WHEREUPON A BRIEF INTERRUPTION WAS HAD.)

THE COURT: All right, Mr. Beu, you may proceed with your cross examination.

CROSS EXAMINATION

BY MR. BEU:

Q I'm sorry, detective, your title is what?

A Sergeant.

Q Sgt. Freesmeyer, okay. Sergeant, can you first of all go back with us on the slides that you were doing of the mileages from Rockford? I don't know if that's set up right at the moment for you to do that, or do you need to go there to get to that location?

THE COURT: Would you like him to step down, Mr. Beu?

MR. BEU: If he needs to, unless it's already in that spot.

Is that the first of them, officer?

A This is the one you're referring to, sir, or did you want the -- I'll go to the beginning of the slides. Okay, that would have been the first, I believe.

Q (By Mr. Beu) All right. Now I had a little difficulty hearing from back here as far as all of the numbers that went with these, and so I'm not going to be in a position to identify specifically by number what these are. But I shall try to phrase my question so that it's clear which slide I'm referring to. We have up here now a slide which shows a

1 route that you traveled between Mr. Beaman's residence and 2 Bell Federal Bank. Is that correct?

3 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

4 Q Isn't it true that the route that you drove to make
5 that comparison is a route that you simply selected as being
6 perhaps the most direct route between the two locations?

7 A Yes, sir, that is correct.

8 Q That is not a route that Mr. Beaman told you
9 specifically that he took to go between those points, is it?

10 A I don't recall he told me what route he took. He 11 just said he went to the bank and back.

12 Q So you chose to select a route, did you not, that 13 you took right through the heart of downtown Rockford?

14 A As you stated earlier, I took the most direct route,
15 sir.

16 Q Does not that route take you directly through the 17 heart of downtown Rockford?

18 A Yes, sir, it does.

19 Q As opposed to going down Meridian Road to the high
20 speed bypass over to Alpine Road, and then up north to Bell
21 Federal?

22 A Yes, that would be correct.

23 Q Would you please advance to the next slide? Next 24 slide, please. Next slide. Sir, there is a notation on here

1 that you identified before of going directly from the Sandy
2 Hollow IGA to Bell Federal Savings. I believe that's the 3 fourth item on this total list of originations/destinations
4 and distance recap?
5 A Yes, sir, that's correct.
6 Q Mr. Beaman never told you that he drove that 7 distance at anytime that was relevant to these proceedings,
8 did he?
9 A No, sir, he did not.
10 Q He told you that he drove from the IGA on Sandy 11 Hollow to his home, and then from there back to Bell Federal,
12 correct?
13 A Yes, sir, I believe you are correct.
14 Q Can you tell us why, other than an oversight on your 15 part, you chose to include on this supposed list of the total
16 mileage he drove, a distance which you knew he never drove?
17 A Yes, sir. This was done, I believe, prior -- the 18 first routes were done before I had knowledge that in grand 19 jury he stated he went from work to home, to the bank, to back
20 home. I was told when I was questioning him at McPherson 21 Theater and I asked him, "Didn't you go to the bank?" He 22 responded, "I didn't go to Normal." So I knew, at that point,
23 that he was at the bank at some time. So, therefore, I went 24 from where he was that morning, which was Sandy Hollow IGA, to Bell Federal Bank.

Q In other words, this document of your mileages was prepared before the grand jury testimony?

A This particular document you're looking at now, no, this was done last week. But when I began trying to figure out what routes he had done, once I was made aware of the mileages, I was not aware that he had gone home first, and then to the bank, and then back home again.

Q I'll go back to my original question then, sergeant. When you prepared this document, you knew that that wasn't a route that he had told you that he took?

A Yes, sir, I guess I did know that.

Q Are there, to the best of your knowledge, any other places on this document where you have included distances that you may have guessed at some earlier time, found out were not accurate, but then didn't delete off of this?

A No, sir, to my knowledge, I didn't purposely delete anything that I was aware --

Q I didn't mean to suggest you were --

A If you have something in mind, I'm open to suggestions.

Q So am I, and I'm simply asking you to look at the list. We've identified one, and I'm asking whether you could look at that and determine whether maybe now having had that

1 pointed out to you there may be others that you have
2 inadvertently placed in here?

3 A I don't recall anything else I would have
4 inadvertently placed in, no.

5 Q Next slide please. This is the slide which shows
6 the various locations that you identified, I believe, based 7 upon what was told to you by Carol Beaman about her activities
8 on the day of August 25th?

9 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

10 Q And Carol is Alan Beaman's mother?

11 A Yes, sir, she is.

12 Q Okay. She told you that she had been home and left
13 from home in the morning?

14 A Yes. Let me make an exception to my last answer,
15 sir. She did not say that she stopped by Auburn High School.
16 Gray's IGA and then back home, and I --

17 Q You've anticipated me, sir, and I congratulate you.
18 She did not tell you that Auburn High School was a stop that 19 she made, did she?

20 A No, sir, she did not.

21 Q When you testified earlier that the slide was 22 prepared for locations she had said to you, that was not 23 correct, was it?

24 A If that was my wording, that these are places she

1 said to me, then you are correct. She did not say Auburn High
2 School.

3 Q You knew from talking with her and from your
4 investigation that she's a teacher at Auburn High School?

5 A Yes, sir, I did know that.

6 Q You put this Auburn High School stop on here
7 speculating that she might have stopped at Auburn High School
8 on the way home. Is that not correct?

9 A Yes, sir, that is correct.

10 Q You put it on here to raise the inference that she 11 might have done something different than she said she did?

12 A I can't testify I put it on there to make an 13 inference. I put it on there because I felt that was 14 pertinent.

15 Q Why would it have been pertinent, sir?

16 A Well, because she was going from Gray's IGA to [REDACTED]
17 [REDACTED] [REDACTED] In prior testimony she didn't recall exactly
18 what time she got home. At this time she stated she was sure
19 she was home at 2:15, and being a teacher at Auburn High
20 School, stating she was buying supplies for school, I felt it
21 was pertinent to put in Auburn High School as she was on her
22 way home and she was buying items for school.

23 Q This was a school vacation period, correct?

24 A The day, that week before school started, yes, sir.

1 Q Yes, sir, the 25th of August?
2 A Yes, that's my understanding.
3 Q And again, just so it's clear, part of her itinerary
4 that day as she described it to you and to the grand jury was 5 not a stop at Auburn High School, was it?
6 A That is correct, sir.
7 Q Okay, next slide please. Back up, I think, please.
8 You have identified certain routes again on the same slide I
9 was just asking you about concerning Carol Beaman's travel.
10 You have a part of a distance on this map. Let me step up and 11 show you what I'm asking you about here. Here on a route that 12 is listed on the map as North Main Street, a north/south
13 portion of one of those routes, correct?
14 A Yes, sir.
15 Q That again is your arbitrary selection of a route
16 between a couple of points, is it not, as opposed to a route
17 that she described to you?
18 A Yes, sir. Again I don't believe she described 19 exactly what route she took. I chose an arbitrary route which 20 seemed to be the most direct route.
21 Q So, of course, you cannot say that that was the 22 route that was taken?
23 A No, sir, I can't say that.
24 Q Next slide please. And next. That was the end of those slides then, I believe.

A I believe so, sir.

Q Okay, lights please. Thank you. Sergeant, you indicated that you were present when the various pre-court and in-court demos were made with the old and new odometer cable with the drills?

A Yes, sir, that's correct.

Q I truly don't mean to be cute, but did each drill register 62 miles an hour?

A I can't tell you for sure, yes. I'm sure each one might have turned at a slightly different speed.

Q But in each case, the old and new registered identically regardless of the drill?

A I believe in court was the first time that I had tried the new drill and compared it to the old drill. I had done -- I'm sorry, the new cable compared to the old cable. I had done the old cable once at the Morton Crime Lab, once at the Normal Police Department, and once upstairs in the state's attorney's office. The new drill, I recall doing here in the courtroom testimony.

Q New drill or new cable?

A I'm sorry. The new cable I recall doing here in courtroom testimony. I don't recall ever doing the new drill other than this time -- the new cable.

C09694

1 Q So prior to court you didn't have, to your
2 knowledge, direct knowledge that it was going to work just the 3 same as the old drill?

4 A No, sir, not prior to court I did not.

5 Q The old cable. When you were doing the examination
6 or overseeing the examination of the Escort of Mr. Beaman's,
7 you've indicated Mr. Van Etten that was there for us was 8 allowed to take photos at each stage of the examination. He 9 did do that, as a matter of fact, did he not?

10 A Yes, sir, he did.

11 MR. BEU: May I approach, your Honor?

12 THE COURT: You may.

13 Q (By Mr. Beu) Officer, I show you what's been marked
14 previously for identification as People's Exhibit 53, which I
15 believe you have indicated earlier is a check that you
16 obtained from either Carol or Barry Beaman bearing the date of 17 August 25 and written to Gray's IGA.

18 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

19 Q If you'll refer to the back of that document, sir,
20 is there a bank deposit stamp on there?

21 A Yes, there is from the Northwest Bank of Rockford.

22 Q Okay. Sir, is that bank deposit dated?

23 A Yes, sir, it is.

24 Q What is the date?

1           A     August 26th, 1993.
2           Q     The 26th?
3           A     Yes, sir.
4           Q     The day following its delivery according to the date
5           on the face of it?
6           A     Yes, sir, the 26th would follow the 25th.
7           Q     Did you make any inquiry with respect to Northwest
8           Bank of Rockford concerning this?
9           A     I don't know I made any inquiry to Northwest Bank.
10          I did make an inquiry to Amcoré Bank to get copies of canceled
11          checked.
12          Q     That is the bank upon which the check is drawn?
13          A     Yes, sir.
14          Q     So you made no inquiry to determine whether the bank
15          stamp on the back of a check the day following a transaction
16          at the store would or would not be standard processing for a 17          store of this sort?
18          A     I had no reason to doubt it. I didn't feel
19          investigation on that was needed.
20          Q     As a matter of fact, officer, at the various times
21          that you received items from the Beaman family, the Sears
22          receipt for example, the Wal-Mart receipt, the Union Hall
23          receipt, the check written to IGA, the IGA receipt, you were 24          provided with the originals of all of those documents, right,

1 and you or your department or the state's attorney have had
2 them there thereafter in your possession?

3 A No, sir, I don't recall it that way.

4 Q What do you recall?

5 A I recall from the subpoena that I received getting 6 the original copy of the IGA store receipt and the checks from 7 Carol or Barry Beaman. The receipt from Sears, I don't recall
8 whether I took that into evidence, or rather another member of 9 our department took that into evidence. The Wal-Mart receipt
10 and Union Hall receipt, I don't recall taking the original of 11 that or holding the original. At some point I'm sure I had 12 it, because we have a photocopy of it. But, sir, it did not 13 appear on our subpoena, and I don't believe I held the 14 original for that.

15 Q It is entirely likely, isn't it, that these 16 documents were forthcoming to you without a subpoena?

17 A That is possible, yes, sir.

18 Q And you did have the original of the Wal-Mart and 19 Union Hall receipts, as well as the rest of these, correct?

20 A At this point, I have a photocopy of them, so I
21 assume at some point I did have the originals.

22 Q The question I'm getting to, what testing
23 procedures, if any, did you apply on these documents in an 24 effort to determine whether or not they appeared to be

1 legitimate documents?

2 A Well, for the Union Hall receipt, I also have a
3 photocopy of a Master Card receipt with a date on it and Carol
4 Beaman's signature. For the Wal-Mart receipt, I didn't have 5 any reason to check with Wal-Mart. I don't believe that the 6 Wal-Mart Corporation would forge a receipt. I accepted them
7 as legitimate receipts, sir, other than as I testified
8 earlier, I did call Wal-Mart to see if Mrs. Beaman would have 9 appeared on camera. At that point, the tapes were already 10 destroyed or reused. And I attempted to call Union Hall to 11 see if they had video tapes, and found that the business was 12 no longer established at that location.

13 Q There were no tests, I take it, that you caused to 14 be performed at any state lab or otherwise with respect to the 15 paper, or the ink, or anything, to determine if these were 16 apparently contemporaneous documents for the day they appeared 17 to be?

18 A No, sir. No, sir, I had no reason to question that.

19 Q How about the IGA receipt and check?

20 A Yes, sir, the IGA receipt I did have question to -- 21 or an occasion to question since it was Carol's brother's
22 store. The check, as I mentioned earlier in testimony, I did
23 -- I received copies of Carol Beaman's check from the Amcore
24 Bank to verify that the check was written on that day, and

1 copies of the check from the bank verified that that check was 2 written on that day. For the Gray's IGA receipt, I went to 3 Gray's IGA store myself and I made a purchase, and I believe
4 it was a soda. I took the receipt from that soda. I knew
5 from the receipt it was a Union Sweeter register. I called 6 the company and asked them how hard it would be to change a
7 date and time on a registered receipt such as that. She told
8 me how to do that in a matter of seconds. I believe that 9 concluded the investigation that I did on those receipts.

10 Q Was any type of investigation done to see anything
11 further with respect to any of those documents?

12 A No, sir, I don't believe so.

13 Q And the -- you checked also, did you not, at the IGA
14 about the fact that they have print-out numbers on the system
15 that they use which places a transaction number both on a 16 receipt and on the check that is registered in return for that 17 check?

18 A I'm sorry, sir, that's a very complicated question
19 that you asked me. Would you mind showing me the receipts and 20 check and verify that?

21 MR. BEU: May I, your Honor?

22 THE COURT: You may.

23 Q (By Mr. Beu) I realize you are right, it was a 24 lengthy question. If you will refer, I believe, to People's

1 Exhibit 53. Did you not determine, on that document, is a
2 notation printed by the register at the IGA store which 3 inserts an identification number which also appears on the 4 receipt?

5 A Sir, would you mind showing me the receipt? There's 6 several stamps on here. I don't know what came from IGA and 7 what came from the bank.

8 Q Yes, sir. Showing you what's been marked as 9 People's Exhibit 52-A.

10 A Thank you. Sir, on the bottom of the check there in 11 blue ink, it's stamped 6574 777. On the far right, it appears 12 in blue letters to have 48.25. 48.25 is the amount of the 13 cash register receipt at Gray's IGA, and the 6574 777 appears 14 on the bottom of the IGA receipt. If that's what you're 15 referring to, sir, yes, the numbers from the receipt match the 16 check, sir.

17 Q Okay. So those things appear to match. Now was it
18 your understanding from the representative at the company that 19 made that register that if a person were inclined to somehow
20 tamper with the information that would appear on that receipt 21 at the time it would have had to be done at the time the 22 receipt was issued?

23 A I'm sorry, sir, again you've confused me.

24 Q I'm sorry, I'll try not to. You spoke with a representative of the company that makes the machine?

A Union Sweeter, yes, sir.

Q And that was a register in place at the IGA store?

A Yes, sir, I believe so.

Q And a person there alluded you to the fact that if someone was inclined, it would be possible to produce a receipt that was in some way not standard. Is that correct?

A Yes, they could alter the date and the time on a receipt.

Q And is it not your understanding that for that to have been done in this case, somebody who knew what they were doing with that machine would have had to do that at the time that that receipt was originally issued?

A If that were the original receipt, yes, the altering would have to be done before it would print on that receipt, yes, sir.

Q You have --

A If that's what you're asking.

Q You've already said that you have no reason to not accept that as the original receipt, have you not?

A When I first got it, as I mentioned earlier, I did do some checking on it. After that, then I had no reason to do any further checking on it.

Q You're satisfied that's the original receipt?

1 A Yes, sir, I am.

2 Q You're satisfied that there was no tampering done at 3 that register by anybody at the IGA store?

4 A Yes, sir. The way it matches up to the check, I'm 5 comfortable with that.

6 Q Do you truly consider, sir, that Alan Beaman has 7 some way lied to you when he failed to recall that he had gone
8 to the bank that morning rather than going home to go directly
9 to bed?

10 A Of course, it would depend on what you consider as 11 lying to you. If purposely leaving things out is lying, then,
12 yes, he purposely left things out. On some occasions I did
13 ask him, did you go anywhere else. He said no, I went home
14 and went to bed. Now in direct answer to the question, did 15 you go anywhere else, if he went to the bank, and what he 16 tells me is, no, I went straight home and went to bed, then,
17 yes, sir, I would consider that a lie.

18 Q Do you consider that it is a positive factor,
19 however, for the prosecution that he was what, 13 miles maybe
20 closer to Bloomington than his home?

21 A I consider it a positive factor that he was back
22 out from his home at that time of the morning, sir.

23 Q And even though it shows, of course, that he was a
24 hundred twenty-six miles from Bloomington at that time?

1           A     Yes, sir, that didn't really bother me.

2           Q     Officer, after Mr. Beaman appeared and testified at 3 the grand jury here, did you go back and rerun mileage checks
4 based upon the details that he had provided in lengthy grand
5 jury testimony?

6           A     Again, sir, you've pointed out some discrepancies
7 that I had failed to see earlier, and those were brought out
8 in grand jury. So if that's what you're referring to, sir, I
9 did not make those corrections.

10          Q     I'm referring, sir, to the fact that Mr. Beaman,
11 first of all, earlier had a bond hearing following his arrest,
12 correct?

13          A     Yes, sir, that is correct.

14          Q     And you recall he did not testify at the bond
15 hearing?

16          A     I was not present at the bond hearing, sir.

17          Q     Is it your understanding that he did not testify at 18 the bond hearing?

19          A     That's my understanding, yes, sir.

20          Q     You've seen a transcript of the bond hearing?

21          A     I don't recall if I have or not, sir.

22          Q     All right, sir. At any rate, other than what he has 23 said to you, isn't it correct that the only time he has given 24 any lengthy description of that week's activities was during

C09703

1 testimony at the grand jury?

2 A Okay, sir, you've mentioned the only time. Are you
3 referring to the only time after his arrest, or the only time
4 during the investigation?

5 Q Well, let me rephrase the question. Other than 6 those conversations you had with him --

7 A Okay.

8 Q -- isn't it true that the only description of his 9 activities that have been put forward publicly was the 10 testimony at the grand jury?

11 A No, sir, that is not correct.

12 Q In what way?

13 A He did give a description of his activities to 14 Detective Daniels on the very first interview on the 28th.

15 Q All right, and let me clarify something for my own
16 benefit there. You were what, the supervising overseeing 17 detective during the bulk of this examination or
18 investigation?

19 A Well, sir, I started out just as a case detective
20 when the first -- the first of this began on August 28th. I
21 happened to be the first detective on the scene. I did not 22 become lead detective, so-to-say, until maybe October or 23 November. I was not a supervisor of anybody else on this crew
24 or this team. I was just a member of the team. And then in

1 October or November, then I began the majority of the work
2 since I was the only person that could talk with Mr. Beaman.

3 Q Is it safe to say that in the course of your
4 investigation on this case you have reviewed the statements
5 that have been given by Mr. Beaman to Officer Daniels, and 6 other witnesses to other officers?

7 A Yes, sir, that is correct.

8 Q And other than those things that were said in those 9 various statements to any of the officers, the -- let me
10 rephrase that question. Activities concerning his whereabouts
11 on that day were described in far greater length at the grand 12 jury than they were on any of the police interviews, were they 13 not?

14 A Sir, for a direct answer to that I guess I would 15 have to sit down and compare the grand jury with the interview
16 that I had with him at the Normal Police Department in which 17 he wrote out a written schedule of each day's activity and 18 compare that with the interview that Detective Daniels did.
19 At this point I'm afraid I'm unable to tell you which is more
20 exact until I sat down and actually compared them.

21 Q I didn't mean to suggest exact. I meant more 22 detailed.

23 A More detailed?

24 Q Yes, sir.

C09705

1           A     Again, sir, I'm afraid I would have to review the 2 grand jury. I've been through it once. I don't recall
3 exactly how in detail he got on that, sir.

4           Q     For now I think I'll leave it with this question on 5 that point, sir. Did you go back out to retrace routes of Mr.
6 Beaman following his testimony before the grand jury?

7           A     Yes, sir, I'm sure I did.

8           Q     Did you test any additional routes or add any 9 additional mileage to your total estimate in those checkings
10 after the grand jury?

11          A     Yes, sir, I did.

12          Q     What were they, do you recall?

13          A     As I mentioned earlier, the distance from the Beaman
14 residence to Cafe Esperanto was incorrect, so I remeasured
15 that. The distance from Cafe Esperanto to Sinissippi Garden
16 I had to remeasure because at the time Alan mentioned he went 17 to Cafe Esperanto, but I couldn't find any listing in the 18 phone book in Rockford, and I couldn't find an address for it.
19 So at a later time I was actually able to find that particular
20 restaurant or coffee shop. Also when I was doing mileage
21 previously I was looking at the wrong Denny's. I thought
22 there was only one Denny's in Rockford, and that was on 11th
23 Street and Sandy Hollow. I then found out the Denny's they 24 went to was on State Street, so I had to rerun the route to

1 Denny's so I could be accurate.

2 Q Were these various things that you found out during 3 the course of the grand jury testimony, best of your 4 recollection?

5 A No, I believe the fact of Denny's I found out from 6 Beth Torissi possibly, from an interview with her, and I asked
7 her which Denny's they went to. I don't recall exactly, but 8 that sticks out in my mind, sir. The Cafe Esperanto, I knew 9 that I didn't have an exact address on that. So during one of 10 my trips to Rockford, I stopped by the Winnebago County
11 Sheriff's Department or courthouse. It might have been the 12 police department I spoke with. I asked one of the desk
13 officers where I could find the Cafe Esperanto. They gave me
14 direct directions, and then I went from there.

15 Q Okay, sergeant. And I don't know if you could 16 answer this without maybe again going back to the slides. I'm 17 making notes in the dark. Isn't it correct that in your 18 overall recap on the slide where you come up with 206 and a 19 half miles, that you did not include a Saturday run from the 20 Beaman residence to the church and back for the Saturday
21 rehearsal? Do you recall without looking?

22 A You're right, sir, I would have to go back to the 23 slide to recall.

24 MR. BEU: May we do the lights, your Honor, and go back

1 to that slide?

2 Q (By Mr. Beu) There --

3 A Yes, sir, after the initial traffic stop by the 4 sheriff's office to the Beaman residence, there was only one
5 other trip from the Beaman residence to the church. You are 6 correct, sir, I failed to list the Saturday.

7 Q Thank you, sir. Lights please. Officer, at the 8 time you approached Alan Beaman with a subpoena for body
9 samples, you had never asked him to simply voluntarily provide 10 you with such, had you?

11 A No, sir, I did not. We had not had any contact with 12 him since the interview with Detective Daniels.

13 Q You described earlier an interview you had with Alan
14 on October 22 of 1993.

15 A May I refer to my notes, sir?

16 Q Yes, sir, page 199 of the discovery if yours -- if 17 yours is identified the same way on your copies.

18 A Yes, sir, thank you.

19 Q During that October 22 interview, in addition to the 20 things you testified to, did he not also describe to you that 21 he and Jennifer had been engaged?

22 A Give me just a moment, sir.

23 Q Yes, sir.

24 A Yes, he stated that he had bought Jennifer a cheap

1 ring at Mother Murphy's to verify their engagement.

2 Q Sgt. Freesmeyer, where -- what department did you
3 work for before you began with the Normal Department?

4 A Prior to the Normal Department, I worked for the 5 Champaign County Sheriff's Office as a correctional officer,
6 Deputy Sheriff Correctional Officer. I worked in the county
7 jail, sir.

8 Q Okay, and for how long had you done that?

9 A Thirteen months maybe, 14 months.

10 Q Prior to that, sir?

11 A Prior to that -- well, I was working odd jobs at 12 Champaign. I worked for Mercy Hospital as private security.
13 Before that I was living in the State of Arizona, working in 14 the Arizona Department of Corrections.

15 Q Okay. So your actual first on-the-street police 16 experience has been beginning with 1990 when you began with 17 Normal?

18 A Yes, sir, March 12th of 1990, sir.

19 Q What schooling and such have you had, sir, in terms
20 of any formal class work during that time?

21 A In anything, sir, or just law enforcement related?

22 Q I'm sorry, law enforcement, yes, yes.

23 A When I started at the Arizona Department of 24 Corrections I went through, I believe --

C09709

1 Q I'm sorry, I'm sorry. I'm thinking of since you
2 began working as a police officer.

3 A I'm sorry, for the department, for the City of 4 Normal?

5 Q Yes, right.

6 A I began my employment March 12th of 1990 at the 7 Police Training Institute in Champaign, Illinois, where I
8 underwent 400 hours of basic police training. After that I
9 returned to Normal, went through, I believe, a 14-week field
10 training officer program, which I rode with a field training
11 officer. They observed my behavior and my job performance for 12 that 14-week period. I then went into a period of probation
13 which I believe lasted several months after that. Since then 14 I have had several on-the-job training in different areas. I 15 didn't come prepared to give you that list today, sir, but 16 it's been different in-services throughout the department.

17 Q Okay. Do you recall off the top of your head any of 18 the persons who provided you your in-service training within 19 the department?

20 A There were quite a few of them, sir. In-service
21 training I obtain at least 40 hours a year, and they may be 22 broken up into eight-hour sessions or 12-hour sessions.

23 Q During the course of these things, sergeant, have 24 you become aware of what I referred to earlier as a crime

950

1 scene log.

2 A Sir, I've heard you talk about a crime scene log all
3 week. I've never had any specific training on a crime scene
4 log as I recall.

5 Q So your training has never included maintaining of 6 some log that would clearly identify the names and times of 7 persons who have been in and about a crime scene?

8 A May I specify sir?

9 Q Sure.

10 A I don't recall to my knowledge ever having specific 11 training on that. The Town of Normal does not have a crime
12 scene log that I'm aware of that we use in crime scenes. The 13 size of our city and the make-up of our city, we don't really
14 have that many major crimes like Rockford or Chicago, and I
15 guess our department has never really seen a need for that,
16 sir.

17 Q All right, sir. In the time you've been with the 18 Normal Department, do you recall the number of homicide 19 investigations you have participated in?

20 A Yes, sir.

21 Q How many is that?

22 A Two.

23 Q Officer, if I told you that based on the testimony
24 here there's been about 12 people in and out of that apartment,

1 before the crime scene technician got there on the 25th, would
2 that sound to you about accurate?

3 A Yes, I believe that would be about accurate.

4 Q Please name them.

5 A Okay. It would have been Officer Fogler, Officer
6 Fenton, Officer Birkhead, Sgt. Mark Kotte, possibly the Chief
7 of Police, James Taylor, Walt Clark, who, at that time, was 8 our captain. You have two people from the Normal Fire
9 Department, Firefighter Elston, Firefighter McLeese. You had 10 Coroner Dan Brady, and I believe Ed Brooks who was with Dan
11 Brady. How many is that, sir?

12 Q That's ten.

13 A That's ten, okay. You would have had Dean Kennedy
14 from the crime scene technician --

15 Q I'm talking about before he got there.

16 A Oh, before he got there?

17 Q Yes, sir.

18 A Did I mention myself, sir?

19 Q I don't believe you did yet.

20 A Okay, myself. Probably Detective Daniels, since he 21 arrived at the scene. Possibility of Detective Hospelhorn and 22 Detective Warner, also Lt. Frank Zayas. And Frank Zayas might 23 have been there as well. He was in charge of our CID
24 Division, Criminal Investigation Division at that time. I

1 believe that would have accounted for any people who would
2 have been at the crime scene. That includes the Normal Fire
3 Department, Normal Police Department Detective Division, the 4 officers that were on patrol that day, and the coroner's
5 office, and the police department, sir.
6 Q By my count, that's 15 people.
7 A Okay.
8 Q Does that include what has been referred to earlier
9 as the rescue squad?
10 A Yes, sir, that's our Normal Fire Department,
11 Firefighter McLeese and Firefighter Elston.
12 Q Were photograph sets available for each of those 13 individuals?
14 A I'm sorry, sir, I didn't hear you.
15 Q Were sets of photographs available for each of those 16 individuals?
17 A Sets of photographs available?
18 Q I'm really -- talk about a confusing question --
19 A Yes, sir, I am.
20 Q Were fingerprints available for each individual?
21 A Were fingerprints available?
22 Q Yes, sir.
23 A Fingerprints were made available of Detective Zayas, 24 Detective Daniels, Detective Hospelhorn, Detective Warner, and

C09713

1 myself. We were the only people that actually touched objects
2 inside the apartment, with the exception of possibly Officer
3 Fogler or Officer Birkhead when they opened the door to enter
4 the apartment. The firefighters, their normal practice when 5 they enter a crime scene, they walk in and attempt to touch
6 nothing at all. They set their bags down. If the body is 7 obviously deceased, they pick their bags up and leave the 8 scene again. Does that answer your question, sir?

9 Q It tells me I believe that you fingerprinted only 10 the officers?

11 A Only the detectives, sir, that were working that 12 crime scene -- and I'm sorry, also Dean Kennedy.

13 Q Officer, in your first -- okay, I'm sorry, sergeant.
14 When were you promoted to sergeant, sir?

15 A I believe it was around September 27th of 1994.

16 Q Month or two after the grand jury indictment in this
17 case?

18 A If the grand jury indictment was in June or July,
19 yes, I would say two months afterwards.

20 Q In your first interview with Mike Swaine, where did
21 that take place?

22 A I initially met him at the crime scene. After he 23 was handcuffed, he was transported to Normal Police
24 Department, and the interview took place in the interview room

1 inside the detective division inside Normal Police Department.

2 Q In that initial contact with Mike Swaine, isn't it
3 correct that you voluntarily suggested to him that he could 4 benefit from counseling services for emotional trauma of this 5 incident?

6 A It's very possible I might have told him that, yes,
7 sir. He was very shaken up.

8 Q Is it not also true that you, yourself, as an 9 investigating police officer in this homicide, phoned
10 yourself, the PATH Crisis Team on behalf of Mr. Swaine and set
11 him up an appointment at Brokaw Hospital for counseling?

12 A Yes, sir, that is -- that is true.

13 Q At that time, you recognized him as a person who was 14 close to the deceased and a possible suspect?

15 A Yes, sir, that is correct.

16 Q On the -- in the course of your investigation, did 17 you become aware of the general description of a vehicle at 18 least driven regularly by Swaine, whether or not owned by him?

19 A At which point, sir? Immediately at the scene?

20 Q During the period in the early stages of the 21 investigation at any point?

22 A Yes, sir, we were told he was driving a white car.
23 If I could look at my notes, I could tell you what I was made 24 aware of.

C09715

1 Q Certainly, certainly.

2 A Yes, while I was at the scene, Detective Daniels
3 advised that he might be driving a late model Pontiac with 4 Massachusetts license plates.

5 Q Did you ever have any further description given to 6 you of a car associated with Michael Swaine?

7 A Well, I eventually saw the car, sir.

8 Q All right, was it a white vehicle?

9 A Yes, sir, it was.

10 Q Did it have a Subway bumper sticker on the rear
11 bumper?

12 A Yes, sir, it did.

13 Q Where was that car when you first saw it, sir, if 14 you recall?

15 A To the best of my knowledge, sir, it would have been 16 parked at Mike Swaine's apartment, the place where he was 17 living. Shortly after we discovered the body, we went over 18 there and took photographs of the vehicle.

19 Q Am I correct that at the time you talked with him
20 from at the scene and took him from the scene he had been 21 dropped off there by friends of his?

22 A Sir, I don't -- at the time I didn't know how he got 23 there. We just saw him walking, walking up. Actually, the 24 first I saw him was after Officer Ludington and Ebert had him

1 in custody. I heard the commotion and they told me what they 2 had.

3 Q Isn't it correct, officer, that on August 28th you
4 had conversations with a man who lived across the hall from 5 Jennifer Lockmiller in the -- page 172, sir -- in the 6 adjoining apartment who described to you that he had seen a
7 white car with a bumper sticker on it in the lot of Jennifer's
8 building around 2:00 P.M. on that Wednesday.

9 A Sir, in my report, I see a portion of my report
10 where it says, "I then asked David and Susan if they could 11 recall the last time they saw either of the two cars." I
12 believe on Wednesday they saw a white sedan, maybe a Chevy or 13 an Olds, late '80s style. David recalled seeing the vehicle
14 parked in the driveway around two P.M. when he returned from 15 class. Was there some place on this page that you saw 16 something about the bumper sticker, sir?

17 Q No, I didn't.

18 A I don't see that myself either.

19 Q You followed what you just described in your report,
20 correct --

21 A Yes, sir.

22 Q -- speaking with a couple of individuals. Those 23 individuals that you just identified occupied the apartment
24 directly across the hallway from Jennifer. Is that correct?

1 A Yes, I believe so. Yes, they were in apartment 3.

2 Q Now within three days after that, those people had 3 a more detailed statement taken from them, did they not,
4 Singley and Jenkins?

5 A Was that taken by me, sir?

6 Q No, it was not. Let me show you here.

7 THE COURT: Could we have that marked please for 8 identification, just so that we can see what it is of record?

9 MR. BEU: Yes, your Honor.

10 THE COURT: We need to refer to it by a number is what 11 I'm saying.

12 MR. BEU: I understand that, and I guess we've not been 13 doing that up until this point with these various things.

14 THE COURT: Well, if it's someone else's statement. If 15 it's his statement, I think that clarifies what it is. If you
16 can refer to it by some other identification other than the 17 number so that the record will be clear, I have no problem
18 with that.

19 MR. BEU: I'm thinking about assigning it an arbitrary
20 number that would be farther down the line from any that I
21 anticipate using during our presentation, your Honor.

22 THE COURT: All right.

23 MR. BEU: I'm just trying to think, but I'm not.

24 THE COURT: Counsel step up for just a moment. Let's go

1 off the record.

3 (WHEREUPON A DISCUSSION WAS HAD OFF
4 THE RECORD.)

6 MR. BEU: Thank you, judge.

7 Q (By Mr. Beu) Sergeant, I'm going to show you what 8 I've marked for identification here as Defendant's Exhibit A.

9 A Okay.

10 Q And ask you to -- to take a look at it for just a 11 moment and tell us if that is a statement that you reviewed at 12 some point after it was taken from Susan Jenkins?

13 A Sir, this is a statement that was taken by Officer
14 Hospelhorn.

15 Q Yes.

16 A It says Hospelhorn/Daniels. I don't recall if I
17 reviewed this exact document. As I mentioned earlier, there's 18 six binders full of this stuff. I can't say exactly I
19 reviewed this interview, but I would be more than happy to 20 look through it for a specific part if you would like.

21 Q If you would look on pages 1945 and 1948. Can you
22 tell us whether or not according to that transcript Susan
23 Jenkins told the officers in that statement that on August 28
24 she saw a white car with a Subway bumper sticker about four to

1 five P.M. on that Wednesday, August 25?
2 A First of all, you said on August 28th.
3 Q I meant August 25th.
4 A Okay. Can you tell me what page that was on?
5 I can save some time by going right to there, sir.
6 Q 1945, 1948, both places.
7 A All right, both places, I'm sorry.
8 Q Or one place or the other. I've got two numbers
9 written down here in my notes.
10 A Sir, on 1945 you stated -- yes, sir, on the top of 11 page 1945 -- okay, sir, you're referring to page 1945. The 12 question being asked is if they saw a car there the night, an 13 instance where they were breaking in the door, and her answer
14 is, "No, the individual came to get his keys." However, they 15 have seen another car there, a white sedan with a Subway 16 sticker. She doesn't say anything on page 1945 about it being 17 there on Wednesday --
18 Q Okay --
19 A -- on August 25.
20 Q Maybe my notes were off.
21 A Maybe on 1949, sir. I haven't had a chance to 22 review that yet.
23 Q Page 1948, doesn't it say on that page that Susan
24 Jenkins was describing as seeing the white car with the Subway

1 bumper sticker at four P.M. in the lot of Jen's building on
2 August 25th of 1993?

3 A Yes. The question asked here is on --

4 Q No, you don't need to go into all that. But, yes,
5 that's what she said, right?

6 A Yes, she said on Wednesday at four P.M. --

7 Q You don't need to read it, sir.

8 A Okay, I'm trying to answer your question, sir.

9 Q Well, I understand.

10 A Would you repeat your question for me?

11 Q You already answered it.

12 A Okay.

13 Q Now what was the date of that interview please
14 again?

15 A Day of interview was September 8th of 1993, sir.

16 Q Okay --

17 THE COURT: Mr. Beu, I wonder if before you move on to 18 another line of questioning, if you're about to move on --

19 MR. BEU: Yes.

20 THE COURT: Have you finished this line of questioning?

21 MR. BEU: Close, but --

22 THE COURT: If you have a few more questions --

23 MR. BEU: We could resume --

24 THE COURT: -- you can go ahead and finish this.

MR. BEU: Actually the line will take a little longer.
Maybe this would be a good time --

THE COURT: I think this would be an appropriate time to recess for noon. We'll resume at 1:30 this afternoon. If the jury would please leave its notebooks on the chairs, they'll be secured during the noon hour. I'll ask the bailiffs to take charge of the jury, and the witness may step down.

A Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: All right, we'll be in recess then.

(WHEREUPON THE NOON RECESS WAS HAD.)

THE COURT: All right, back on the record in 94-CF-476. Counsel and the defendant return to open court.
The witness has now resumed the witness stand. The jury is presently outside the courtroom.

Are the parties ready to continue with the trial of this case?

MR. BEU: Just one brief minute, your Honor --

THE COURT: All right, for the record, the jury has now returned to open court. Mr. Beu, you may continue your examination.

MR. BEU: Thank you, your Honor. May I approach, your Honor?

THE COURT: You may.

Q (By Mr. Beu) Sergeant, I show you what's been previously marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit A, identified apparently as a statement of a Susan Jenkins, August 31st, to Officer Hospelhorn and Daniels.

A Yes, sir.

Q Remember me talking about that earlier?

A Yes, sir.

Q I want to refer you to page 1945 of that, and then

C09723

1 let me ask you a couple of specific questions. I believe you
2 already indicated that that report was taken by those two
3 named officers, and that you perhaps had not reviewed it?

4 A Officers Hospelhorn and Daniels. --

5 Q Yes, sir.

6 A -- are the two that took the interview. I don't 7 recall specifically if I reviewed this.

8 Q All right. The young lady that was interviewed
9 August -- rather September 8th on that occasion, indicated
10 that she had seen that -- that white car with the Subway
11 bumper sticker on the Sunday previous to August 28th -- or 12 pardon me, August 25, did she not?

13 A (No audible response.)

14 Q I take it you haven't found what I'm suggesting on 15 page 1945, officer?

16 A No, sir, I haven't seen that, where on Sunday she 17 saw the vehicle there. Maybe I'm overlooking it.

18 Q Let me take it back for a moment, and maybe I can 19 help you here. I guess on that page is the point where she 20 talks about having seen that car there on Wednesday, the 25th,
21 isn't it?

22 A Yes, on this page she does say that she saw the 23 white vehicle on the 25th. She believes it to be the 25th.

24 Q Also on that page she describes having started to

1 see that vehicle around June to July, and then periodically
2 between then and the time of the homicide, right?

3 A Yes, she stated at the beginning of the summer,
4 around July, she said, "I think I might have even seen it
5 there in June every once in awhile."

6 Q Okay. Sergeant, to your knowledge, were 7 investigating officers also told on August 31 by a David
8 Singley, the person who shared the apartment across the hall
9 with Susan Jenkins, that he'd come up the stairs to --

10 MR. SOUK: Your Honor, may we approach?

11 THE COURT: You may.

12
13 (WHEREUPON A DISCUSSION WAS HAD AT 14 THE BENCH AS FOLLOWS:)

15
16 MR. SOUK: Is this going beyond the car now?

17 MR. BEU: Oh, yeah.

18 MR. SOUK: I'm going to object to going beyond the car by 19 bringing out -- going through witness statements and bringing 20 out what the witnesses said by means of cross examination of 21 Detective Freesmeyer. I did not object to it up to this 22 point, bringing up the car matter which related to Swaine
23 which the court previously indicated I had opened the door to 24 by my prior position. But, at this point, I think it's

1 improper to bring out everything that any witness may have
2 said by cross examining Detective Freesmeyer about other
3 statements. If he wants to know what they saw or heard at the 4 time of the crime, he needs to bring them in as his witnesses.

5 MR. BEU: I think we need a little conference in the side
6 conference room.

8 (WHEREUPON THE FOLLOWING PROCEEDINGS
9 WERE HAD IN A CONFERENCE ROOM OFF OF 10 THE COURTROOM AS FOLLOWS:)

11
12 THE COURT: On the record. We are now presently in a 13 conference room adjacent to the courtroom, and outside of the 14 jury's presence. Present is assistant state's attorney Souk,
15 the defendant's counsel, the court, and the court reporter.

16 Mr. Beu, are you waiving the presence of the 17 defendant for this conference?

18 MR. BEU: Yes, your Honor.

19 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Souk, did you want to speak
20 to your objection?

21 MR. SOUK: Your Honor, at this point, I believe counsel
22 has indicated that he is in this cross examination now with 23 some witness statements from other residents of the apartment
24 building going beyond where his cross examination had just

1 been, that is about possibly seeing the car driven by Michael
2 Swaine on the day of the murder, or sometime that week
3 surrounding the -- the murder. At this point in time, I am
4 objecting to any further -- the procedure now of using a
5 witness statement to, in effect, get in that witness's
6 testimony by cross examining Detective Freesmeyer about what 7 some witness said out of court. It's hearsay. I think, at 8 this point, this is going to go into, if I recall correctly,
9 things about hearing -- maybe when they heard doors slam, or 10 that sort of thing, that does not relate directly to Mr.
11 Swaine. The only evidence that I know of that -- in this 12 area that relates directly to Mr. Swaine and his potential --
13 or his alibi which we have previously proved up is the car
14 business, and I think anything beyond this point is improper.
15 Obviously it's going to be offered for the truth of what's 16 asserted in it to suggest other possible suspects, and it's 17 hearsay.

18 THE COURT: Mr. Beu?

19 MR. BEU: Mr. Souk is correct up to a point that the line
20 of questioning that I'm intending to engage in here is to 21 present to the officer questions about information provided to 22 his department by two other residents across the hall from 23 her, another resident across the parking lot from Jennifer, to 24 the effect that these people are not going to -- did not give

1 statements and won't be testifying later that they saw a
2 person or persons. But the testimony relates to time of 3 death, and also relates to the speed with which the 4 investigation narrowed itself to a single focus, rather than 5 progressing as a more broad murder investigation, which I
6 think is a relevant inquiry. The substance of what I propose
7 to question him about are statements on the -- between about 8 the 31st of August, three days after the body was found, up to 9 maybe the 9th or 10th of September. The neighbors inside the 10 same building across the hall, describing the man for one 11 thing, coming home from a class at around two P.M. that 12 afternoon, and as he enters the lower door hearing the door to 13 Jennifer's apartment slam. And then as he's inside his 14 apartment for a brief period, hearing it open again, and 15 hearing footsteps going down the stairs and out the front
16 door, not seeing anyone, not paying any attention at that 17 time. The things that he pinned down and reported to the 18 police. Also, your Honor, that during the course of that 19 afternoon he was in and out of the apartment on several 20 occasions, and that at a point sometime during the latter part
21 of the afternoon the air-conditioning in Jennifer's apartment
22 unit went through a state of being turned off to a state of 23 being turned on.

24 THE COURT: I think he needs to testify to that then, Mr.

968

AB018230

1 Beu, if that's what that witness will say.
2 MR. BEU: He shall. He will.
3 THE COURT: I'm sorry --
4 MR. BEU: I have these people under subpoena, and they 5 will appear later and testify. However, I believe that as 6 long as I tie it up, that I am fully able to cross examine 7 this witness with respect to these things at this stage to 8 show the limited focus of the investigation from a certain
9 point forward compared to the evidence that they had received.
10 THE COURT: All right. Do I understand you to be telling 11 me that you intend to have the witnesses testify who are -- 12 who you intend to question this officer on?
13 MR. BEU: Singley, Jenkins, and Ronsick, Lisa Ronsick.
14 THE COURT: Those are the only three areas of inquiry
15 that you --
16 MR. BEU: Those are the first ones that I have right now
17 that I'm on right now. I have a related extension of that 18 that relates to certain information given to the officer at an 19 even earlier stage, on the 28th of August, by Morgan Keefe who 20 has testified previously, who obviously is here and is subject
21 to recall.
22 THE COURT: All right, any further argument?
23 MR. SOUK: Well, judge, if this procedure was proper we 24 could be here for years by him cross examining the detective

C09729

1 on the substance of every statement made by every witness.
2 THE COURT: I think --
3 MR. BEU: I have half a dozen points.
4 THE COURT: I think we can establish, Mr. Beu, that on 5 such and such a date a witness made a statement to the Normal
6 Police concerning what they either saw or heard on the date of 7 August 25, 1993, yes, without going into detail as to what 8 that statement was. You're going to establish presumably what 9 that statement was when the witness testifies. It is hearsay
10 for him to now repeat what that witness told him.
11 MR. BEU: Not being offered for the truth of the 12 information. It's being offered for what they did in their 13 investigation, even though they had received such information.
14 MR. SOUK: He can ask him that. He can ask him what he 15 did after he took the statement.
16 MR. BEU: But without being able to get into the 17 substance of what was conveyed to them leading to certain
18 inferences --
19 THE COURT: Do you want leave to recall Detective
20 Freesmeyer after those witnesses testify?
21 MR. BEU: Well, I --
22 THE COURT: Let me just say this, Freesmeyer apparently 23 did not take this first statement. It was taken by 24 Hospelhorn, according to your question.

C09730

1 MR. BEU: There are apparently four statements here that
2 I'm dealing with that were taken other than by Freesmeyer,
3 himself, that's correct.

4 THE COURT: And you're wanting to establish that that
5 was, in fact, a statement taken by one of his co --
6 co-detectives, co-investigators?

7 MR. BEU: Correct.

8 THE COURT: And that based upon that, action either was 9 or wasn't taken?

10 MR. BEU: Yes.

11 THE COURT: Correct?

12 MR. BEU: Yes.

13 THE COURT: All right, once again, we're kind of getting 14 into an area where -- let me suggest that we take a brief
15 recess at this time. Mechanically you can do what you want to 16 do. There's no question legally that you have the right to 17 question this officer as to, (a) additional statements that 18 were made by other witnesses. Those can be identified, the 19 date, the time of that statement, and what the general subject
20 matter of that statement was. Whether we get into repeating 21 the total statement is, I think, where we're having some 22 difficulty.

23 MR. BEU: I've got clips on one, two, three, four, five,
24 six, seven, eight, nine, maybe ten pages out of all of this

1 stuff here, your Honor. That's all I'm intending to inquire
2 about. It's the man coming up the stairs and hearing the door
3 slam and people leaving. The air-conditioner going from a
4 state of off to on later on that day. The lady from across
5 the hallway -- across the parking lot, I'm sorry, would also 6 confirm on that day she sees the white car with the bumper
7 sticker. And she would testify in the vicinity of 10:45 or so
8 that evening she heard a female scream from that general
9 vicinity.

10 THE COURT: What time was it?

11 MR. BEU: 10:45, or approximately within 15 minutes or so
12 of that on Wednesday evening.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MR. BEU: These things go to the question of -- of when 15 things, in fact, may have happened to -- to Jennifer, and they 16 are matters surrounding the crime scene, and they are relevant 17 issues. And I think it's relevant for me to explore what they 18 did or didn't do with that sort of information.

19 THE COURT: I don't think Mr. Souk is disputing, and 20 maybe he is and I shouldn't put words in his mouth, I don't 21 think he's disputing those are relevant inquiries for you to 22 make within the context of your case or through those 23 witnesses. The issue is really whether that should be 24 presented through cross examination testimony of this witness.

MR. BEU: I understand.

THE COURT: And there's no question that you can tie the fact that statements were made by each of these witnesses in a couple of ways. You can ask this officer on the stand: Do you have in front of you, is this document a document that reflects that a statement was made by witness Jones? All right, yes, it was. And this was made on such and such a date? Yes, it was. And it related to incidences concerning August 25, between whatever hours it pertained to?

A Yes, it did. Then when witness Jones testified presumably, you can show that person that same statement, and then that way tie those issues together. The question is whether it ought be repeated by way of hearsay a couple of times. You're going to have the opportunity presumably if that witness testifies to have them testify to what they heard or what they observed. I'm wondering -- I'm going to suggest we take a brief recess and ask that you and Mr. Souk perhaps communicate a bit about how that information might be presented.

MR. BEU: Okay.

THE COURT: It may well be that there could be, in fact, a stipulation reached at some point concerning certain -- factually that certain statements were made by certain witnesses on the following dates relating to incidences

C09733

1 concerning, beginning at X time on the 25th through Y time on 2 the 25th, and the statements will obviously come out when
3 those people testify.

4 MR. BEU: Then the effect of the inability of proposing
5 what I'm intending to do robs me of a fair amount of cross
6 examination at this point, however, but we will talk.

7 THE COURT: Well, I'm not certain that I understand how 8 that will effect your cross examination.

9 MR. BEU: The point that I seek to establish through the 10 cross examination is that the information that was coming
11 through in a timely fashion to the officers was more or less
12 set aside in favor of a preconception to proceed against 13 building a case against Alan Beaman as their preferred best
14 target, and that they have continued on building their case
15 against Alan Beaman right up through and including last 16 Saturday to get to where they are now, as opposed to going on.

17 I intend to further the cross examination by asking this 18 officer which of her fellow students they followed up with,
19 which of her classes they checked for fellow students, which 20 of her sorority sisters did they talk or didn't talk to, which 21 I intend to explore some questions concerning statements made
22 on the day the body was found by Morgan Keefe to the effect
23 that the preceding Saturday they'd been together at a bar.

24 I'm not going to get into testimony concerning excessive

1 use of alcohol, but socializing is not within the bounds of 2 the limine order, and ask about did he not get information the 3 very first day that on the Saturday evening preceding this she 4 struck up a conversation with two guys in a bar and they
5 exchanged phone numbers in some fashion, and another guy,
6 another totally different guy, bought her a few drinks that
7 night. And on that occasion did not Morgan Keefe say to them
8 that Jennifer was the queen of scamming drinks from guys, and 9 this sort of thing. This is early information which I don't 10 think is followed up. I think -- I mean I think we're 11 entitled to explore that they didn't pursue a broad 12 investigation from a pretty early area.

13 THE COURT: It is not my intention to limit your cross
14 examination -

15 MR. BEU: I understand.

16 THE COURT: -- but to follow the rules of evidence in 17 doing so.

18 MR. BEU: Hm-mmm.

19 THE COURT: Now I don't think there's any question that 20 you have the right to cross examine this officer as the -- 21 apparently the officer who's been identified as kind of the 22 managing investigator, the overall investigator, as to what 23 information became known to him or other members of his 24 department, and from what sources that information came. The

1 bigger problem I guess is whether you can then just parrot the
2 testimony of those individuals, or whether that testimony
3 should come through their sworn testimony under oath.

4 MR. BEU: Hm-mmm.

5 THE COURT: It may well be that you can identify in your
6 cross examination without doing damage to your cross
7 examination to that subject matter of the conversation, what 8 it pertained to, again without reading the actual statement of 9 the -- of the witness into the record.

10 MR. BEU: The court will recall that I haven't been 11 reading the witness statement. I've been asking the witness, 12 didn't this person tell you such and such. He's been 13 responding by reading the statement.

14 THE COURT: No, no, I understand. I don't mean to 15 suggest that you were reading it or having it read by some 16 other witness.

17 MR. BEU: Nor did I ask that it be read.

18 THE COURT: All right. Okay, so you would be satisfied
19 with this witness then answering your questions in such a way, 20 if you ask a question, didn't this person tell you about their 21 hearing noises from the apartment on the afternoon of the 25th
22 --

23 MR. BEU: I could very well, very well, live with that,
24 your Honor, and ask him specific questions.

1 THE COURT: Without him parroting --
2 MR. BEU: Right.
3 THE COURT: -- the total statement?
4 MR. BEU: He could answer yes or no, and --
5 THE COURT: And could you not by directing him refer to 6 a line of the --
7 MR. BEU: Yes.
8 THE COURT: -- middle of the page --
9 MR. BEU: Sure.
10 THE COURT: -- and so forth?
11 MR. BEU: I can be more specific with respect to that.
12 I can.
13 MR. SOUK: That's a difference without a distinction.
14 I mean it's still hearsay whether he states what the substance
15 of the statement is or whether somebody reads verbatim what it
16 is. It's still getting in what the witness said through 17 somebody else. He needs to call the witness first and testify
18 to what they saw, other than the general subject matter of the 19 interviews; did you interview them about what they knew about 20 this crime being a resident there, or whatever. Going beyond
21 that is not proper at this point where we are now. It just -- 22 you know, he can ask him, you know, did you interview these 23 people? Did you do any follow-up? Did you interview any 24 other people? He can ask if he interviewed sorority sisters,

C09737

1 or the whole campus, or the whole world, but going into last
2 Saturday night in the bar and that she was exchanging phone
3 messages or phone numbers with somebody, and that she's the 4 queen of scamming drinks, that goes well into an area that's 5 been covered by a motion in limine and starting to suggest now
6 unknown perpetrators.

7 THE COURT: I'm going to -- I'm going to ask that the 8 jury leave the courtroom for a few minutes while we try to 9 sort this matter out instead of having them sit out there.

10 All right?

12 (WHEREUPON THE FOLLOWING PROCEEDINGS
13 WERE HAD IN THE PRESENCE OF THE JURY:)

14
15 THE COURT: All right, back on the record. Show that the 16 court, assistant state's attorney Souk, and attorney Beu have 17 now returned from a conference room adjacent to the courtroom.

18 I'm going to ask that the jury please go with the 19 bailiffs back to the deliberation room for just a few minutes, 20 and you will be brought back in to begin the resumed trial in 21 this case. If you would please leave your books where they 22 are on your chairs. Bailiffs are to take charge of the jury.

23 All right, court will take a brief recess at this
24 time. I'd like counsel to step back please.

C09738

1 (WHEREUPON A BRIEF RECESS WAS HAD.)

3 THE COURT: All right, back on the record. Counsel and
4 the defendant appear in open court. The jury is presently
5 outside of the courtroom. I would note for the record that 6 the court has had a conversation with counsel in chambers
7 regarding the issues that have been addressed in the side bar
8 conference that the court conducted. Do either counsel want 9 to make any further argument on the record regarding those 10 issues?

11 MR. SOUK: I think I made -- I've made my point, your 12 Honor.

13 THE COURT: Mr. Beu?

14 MR. BEU: Your Honor, I made my point to the court. I
15 had a preferred procedure, but I've suggested to the court
16 that I could live with a suggestion that the court has made to 17 get around certain confusion.

18 THE COURT: The issue relates to the hearsay nature of 19 certain testimony that would be elicited through this witness
20 as to what other persons may have said in statements given by 21 them. It's my understanding, Mr. Beu, from you that you
22 intend to call those persons as witnesses during your case.
23 Is that correct?

24 MR. BEU: Yes.

1 THE COURT: And therefore the court today would be ruling
2 that an objection by the state will be sustained as to 3 soliciting from Officer Freesmeyer specific statements under 4 oath today as to what those witnesses told police
5 investigators. You may establish that statements were given
6 to police investigators, the dates of those statements, who
7 made the statements, and what time frame those statements
8 concern, but not the specificity of the statements until after 9 those persons have testified. Is that understood?

10 MR. BEU: Yes, sir.

11 THE COURT: We'll bring the jury back out then.

12
13 (WHEREUPON THE JURY ENTERED THE COURTROOM

15
16 THE COURT: All right, for the record, the jury has now
17 returned to the courtroom. Mr. Beu, you may continue your 18 examination.

19 MR. BEU: Thank you, your Honor. May I approach, your 20 Honor?

21 THE COURT: You may.

22 Q (By Mr. Beu) Sgt. Freesmeyer, I'm going to show you
23 what I've marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit B
24 and ask you, first of all, if that appears to be a transcript

1 of a statement given by one David Singley to Detective
2 Hospelhorn, August 31, 1993?

3 A Yes, sir, that is what that appears to be.

4 Q And does that -- a portion at least of this
5 statement, relate or contain information provided by Mr.
6 Singley concerning first-hand observations of his apartment
7 building occupied not only by him, but also by Jennifer
8 Lockmiller, at the time during the afternoon and very early
9 evening of August 25th of 1993?

10 A Sir, first of all, that was a very long question.
11 Second of all --

12 Q Yes, it was.

13 A -- you're asking what it contains, sir.

14 Q Having asked the long question, I'll now ask a 15 shorter question to help pin this down. Do portions of this 16 statement contain information from Mr. Singley about things he 17 saw and heard during the afternoon of August 25, 1993?

18 A I would have to look at the report, sir.

19 Q I've clipped certain ones for your quick reference.

20 MR. SOUK: Your Honor, to simplify matters, we would 21 stipulate that Mr. Singley was questioned about his knowledge
22 on the day of the murder.

23 MR. BEU: Would the stipulation extend to time frame from 24 around two o'clock until approximately 5:15 that afternoon?

1 MR. SOUK: The day of the murder, whole day.
2 THE COURT: All right, is that stipulation acceptable for 3 you?
4 MR. BEU: It is.
5 THE COURT: Or do you want further inquiry? You may, if 6 you want to.
7 MR. BEU: That's fine.
8 THE COURT: All right, that stipulation will be reflected
9 of record.
10 Q (By Mr. Beu) Sergeant, I'll show you what's been 11 marked as Defendant's Exhibit C and ask you if this is a
12 transcript of the statement given by the same David Singley,
13 September 8th, 1993, to Detective Hospelhorn and Detective
14 Tony Daniels?
15 A Yes, sir, this does appear to be a statement given
16 to Hospelhorn and Daniels on September 8th.
17 MR. SOUK: We'd again stipulate that he was questioned
18 about his knowledge regarding the day of the murder, August
19 25th, 1993.
20 MR. BEU: Under the circumstances, that statement -- that 21 stipulation will be acceptable.
22 THE COURT: All right, that stipulation will be reflected
23 of record.
24 Q (By Mr. Beu) Sergeant, I show you what I've marked

1 for identification as Defendant's Exhibit D, and ask you
2 whether it is a copy of a tran -- or a transcript of a
3 statement given by one Lisa Ronsick, August 31, 1993, to an 4 officer of the Normal Police Department?

5 A Yes, sir, that appears to be a transcript of the 6 statement given to a police officer on August 31st, 1993,
7 10:37 A.M.

8 Q From looking at that, can you identify the officer
9 to whom that statement was given?

10 A Yes, the names before say Dave and Lisa, so I'm 11 assuming Detective Dave Warner.

12 Q Dave Warner?

13 A He's the only Dave in the detective division.

14 Q Okay, thank you.

15 A That would be my assumption, sir.

16 MR. SOUK: Show the same stipulation on that.

17 THE COURT: Would that be acceptable?

18 MR. BEU: Would that stipulation extend to the time
19 between 10:45 and 11:00 P.M. that night?

20 MR. SOUK: Sure.

21 MR. BEU: That's acceptable.

22 THE COURT: You want to state the stipulation then for 23 the record as you understand that, and then I'll confirm that 24 with the state.

1 MR. BEU: I believe that they're stipulating, your Honor,
2 that this statement contains statements made by Lisa Ronsick
3 concerning observations, things she saw and heard, on August
4 25 during the day and into -- late as 10:45 to 11 o'clock at 5 night.

6 THE COURT: Is that your stipulation?

7 MR. SOUK: That's mine, your Honor.

8 THE COURT: All right, that stipulation will be reflected
9 of record.

10 Q (By Mr. Beu) Show you what I've had marked as 11 Defendant's Exhibit E and ask you whether this is a transcript
12 of a statement given by one Morgan Keefe on August 28, 1993,
13 to Detective Dave Warner of the Normal Police Department?

14 A Yes, sir, it appears to be. Also Detective Daniels
15 was there at the time.

16 MR. BEU: Thank you.

17 MR. SOUK: We'd stipulate in regards to that statement
18 that Miss Keefe was questioned about her knowledge of the week
19 of the murder, and also her contacts with the victim the week
20 prior to the murder, week prior to August 25.

21 MR. BEU: If that stipulation would specifically include
22 the preceding Saturday, that would be an acceptable
23 stipulation.

24 MR. SOUK: She was questioned about that. Yes, that is

MR. BEU: Thank you.

Q (By Mr. Beu) Sergeant, I show you what's been marked for identification as Defendant's Exhibit F and ask you if this is a transcript of a statement given by Morgan Keefe on September 10, 1993, to Detective Rob Hospelhorn of the Normal Police Department?

A No, sir, this was given to Detective Tony Daniels of the Normal Police Department. Rob Hospelhorn was just present.

Q The officers present were whom?

A Detective Tony Daniels and Detective Rob Hospelhorn. Detective Daniels began the interview. You'll note his name off to the left.

Q Yes. Both names appear in the first paragraph?

A Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q Right. And in this statement, did Morgan give general information concerning her acquaintance with Jennifer Lockmiller over a period of time?

A Did she give statements about her acquaintance with Jennifer Lockmiller? Is that what you're asking?

Q Yes.

Q Officer Freesmeyer, if you recall, when you arrived at the crime scene and entered [REDACTED], were the lights in the living room of that apartment on?

A Sir, I don't recall that, and I don't believe it is noted in my police report.

Q You've identified a number of letters which you recovered from Jennifer's apartment which have been displayed here and which appear to have been written by Alan to Jennifer?

A Yes, that is correct.

Q If you can recall without looking at those letters, were any of them dated?

A I don't recall dates on the letters, sir.

Q Are you satisfied enough that they were not dated without looking again physically at the exhibits?

A Sir, I don't recall any dates on them. To be -- to say absolutely positive there are no dates, I'm afraid I would have to look at the exhibits.

MR. SOUK: Judge, my recollection is that there's no dates on the letters. We'd stipulate to that.

MR. BEU: Stipulation that they're undated?

Q (By Mr. Beu) Officer, to the best of your knowledge, were any of those letter documents put through any sort of lab testing to determine the age of the paper, or the ink?

A No, sir, they were not.

Q Any other sort of testing to seek to age them?

A No, sir, they were not.

Q It's your understanding that Jennifer and Alan had first started a close relationship back in July of '92. Is that correct?

A July of '92, yes, sir.

Q You are aware, are you not, of forensic testing that can be done seeking to determine, for example, age of paper?

A I'm not a forensic scientist, sir. I'm not familiar with that process.

Q I know, I'm not asking about the process or how it's done, because I wouldn't have the slightest idea either. But are you aware that there is available testing that could attempt to do that?

C09747

1           A    No, sir, that's not something that I have ever
2 done.

3           Q    Or had occasion to ask anyone to do?

4           A    I've never had occasion to ask anybody to do that,
5 that's correct, sir.

6           Q    Did you make any inquiry through any other
7 departmental sources as to whether such testing would be 8 available in this case?

9           A    No, sir, I did not.

10          Q    During your investigation, sir, did you receive
11 first-hand information from any person of any physical harm
12 done by Alan Beaman to Jennifer?

13          A    No, sir, I did not.

14          Q    On Sunday, August 29, sergeant, is it correct that 15 you had a group meeting of various of the investigative 16 officials on this case, and that would be on page 180 of 17 discovery, sir?

18          A    Sir, I don't have page 180 with me in my report.

19          Q    Page 11 of your report?

20          A    Yes, I understand, I don't have that with me. We 21 used that in a different part of the testimony. Yes, I
22 believe we did start the day of with a meeting on the 29th.

23          Q    Did that include coroner Brady?

24          A    I'd have to refer to my report to find out exactly

1 who was there.

2 Q And you do not have that in your hand?

3 A As I mentioned, I don't have page 11 with me. I
4 don't have page seven through 11 of my report, because we 5 used that in a different part of the courtroom.

6 MR. SOUK: Could we approach?

15 MR. BEU: My intention is to ask him if the autopsy had 16 been completed by that time.

17 THE COURT: Just want to ask some factual questions in 18 relationship to that?

19 MR. BEU: No, no --

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. BEU: First I want to ask that.

22 THE COURT: Right.

MR. SOUK: Doctor Schnittker testified as to cause of death. Coroner Brady did not testify as to cause of death.

THE COURT: Objection is going to be sustained.

THE COURT: Proceed.

Q (By Mr. Beu) Did you, as part of your investigation on October 5th of 1993, consult with an Illinois State Police profiler?

A No, sir, I did not do that personally. I did not meet the profiler at all during this investigation.

Q You didn't use one, or you didn't meet with one?

A I did not meet with one, and I didn't have any involvement in that process.

witness.

MR. BEU: I'm not going to ask any questions about what the profile was about.

Police profiler?

A Yes, sir.

Q On February 18, 1994, did you or others have some consultation with the Chicago, Illinois Police Department?

A Yes, sir, we did.

Q Were you a participant in that?

A Yes, sir, I was.

Q Was that generally because they're a very big department?

A Yes, sir, they handle many homicides, and we don't handle very many at all. We were seeking their assistance.

Q And was that the extent, other than the laboratory work that's been described here, of outside resources that you brought to bear on this case?

A Give me a moment to think, sir, it's been quite a long investigation. We did call upon the state's attorney's office for the use of Lt. John Brown. He was outside the Normal Police Department. We requested assistance from the coroner at the scene to video tape the scene, since we were not present there. Yes, we did request the Chicago Police Department to review our report to see if they had any suggestions. We assisted -- or we requested the assistance of the Illinois State Police for their use as with the crime scene technician and the lab work as you mentioned.

Q That would be Dean Kennedy?

A Yes, the technician, but then other lab work done by numerous other people through the forensic sciences area.

Q Correct.

A I believe those are the major ones, sir. I might be missing something minor, but I believe those are the major ones.

Q Did you, to your knowledge, submit any of the unidentified fingerprints from the crime scene, including the one from the clock radio, to the Automated Fingerprint Identification System run by the State of Illinois?

A I did not personally do that, no.

Q To your knowledge, did anyone in connection with your department do that?

A To my knowledge, I don't know of anybody that did that. Not to say that it wasn't done, but I don't know who did it.

Q Do I understand that you became the chief assigned supervising detective in October?

A As I mentioned, sir, I wasn't supervising anybody on the crew. I was just a detective. I was the main person working the case. If you want to use the term lead detective, I guess we could do that.

Q From what date approximately?

1. A October or November through the current time.

2. Q You're familiar with that the State of Illinois
3. does have such an identification system in place?

4. A Yes, sir, I'm aware of that.

5. Q And does that provide the capacity you have
6. computer searches made to possibly even identify individual
7. fingerprints through a fingerprint bank?

8. A Yes, if you have enough ridge detail, my
9. understanding, on the print, if you have a good enough print
10. you can send it in.

11. Q Did I -- did I understand you to say at one point,
12. sir, during your direct examination, that you took a
13. different approach in dealing with Mr. Beaman than Tony
14. Daniels did?

15. A Yes, sir, I did.

16. Q Did I understand you to use the term you were
17. civil?

18. A I certainly didn't mean to slight Detective
19. Daniels. I took a different approach, sir. Mine was more
20. of a soft approach.

21. Q Is there such a thing as, in police work, as a
22. good guy/bad guy approach?

23. A Yes, there is.

24. Q Had you consciously assigned yourself a role in this regard?

A As the good guy/bad guy routine?

Q Yes, sir.

A No, sir, I did not.

Q Is it safe to say that you fit the good guy role better than comparatively perhaps, in your technique, than Officer Daniels?

A If we had used that technique, yes, I would have, I assume, been the good guy.

Q Did you or anyone else to your knowledge, sir, obtain the records concerning Jennifer's class schedules for the period of time that she attended ISU and Wesleyan?

A I don't know that we collected her records from Wesleyan. We did collect her records of the classes she was currently enrolled in in a way to find out what time the homicide occurred.

Q I guess more specifically I'm wondering, did you obtain the records of who her fellow classmates were in those classes?

A For the 11 o'clock class, yes, I did. I obtained a seating chart from Dr. Eaton and the class list. From Dr. Brown we obtained a class listing. I believe he was -- just a moment, I'm not sure if it was Dr. Brown or not. The two o'clock instructor, we obtained a class listing of people in 1 that class.

2 Q It came to your attention, did it not, that she
3 had lived in this community for some years?

4 A I really didn't know at the onset of the 5 investigation how long she had been living here, sir.

6 Q At some point you found out how long she'd been a
7 student between ISU and Wesleyan?

8 A Yes, approximately. My understanding she'd been 9 there about three or four years. She was a senior at ISU.

10 Q Did you not check any further class lists and 11 fellow classmates beyond the ones that she was scheduled to 12 take the day she was killed?

13 A Could you tell me what you're referring to? Are 14 you referring to past semesters?

15 Q The summer, any semester prior to that?

16 A No, we didn't check past semesters, sir.

17 Q So you had no way of checking what persons might 18 have had multiple classes with her?

19 A No, sir, we didn't go into that.

20 Q Nor any information generated then as to who might 21 also know her well and could provide information concerning
22 her associates, things of that nature?

23 A I'm sorry, would you repeat the question?

(WHEREUPON THE LAST QUESTION WAS READ BACK BY THE REPORTER.)

A The main way we went about finding out who her friends were and associates --

Q Excuse me, officer, the answer is yes or no?

A I'm sorry, I didn't understand the question that way. Is the question then through class records were we able to find out other associates?

Q No. The question was, isn't it true then that you didn't have the opportunity to check through such records if you didn't get them --

A Well, yes --

Q -- that information?

A That's true. If we didn't get them, then we couldn't have checked through them.

Q Did you determine that she belonged to a sorority sister -- sorority on campus?

A At one point we were aware she belonged to a sorority, yes.

Q Was that at Wesleyan or ISU?

A It was my understanding it was at Wesleyan.

Q That would have been then sometime back?

A Yes.

1 Q Did you gain information as to whether or not she
2 had joined a sorority at ISU?

3 A No, sir, I did not.

4 Q You don't know then one way or another from your
5 investigation?

6 A No, sir.

7 Q You had some conversation, you or other officers
8 in the department, with Vidette personnel, right, the ISU
9 school newspaper?

10 A I did not have conversations with them, sir.

11 Q Any other officers that did?

12 A Sir, I don't know what other officers would have 13 had contact with The Vidette. If there's a specific 14 document you're pertaining to, I'd be happy to look at it.

15 Q No, sir, I'm simply wondering whether anyone in 16 your department checked with the personnel at The Vidette
17 newspaper where she worked.

18 A Not that I know of, sir.

19 Q Your investigation did not check into then whether 20 she socialized with people from there, knew people through 21 that, those sorts of things?

22 A Well, by talking to her friends, we were finding 23 out who she was associating with. Nobody else really came 24 up that she was hanging around with.

Q At some point I believe you indicated that you told Alan Beaman that he was going to be arrested and you were simply waiting on the results of some lab tests?

A Yes, sir, that's correct.

Q What were those lab tests, sir?

A We were still waiting on DNA results to come back. We still had items that needed to be fingerprinted. At the time, due to the backup at the crime lab, it was taking awhile to get that done.

Q When did those tests come in approximately?

A I would have to guess probably May. I don't know for sure without looking at the dates on the lab reports, sir.

Q Some of those test results didn't even come in until far after the arrest, did they?

A That's very possible, sir.

Q I take it that when the last tests did come in, they showed what's been presented in this courtroom?

A Yes, sir, they did.

Q Was there any significant difference between your statement about lab tests and Daniels' statement about witnesses in Bloomington that was told to Mr. Beaman?

MR. SOUK: Judge, I'm going to object to the form of that question. If he wants to ask the officer if it was a

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SOUK:

Q Detective, in response to Mr. Beu's questions, I believe you previously indicated that in doing this mileage chart this was, while it was prepared later, this was based on your mileage runs basically prior to the grand jury, correct?

A Yes, that is correct.

Q And if I could point near the top, there's -- well, the first entry is Sears to the Beaman residence, which was a trip home from getting the tires, correct?

A Yes, that's correct.

Q On Tuesday night. And then the next one is Beaman residence to David Olson's residence. Did you have some information that later Tuesday night Mr. Beaman went to a David Olson's house?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And then from David Olson's house did he go to work at Sandy Hollow?

A Yes.

Q And up until the grand jury, was it your belief, based on all the statements that he'd given, that he went from Sandy Hollow to Bell Federal, 4.6 miles, and then went from Bell Federal to his -- to his residence where he said he went to bed at 11.7 miles?

A At the time of that preparation, yes, that was my understanding.

Q Now originally after his original statement to Daniels and his first statement to you, you wouldn't even have had the Sandy Hollow/Bell Federal, Bell Federal/Beaman in there, because at that point he hadn't told you about Bell Federal, right?

A That is correct.

Q All right. Now at the grand jury, Mr. Beaman

C09761

1 indicated for the first time that after he left work that
2 morning, that he went home, went to the bank, and then went
3 back home and went to sleep, correct?

4 A Yes, that's correct.

5 Q If we did the chart so that that occurred, and I'm 6 sorry, I'm going to need another slide. If we could have 7 the one of that route from Sandy Hollow to --

8 A The remote control is over by the -

9 Q Oh, I'm sorry, you don't have the remote control.

10 A It's over by the machine.

11 Q The slide we're now looking at shows -- I'm sorry, 12 I'm in your way -- shows that route from, as I'm pointing to 13 it on the slide here, from Sandy Hollow store up to Mr.
14 Beaman's house, and then the route to Bell Federal, and then
15 the same route back home, correct?

16 A Yes, sir, that would be shown on the map.

17 Q Okay. If you used the mileages that you have 18 previously done, the Sandy Hollow to the Beaman residence I 19 believe was --

20 A 13.8 miles, sir.

21 Q All right. And the distance that you previously
22 measured from the Beaman residence to Bell Federal was 11.7
23 miles, correct?

24 A That is correct, sir.

1002

C09762

AB018264

1 Q So if you took that route in making up the chart,
2 it would be 13.7 to his home, and then 11.7, plus 11.7 for
3 the -- for the round trip to Bell Federal, correct?
4 A That is correct.
5 Q And that would be basically close to 40 miles as 6 opposed to what you previously had up there, which is closer
7 to about 16 miles for that portion, correct?
8 A That's correct, it would be close to 37, 38 miles.
9 Q So that would add somewhere in, without being 10 precise, somewhere in the area of 25 miles or so, correct?
11 A Yes, ballpark figure.
12 Q And Mr. Beu had asked you about a Saturday
13 afternoon trip possibly to the church and back to practice
14 with the -- with Mr. Olson, who's testified. Was that trip,
15 even up through the grand jury, the subject of some dispute
16 or some difference in memories of people as to whether it
17 actually took place?
18 A My understanding, yes. It was never really 19 confirmed.
20 Q But assuming that it did take place, you
21 previously had measured that distance from the Beaman home
22 to the church on the last, on the last entry, correct?
23 A Correct, 10.7 miles.
24 Q So that would add basically a round -- another

C09763

1 round trip to the church would add another 21.4 miles,
2 correct?

3 A 21.4 miles, yes, sir.

4 Q So if those two items were added in there, total
5 distance traveled would still be under 260 miles basically,
6 correct?

7 A Yes, sir.

8 Q I'm not going to put the slide back up, but in 9 your slide of the discussions of the routes that you
10 measured regarding Mrs. Beaman and her travels and 11 whereabouts that day, you had included Auburn High School on 12 that chart, correct?

13 A Yes, sir, I did.

14 Q And you had indicated to Mr. Beu that after May 15 18th, basically when she first told authorities about this,
16 that Mrs. Beaman indicated that she went to the grocery
17 store as her last stop and then went straight home, correct?

18 A Yes, that is correct.

19 Q And that it's approximately a 12 minute or so ride
20 directly to her home, and she would have been home by 2:15
21 after leaving the store at 2:03, right?

22 A That's correct, 2:15 is the time she gave.

23 Q In measuring the distances and timing then, if she 24 had gone directly home from the IGA store to her house, do

C09764

1 you think that's pretty accurate that she would have been
2 home about 2:15?

3 A Yeah, I think that's fairly accurate.

4 Q In looking at the grocery receipt that was
5 provided to you, were there certain frozen food items listed
6 on there?

7 A Yes, sir, there were. If I could see the receipt
8 again I could be more specific.

9 Q Well, I don't think we need to do that. And in 10 Mrs. Beaman's grand jury testimony, did she indicate that 11 she had bought some items for her school lunches starting
12 the next week?

13 A Yes, she did.

14 Q And did that information have something to do with 15 your checking out the Auburn school and measuring those 16 routes?

17 A Yes, that was my reasoning.

18 Q Now in fairness, she has never told anyone that 19 she stopped at Auburn school. Is that right?

20 A Yeah, that is correct.

21 Q Did you also as part of your investigation at my 22 request, go to Auburn school and determine whether they have 23 a refrigerator there, or refrigerator/freezer, or whatever,
24 for the teachers to use in keeping their lunches and so forth?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q And what was the result of that?

A Well, I found out as I stepped in the front door, went to the left, there's a teachers' lounge on the right. Right inside the door, on the right, was a refrigerator for teachers' use.

Q Mr. Beu asked you about your interview with Mr. Swaine, and afterwards making available to him, or referring to him if he needed some counseling services and this sort of thing.

A Yes, he did ask me about that.

Q And you did something of that type for Mr. Swaine?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q Why did you do that at that time?

A Well, I felt my job as a police officer was more than just trying to find who the suspect was. It was also to help people that might be shaken up about a recent homicide about somebody they cared for. Mike Swaine was obviously shaken. His hands were shaking when I initially got him. He was very upset, and I didn't feel comfortable as a police officer, even as a person, turning this person out the front door when he just found out that somebody he really cared about had been murdered. And therefore, I felt

C09766

1 it was in his best interest to find somebody to do some
2 counseling with him.

3 Q You indicated the information you'd received in 4 this investigation did not include evidence from any
5 witnesses who could verify that prior to the murder that Mr.
6 Beaman had ever physically hurt Miss Lockmiller. Is that
7 correct?

8 A That's correct.

9 Q Let me ask you a few more questions about the --
10 conducting this investigation. First, I think you had 11 indicated as your own background and experience that you had 12 had some prior experience as a correctional officer in 13 another state?

14 A Yes, sir, I did.

15 Q What was that for?

16 A That was the State of Arizona, I worked for the 17 Department of Corrections.

18 Q And how long did you work out there?

19 A It was approximately eight to nine months.

20 Q And then you relocated here and became a
21 correctional officer in Champaign County?

22 A Yes, sir. I'm originally from Illinois, moved
23 back to Champaign, and was hired by Champaign County.

24 Q Then was it 1990 you were hired by the Normal

Police Department?

A Yes, March 12th of 1990.

Q How soon after you became a uniformed officer were you promoted to detective?

A Approximately 11 months, sir.

Q You've recently -- fairly recently been promoted to sergeant. Is that correct?

A Yes, sir.

Q Does your department have any recent type of certification?

A Yes, sir, we do. We are CALEA certified through the law enforcement accreditation association. We're one of only three departments in the State of Illinois that have met the 500 guidelines to be accredited by the law enforcement accreditation service company. It's commissioned on law enforcement accreditation. There's only about 42 departments nationwide who are CALEA accredited. Ours is one of them.

Q You indicated your department had just two homicides recently?

A Yes, sir, the Lockmiller being the first one, and then another one occurring in August of '94.

Q And you worked on both of those?

A Yes, sir, I did.

1008

C09768

AB018270

1 Q Other than homicides, does your department handle
2 a lot of major crime?

3 A Yes, sir, whatever occurs within our city.

4 Q Any of the investigatory techniques that are used
5 in a homicide used also in other major crimes?

6 A Yes, sir, a lot of them are very standard as far
7 as protecting a crime scene.

8 Q The people who went in and out of the crime scene,
9 you mentioned a number of people who were there, including
10 the chief. Do you know if all of those people went in for a 11 brief look like yourself, or are you just stating the people
12 that were standing outside?

13 A I'm stating the people who were present at the 14 scene. I'm not saying that all of them went into the 15 apartment.

16 Q And after you got there, to the best of your 17 knowledge, I believe you previously indicated you went in 18 there for a very brief look of under a minute, correct?

19 A Yes, sir, I did.

20 Q Did anybody else that you know of do that prior to 21 the crime scene technician arriving?

22 A I can't say for sure, sir.

23 Q Would anyone have been allowed more than a brief

there?

A No, sir.

Q Is it part of the training and procedures that you have received as a detective and that's standard practice with your department that when a person is obviously deceased that the scene is not disturbed until the crime scene tech gets there?

A That is correct.

Q In the case where the person is not obviously deceased, I take it sometimes the crime scene would be disturbed because of life saving efforts?

A Of course, if there's any possibility of saving a life, then the body would obviously be removed immediately and all attempts would be made.

Q Mr. Beu asked you about several people who made you aware of a car, presumably one similar to Mr. Swaine's, they might have seen that week?

A Yes.

Q First, you'd indicated the written statement from those witnesses -- I'm sorry, could I get the -- Defendant's Exhibit A, Susan Jenkins, Defendant's Exhibit C, David Singley. Those were two other residents of the building, correct?

A Yes, sir, they lived in Apt. 3 across from where

Miss Lockmiller was living.

Q You didn't take their formal statements that are contained there, did you?

A No, sir, I did not.

Q Okay. Had you talked to them before?

A Yes, sir, I did.

Q When did you talk to them?

A As I noted earlier, I was the first detective on the scene. I waited at the scene for any neighbors or friends that might have happened by. At that time, David Singley and Susan Jenkins did come onto the scene, and I had occasion to talk to them at that time.

Q How about Lisa Ronsick, Defendant's Exhibit D. She lived in the next building, right?

A Yes, she lived in the building south. I had an occasion to speak with her at her place of employment, which I believe is Tobin's Pizza.

Q Again, was that the day of finding the body?

A No, that was several days after when I spoke to Lisa Ronsick.

Q But her formal statement was taken at a later time by another officer?

A Yes, sir. I did not take her statement.

Q And you also talked to some other residents of the 1 apartment building the same day as the body was found,

2 didn't you?

3 A Yes, sir, I spoke to the two people that lived
4 directly below Miss Lockmiller.

5 Q Two young ladies?

6 A Yes, sir.

7 Q Any of the young women you interviewed who lived
8 in the building have blond hair like Jennifer's?

9 A Not that I know of, sir. No, sir, not long blond
10 hair.

11 Q The gentleman you testified -- or that you
12 interviewed who lived there, did he have long dark hair like 13 Mr. Beaman's?

14 A No, David Singley had short hair.

15 Q In following up your investigation about the 16 possible sighting of this car, now you've already testified
17 about checking out Mr. Swaine's alibi at various times,
18 correct?

19 A Yes, sir.

20 Q In addition to that, did you do anything to 21 determine whether these witnesses who thought they may have 22 seen this car, whether they could actually identify it?

23 A Yes, sir, I did.

24 Q What did you do?

1012

C09772

AB018274

1           A     Detective Warner and myself, after hearing that
2 they thought they saw Mr. Swaine's vehicle outside, went 3 throughout the Bloomington/Normal area. First of all, we
4 went to Michael Swaine's apartment and we took photographs
5 of the vehicle he was driving, the white Pontiac with the 6 Subway bumper sticker on the back. We then went to areas
7 near there and took three other photographs of like
8 vehicles, same size, same basic dimensions, took a back rear
9 shot and side shot of four different vehicles, the one Mr.
10 Swaine was driving being one of those four.

11           Q     And did you, in effect, do a car photo line-up
12 with the witnesses who thought they'd seen this car?

13           A     Yes, sir, I did.

14           Q     Anybody able to pick it out?

15           A     No, sir. I first went back and showed all four 16 pictures to David Singley and Susan Jenkins. After looking 17 at all four photos, they could not identify the vehicle that 18 they saw on that day. I then took the photos to Tobin's and 19 showed them to Lisa Ronsick, and she was also not able to 20 tell us what vehicle she saw that day out of the four she 21 saw in the pictures.

22           Q     Mr. Swaine previously indicated in his testimony
23 with me that he drove that car up to Elmhurst. He went with 24 a person named Kyle Humphrey?

1 A Yes, sir, that's correct.

2 Q Did you interview Kyle Humphrey in connection with
3 this investigation?

4 A I did not do the interview, but I believe somebody
5 from our department did, sir.

6 Q You indicated that in response to Mr. Beu's
7 question that you didn't get Jennifer's class schedules from 8 prior semesters or that sort of thing?

9 A No, sir, I did not.

10 Q And go back and check out her sorority at Illinois
11 Wesleyan?

12 A No, sir, we didn't necessarily see a need for 13 that.

14 Q To the best of your knowledge, you didn't know
15 whether or not she was in a sorority when she transferred to 16 Illinois State?

17 A I knew she was in a Wesleyan sorority from talking 18 to Mr. Swaine, but I didn't know of a sorority she would 19 have been in at ISU.

20 Q Could you -- I know it may be hard to approximate,
21 but after getting into the investigation and initially 22 talking with people who knew her, like Morgan Keefe and 23 Michael Swaine, did you come up with the names of a number 24 of people who had known her and had substantial contact with

1014

C09774

AB018276

APPENDIX 003197

1 her that summer?

2 A Oh, yes, we came up with quite a few people.

3 Q Any -- could you estimate how many people were 4 interviewed that knew her that summer in connection with
5 this investigation?

6 A I would guess anywhere from 60 to a hundred people
7 were interviewed.

8 Q Did you feel that the information you received in 9 conducting the investigation that way was sufficient for 10 your purposes?

11 A Yes, sir, I certainly did.

12 Q Now regarding The Vidette, Lori Itano was a person
13 at The Vidette that was interviewed obviously, correct?

14 A Yes, she was.

15 Q And the consultations that you had with other 16 departments, for example, the Chicago Police Department in 17 February, would you tell us why that consultation was done?

18 A Sure. As I mentioned, we only had two homicides 19 in the City of Normal. I certainly don't claim to be an 20 expert, and any help that I can get or any other suggestions
21 that any other department can make that we could follow, I
22 was more than open for that. And this was a suggestion that 23 the chief of police for our department suggested. He knew 24 some people from Chicago. He asked them to send a copy of

1 our case report to them, asked them to read the report, and 2 then followed up with a later interview -- or meeting with 3 the Chicago detectives from the homicide division.

4 Q You're not too proud to have your work looked at 5 by somebody else?

6 A No, sir, not at all.

7 Q After that consultation, were any substantial
8 suggestions made to you by the Chicago Department for 9 anything that you had left undone?

10 A No, not necessarily. They commented on the 11 thoroughness of our investigation, and stated that they 12 really didn't have any other suggestions that came to mind
13 immediately that we had not already tried. Their suggestion
14 to us was to continue to try to talk to Alan Beaman as long
15 as we could.

16 Q Now in that regard, you indicated that, if you
17 will, you took the kinder, gentler approach with Mr. Beaman?

18 A Yes, sir, I did.

19 Q And there's already been testimony of several 20 occasions where he had some problems, if you will, both with 21 Detective Daniels and later with Lt. Brown, correct?

22 A Yes, sir.

23 Q And you were actually in the room and sort of 24 involved in the Lt. Brown situation, correct?

A That is correct.

Q But as you've testified, you were able to reestablish contact with Mr. Beaman and keep talking with him through the winter, correct?

A Yes, sir, I was.

Q The fingerprint system that was mentioned, the Automated Fingerprint System, that's actually a system that is available and works through the Morton Crime Lab, correct?

A It works through the state. The Morton Crime Lab is a facility that can enter into AFIS.

Q You need special equipment to do that, right?

A Yes, you do. To enter that information into AFIS you do need special equipment.

Q And that equipment is available at the Morton Crime Lab where Mr. Dierker works, correct?

A Yes, it is.

Q Also to analyze any information coming out of that system you need a fingerprint expert like Mr. Dierker, don't you?

A That is correct, to determine if the print is good enough to go into AFIS and suitable for AFIS capabilities you would have to have an expert look at it.

Q Based on your contact with Mr. Dierker in this

1 investigation, do you know whether or not he used the AFIS
2 system?

3 A No, sir, I don't know whether he did or not. It
4 was my assumption that --

5 MR. BEU: Object to the assumption, your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Objection is sustained as to assumption.

7 Q (By Mr. Souk) You were never made aware whether 8 that was one of the things that he used?

9 A No, sir, I was not made aware.

10 MR. SOUK: I believe that's all, thank you.

11 THE COURT: Mr. Beu?

12 MR. BEU: Thank you, judge.

13 May I approach, your Honor?

RE CROSS EXAMINATION

20

Q Officer, I show you what's been previously marked 21 as People's Exhibit 2-A which has been identified as the 22 receipt from Gray's IGA store.

23

A Yes, sir.

24

Q Can you identify any of those items on there as 1018

1 being frozen goods?
2 A There's two sections that say meat, a dollar,
3 ninety-nine, meat, a dollar, ninety-nine, bratwurst, three-
4 o-eight. There also Dub franks. There's - I'm sorry,
5 that's not a frozen item, but there is perishable items.
6 Would that count, sir?
7 Q First asking about frozen.
8 A Okay, nothing indicates that it was frozen, but 9 there are meats.
10 Q Okay. You can't tell from that receipt whether 11 they were frozen items or not, correct?
12 A No, you can't tell whether they're frozen or 13 refrigerated.
14 Q At least one of the items that is listed is Brat -
16 A Bratwurst.
17 Q The others are not listed as to what they are?
18 A A listing for Dub franks, right here, sir.
19 Q Okay. So we've got a meat listing up here, right, 20 once?
21 A Correct.
22 Q And then two separate ones here, right?
23 A That's correct.
24 Q And then one for bratwurst?

C09779

1           A     That's correct.

2           Q     And then the one you found that I missed for 3 DuBuque. I suppose that is franks, but you can't --

4           A     It says DuBuque franks.

5           Q     Okay, thanks. Where was the stove in the lounge
6 in the Auburn school?

7           A     Sir, I was not looking for a stove.

8           Q     Did it cross your mind that a person might not
9 want to heat frozen bratwurst?

10          A     No, sir, it didn't.

11          Q     Or frozen hot dogs?

12          A     No, sir, it didn't.

13          Q     Or cold hot dogs?

14          A     No, sir.

15          Q     Or a cold bratwurst?

16          A     No, sir.

17          Q     In your investigation, sir, did you question a
18 Ryan Campbell?

19          A     If I could refer to my report for just a moment.

20          Q     Let me refresh your recollection, a male occupant
21 of a lower apartment in the building occupied by Jennifer
22 Lockmiller.

23          A     Yes, sir, I know who Ryan Campbell is, but your

A Would you like me to refer to my report?

Q Please do. Why you're looking, officer, whether or not you interviewed him, can you tell us, when you're done there, whether or not you ever met him?

A Yes, I do know that I met Ryan Campbell.

Q I don't need to have you look further.

A Okay.

Q Can you tell us how soon after the 28th of August you met him?

A It would have been the time that I showed the photographs of the vehicle to Lisa Ronsick -- I'm sorry, Susan Jenkins and David Singley.

Q And that was within how long following the 28th, roughly?

A It would have been Sunday, the 29th.

Q Okay. Did you determine, at that time, that Ryan Campbell has long, dark hair?

A I don't recall him having long, dark hair at that time, sir.

Q Do you recall that he didn't?

A Sir, I don't have a clear recollection of exactly what he looked like at that time. I can tell you it was not

Q Do you recall ever speaking -- whether or not you ever spoke with Ryan Campbell's girlfriend?

A To my knowledge, I don't know that I spoke to Ryan Campbell's girlfriend.

Q In speaking with Miss Ronsick, and Mr. Singley, and Miss Jenkins, they all told you that the white car they described to you was not a car of a resident of Jennifer's building, didn't they?

A That is possible, yes.

MR. BEU: That's all.

THE COURT: Any redirect?

MR. SOUK: Yes, your Honor.

FURTHER REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SOUK:

Q For the record, I'm just marking one page out of the grand jury exhibit. It's page 78, has People's Exhibit 85-D on it. And, Officer Freesmeyer, I'd ask you to look at the last question and answer on that page from the testimony of Carol Beaman.

A Yes, sir.

1 Q Would you tell us what the question she was asked
2 was and what answer she gave regarding her shopping that
3 day?

4 A "After going to the grocery store, did you go
5 straight home?" Her answer, "Yes, there's nothing between 6 my house and the grocery store, first of all. And secondly,
7 I had frozen orange juice, two gallons of milk, frozen
8 lunch- type stuff for me to take to school, and meat."

16 Q Was she ever questioned further at that time as to 17 whether she would typically leave her lunch for a week or a
18 month at the school, or whether she would take it daily?

19 A Not that I know, sir.

20 MR. BEU: That's all.

21 THE COURT: All right, you may step down, sir.

Re: Tim Freesmeyer

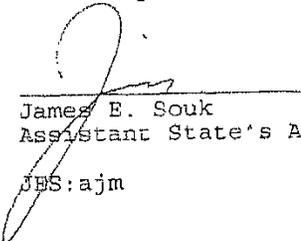

Dear Chief Taylor:

I would be derelict in my duties if I did not write you a separate letter concerning Tim Freesmeyer's performance in the Beaman case.

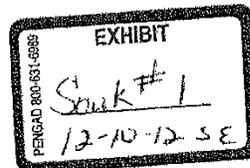

Rather than elaborate on the details, I will simply tell you that Tim's work on this case is the single finest effort by any police officer in any case with which I have been involved during 20 years as both a prosecutor and defense lawyer.

The effort is all the more remarkable considering his relative youth and inexperience. His recent promotion indicates you are already aware of his exceptional ability, but I would not be comfortable without expressing to you officially my great admiration for Tim, both as a person and a police officer. Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.

Sincerely,

James E. Souk

Victim Jennifer Lockmiller, F/W, DOB 1-11-71 412 Main Street, Apartment #4 Normal, Illinois

On 8-28-93, Saturday, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Crime Scene Technician Dean Kennedy was notified by the ISP Command Center that the Normal Police Department was requesting assistance in reference to a death investigation.

At approximately 3:45 p.m., CST Kennedy arrived at the scene located at 412 Main Street, Apartment #4, in Normal, Illinois, and met with Detective Tim Freesmeyer, McLean County Coroner Dan Brady and other members of the coroner's office and Normal Police Department.

The scene was a two-story frame apartment building containing four (4) apartments. The main entrance to the apartment building was on the south side of the first floor. The main entrance opened into a split stairway which led to the main floor and second floor. An exterior door was located at the north end of the second floor hallway. This door was unlocked.

Crime Scene Report

The victim's body was found in Apartment #4, which was on the west end of the second floor. The door to Apartment #4 was open. Det. Freesmeyer stated that a friend who came over to check on the victim found the apartment door unlocked upon her arrival. No signs of recent forced entry were visible. The door and door frame had what appeared to be old damage from previous entries. Some fresh marks on the inside of the door frame appeared to be from the dead bolt lock being left in the lock position when the door was closed. A maintenance person from the apartment complex examined the door and advised that the damage had been there previously.

A window in the kitchen was open with no sign of forced entry visible. A window screen to the aluminum storm window was torn at the bottom and was out of the track. The curtains on the window were closed and did not appear disturbed.

Two (2) windows in the northwest bedroom were open with no signs of forced entry visible. The screens on both windows were in place. The curtains on both windows were closed.

The entrance door to Apartment #4 led into a short hallway. A gold-colored hoop-type earring was lying on the floor approximately 3' inside the door. The hallway led west into the apartment. The bedroom and bathroom were located off the north side of the hallway. The living room was located at the west end of the hallway and the kitchen was located off the south side of the hallway.

A red shoe was lying in the hallway outside the bedroom door. A gold-colored hoop-type earring similar to the earring by the entrance door was found on the bathroom floor. A clump of dark-colored hair was also found on the bathroom floor.

Dirty dishes were in the kitchen sink. The left cabinet door under the kitchen sink was open. A plastic garbage can which had apparently been under the sink was lying on its side in front of the cabinet. A garbage bag which may have been taken out of the trash can was found on the living room sofa filled with trash. A table was located along the south wall of the kitchen. A word processor, school books, and various notebooks belonging to the victim were found on the table. Two (2) book bags and the victim's purse were found at the west edge of the table. The book bags and purse were stacked on top of each other, with the purse in the middle. The purse and book bags were closed and did not appear to have been gone through. The purse contained a green ID holder with the victim's driver's license and other identification, a brown wallet with $17.71 in U.S. currency and change, various credit cards, and other personal effects. The green ID holder and contents were retained by Coroner Brady.

The living room was located west of the kitchen. A television and air conditioner in the living room were on. A table on which a telephone and an answering machine were located was along the north wall of the living room. The tapes from the answering machine were retained by Officer Dave Warner of the Normal Police Department. A pink note pad was next to the telephone. Several phone books and a black address book were found under the table.

A television was on a table at the west end of the living room. A shoe box filled with letters was also on the table. A small basket containing small wooden boxes and pipes appearing to be drug paraphernalia was next to the television on the table. The sofa was located at the east end of the living room. A set of keys was on a table in front of the sofa. The previously-mentioned trash bag was on the sofa. A round indentation approximately 2" in diameter was observed at the east end of the north living room wall. The indentation was approximately 5' from the floor.

The bedroom was located in the northwest corner of the apartment. The bedroom door was open. A desk calendar was lying on the floor about 3' west of the doorway. A hole approximately 10" in diameter was present in the south wall of the bedroom. Maintenance personnel from the apartment complex advised that the hole had been made previously. A laundry basket filled with clothes, a desk, a chest of drawers and a twin bed were along the south wall of the bedroom. A chest of drawers was along the west wall. A lamp on top of the chest of drawers along the west wall was on. A bunk bed and a desk were along the north wall of the bedroom. A curling iron on top of the desk was on. The sliding doors to a closet on the east wall of the bedroom were open. Several clothing items, including a nightshirt, were on the floor in front of the closet. The victim's body was on the floor between the beds. The victim's body was in a supine position, with the head toward the north and the legs toward the south. The victim was wearing a red and white floral top and bra which were pushed up, exposing the chest. The body was nude from the chest down, and a pair of blue jean shorts with a brown belt and light-colored underpants were around her left calf and ankle. A red shoe similar to the shoe found in the hallway outside the bedroom door was on the victim's left foot. A gold-colored ring with a reddish stone was on the victim's left ring finger. The victim's arms were extended almost straight out from the shoulders. The legs were spread apart and bent at the knees, with both feet extended back toward the head. The body was bloated and discolored from the effects of decomposition. A pair of scissors with red plastic handles was embedded in the center of the victim's chest. Three (3) other defects were noted in the skin on the victim's chest which had apparently been made with the scissors. A clock radio was on the floor east of the victim's head. The cord from the clock radio was wrapped around the victim's neck and tied in the front of the neck. A box fan was resting across the victim's chest against the handle of the scissors. The other end of the box fan was on the bed next to the victim's head.

CST Kennedy photographed the scene.

CST Kennedy obtained measurements for use in making a crime scene drawing. A computerized sketch will be completed at a later date.

CST Kennedy utilized the alternate light source on the victim's body and the area surrounding the body while at the scene.

The following item was collected, packaged, and marked as reflected on the evidence receipt:

Exhibit #21 Sealed box containing hair removed from victim's pubic region at scene.

CST Kennedy cut the cord from the clock radio found next to the victim's head. The victim's body was placed into a white sheet and then into a body bag and sealed by CST Kennedy. The victim's body was removed from the scene by the McLean County Coroner's Office at approximately 7:00 p.m., and transported to the McLean County Morgue in Bloomington, Illinois.

CST Kennedy utilized the electrostatic dust print lifter on the bathroom floor, kitchen floor and desk calendar found on the bedroom floor with negative results.

CST Kennedy processed the scene for items of evidential value which were collected, packaged and marked as reflected on the evidence receipt:

- Exhibit #1 Word processor "WP-2200" found on kitchen table.
- Exhibit #2 Word processor manual found on kitchen table.
- Exhibit #3 Shoe box containing letters found on table at west end of living room.
- Exhibit #4 Box containing papers and letters found under south bed in northwest bedroom.
- Exhibit #5 Papers and photographs found on south chest of drawers and inside north side desk in northwest bedroom.
- Exhibit #6 Eight (8) 3.5" floppy computer diskettes found in drawer of south side desk in northwest bedroom.
- Exhibit #7 Purse and contents found on kitchen table.
- Exhibit #8 Sealed bag containing cardboard tag removed from outside entrance doorknob - Apartment #4.
- Exhibit #9 Sealed bag containing note pad found next to phone in living room.

CST Kennedy processed the scene for latent finger and palm print impressions; however, no identifiable latent prints were developed.

CST Kennedy departed the scene at approximately 10:20 p.m., and proceeded to the Normal Police Department.

At approximately 10:55 p.m., while at the police department, CST Kennedy receipted Exhibits #1 through #6 to Det. Freesmeyer. Exhibits #3 through #5 were examined by Normal detectives. Items found useful for the investigation were removed and will be given separate exhibit numbers by the Normal Police Department.

CST Kennedy departed the police department at approximately 11:05 p.m.

On 8-29-93, Sunday, at approximately 8:50 a.m., CST Kennedy arrived at the McLean County Morgue in Bloomington, Illinois, and met with Dr. Sharon Schnittker, Medical Assistant Bill Belcher, and Normal Police Officer Dave Warner.

The victim's body was removed from the body bag and appeared to be in the same general condition as when last seen by CST Kennedy at the scene. The only difference noted was a small defect in the victim's side where Dr. Schnittker had inserted a probe to get a liver temperature reading. The defect was circled with a black marker.

An autopsy was performed by Dr. Schnittker which will be the subject of a separate report by Dr. Schnittker.

CST Kennedy photographed the autopsy.

While at the autopsy, CST Kennedy received the following items from Dr. Schnittker:

- Exhibit #24 Sealed bag containing red and white floral top from victim (received from Dr. Schnittker at autopsy).
- Exhibit #25 Sealed bag containing blue jean shorts and belt from victim (received from Dr. Schnittker at autopsy).
- Exhibit #26 Sealed bag containing bra removed from victim (received from Dr. Schnittker at autopsy).
- Exhibit #27 Sealed bag containing underpants removed from victim (received from Dr. Schnittker at autopsy).
- Exhibit #28 Sealed bag containing paper bag removed from victim's right hand (received from Dr. Schnittker at autopsy).

Exhibit #41 Sealed envelope containing inked finger and palm print cards obtained from victim at autopsy.

While at the autopsy, CST Kennedy received the following item from Coroner Dan Brady:

Exhibit #42 Sealed envelope containing inked fingerprint card marked Jennifer L. Lockmiller, F/W, DOB 1-11-71 (received from Coroner Dan Brady).

The gold-colored ring with a reddish stone from the victim's left hand was retained by Coroner Brady.

Exhibit #7 was receipted to Coroner Brady at 2:00 p.m.

CST Kennedy departed the McLean County Morgue at approximately 2:20 p.m., and proceeded to the Normal Police Department.

At approximately 2:40 p.m., CST Kennedy arrived at the Normal Police Department and met with the Normal Detective Division, chief of police and the McLean County state's attorney.

At approximately 3:30 p.m., CST Kennedy departed the police department and returned to the scene at approximately 3:40 p.m., along with the state's attorney and Normal detectives. The scene was re-entered; however, no further items were collected by CST Kennedy. CST Kennedy departed the scene at approximately 4:30 p.m.

The exposed photographic film was mailed to the Bureau of Crime Scene Services Photo Lab in Springfield, Illinois. Upon receipt, the photographs will be forwarded to the Normal Police Department. The negatives will be maintained in the crime scene case file.

On 8-30-93, Monday, at approximately 3:25 p.m., CST Kennedy receipted Exhibits #18 through #22, #24 through #37 and #40 to Forensic Scientist Patricia Orr at the Morton Forensic Science Laboratory. Exhibits #23 and #41 through #43 were receipted to Forensic Scientist John Dierker.

On 9-1-93, Wednesday, at approximately 9:30 a.m., CST Kennedy receipted Exhibit #17 to Coroner Dan Brady at the McLean County Coroner's Office in Bloomington, Illinois. At approximately 9:35 a.m., while at the coroner's office, CST Kennedy received the following item from Coroner Brady:

Exhibit #44 Sealed container with bone from Jennifer Lockmiller, removed by Dr. Schnittker (received from Coroner Dan Brady).

TIMOTHY JOHN FREESMEYER

having been first duly sworn, was examined upon oral interrogatories and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY MR. SOUK:

Q Detective Freesmeyer, remind you you're still under oath from your testimony earlier today in the grand jury in another case. For the record, would you state your name?

A Yes, Timothy John Freesmeyer.

Q Are you same Detective Freesmeyer who previously testified in this case, People versus Alan Beaman before the grand jury last week?

A Yes I am.

Q Now I want to first go over the crime scene that relates to the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller,

126

AB000836

Q I want to go now to some alibi evidence. First as to Michael Swaine, before we get into his alibi, first let me ask you if your investigation revealed any conceivable motive that Michael Swaine might have had to kill Jennifer Lockmiller?

A No. Michael was the present boyfriend. When we picked him up at the scene, extremely remorseful, crying and sobbing. We were able to find no motive whatsoever.

Q We'll get into Mr. Beaman's motive at the end today, but other than Mr. Beaman, were you able in the course of your investigation to locate any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller?

A No, not necessarily.

Q Perhaps the best thing is why don't you just summarize for us Mr. Swaine's alibi and how you were able to establish it?

A In speaking with Mr. Swaine, I asked him where he was that week. He stated he was working at York Community High School which is in Elmhurst, Illinois. It's his old high school. He works there every summer in the book store as a buy back person for books. That particular week, he was working under the

However, considering the phone calls, if she would have left her mother's residence at 10:00 o'clock, she would have been home by 10:17. She could have made the calls at 10:37 and 10:39. Left the house and arrived back at Walmart at approximately 10:57 or 11:00 o'clock. Give her 10 minutes to go into three different departments at Walmart and check out. It would be rushed, but it would be possible.

Q And again, this was one of those rare occasions when you were driving the speed limit?

A That is correct.

Q Now did you also on two occasions do the same kind of timing from Bell Federal to the Beaman residence?

A Yes I did.

Q On one of those occasions, did you basically drive it through town?

A I drove the most direct route and I also drove what I thought to be the fastest route, the two most logical ways to get to the Beaman residence from Bell Federal.

Q On both those occasions, did you drive the speed limit?

A Yes. The trip through town, I drove the speed limit and I drove it on a Wednesday afternoon at approximately 10:00 o'clock, so it would be very comparable to the time that Mr. Beaman would have driven that route.

Q How long did that trip take going through town?

A That trip took me 30 minutes. If he had left the bank at 11 minutes after 10:00, he'da gotten home at 10:41. The calls were made at 10:37 and 10:39.

Q When you drove it the other way, did you-- from Bell Federal, if you go a couple miles south, do you get to this Route 20 going around the south side of town?

A Yes. Bell Federal is on the corner of Newburg and Alpine. If you take Alpine straight south to 20 and around, that would be probably the quickest route to Mr. Beaman's residence, and that took me 25 minutes. So once again 25 added on to the 10:11 would put me there at 10:36. The calls were at 10:37 and 10:39.

Q Did you drive from Bell Federal to Jennifer's apartment on one occasion exceeding the speed limit?

A Yes I did.

thing he told me is that he'll never be able to watch Basic Instinct with me." And I asked her, I'm unfamiliar with the movie Basic Instinct, so I asked her what's the significance there. And she says, "well in the movie, the man and the woman are having sexual intercourse, and the woman reaches back and grabs an icepick and stabs her partner." Shortly after that, I rented the movie Basic Instinct to satisfy my curiosity. The movie is all about a woman who, while she's having sex with the man, would grab an icepick and stab him numerous times in the upper chest and neck area.

Q What was significant about that or what came up in her conversation with Mr. Beaman relating to Basic Instinct?

A What was significant was, she indicated that at one time, Alan had told her that he and Jennifer were having sex and Jennifer reached back as if she was grabbing something. That spurred the comment that "I can never watch Basic Instinct with you."

Q At the time of the murder and throughout the school year, would you describe Alan Beaman's appearance as far as his hair and so forth?

A Alan's appearance, he's not a real big man.

And if that says anything, he dressed like a theater major.

Q Would it be true that Jennifer was a very short girl and had markedly blonde hair?

A Yes. Jennifer was very blonde. She was about 5', 5'1" I think from my best recollection.

Q Prior to the arrest of Alan Beaman, had his photograph ever been in any newspaper or accounts in this matter?

A No, not prior to his arrest, it was not.

Q Once he was arrested, was his picture basically showing him with that appearance and the long brown hair, was that in the Pantagraph here locally?

A Yes. That was his arrest photo and it was shown in the Pantagraph and also on most of the TV stations in the area.

Assignment

I was asked to review relevant materials and offer opinions regarding the propriety of the defendants' investigation into the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller and address whether the investigation conducted by the defendants was consistent with reasonable police practices. This report may be amended upon review of additional material.

Background and Experience

I have been professionally involved in violent crime investigations for more than 40 years including 25 years as an FBI Agent. In that capacity, I investigated violent crimes as a field agent for approximately 17 years and then was promoted and transferred to the FBI Academy in Quantico, Virginia as a Supervisory Special Agent where I worked in the National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime (NCAVC). There I was assigned to the operational wing of the Behavioral Science Unit where my primary responsibility was to provide expertise in investigative

Executive Summary

Ms. Jennifer Lockmiller, a student at Illinois State University, was murdered inside the apartment in which she resided in Normal, Illinois on Wednesday, August 25, 1993. Her body was discovered on Saturday, August 28, 1993. Alan Beaman and Michael Swain had been intimately involved with Ms. Lockmiller that summer and their fingerprints were found at the crime scene along with other latent fingerprints that remain unidentified. Upon determining that a homicide has occurred, the next phase of an investigation requires an objective consideration of all potential motivations based on method and manner in which the crime was committed, the physical and behavior evidence at the crime scene, and through a thorough victimology. Exploring all reasonable motivations is critically important to both accurately classifying the crime and obtaining a successful solution. A clear understanding of "why" is the best way to get to "who." In this case investigators prematurely concluded that Ms. Lockmiller was killed in a fit of jealous rage while ignoring other possibilities, such as having been the victim of a burglary or a rape. This led them to immediately focus on Mr. Beaman who happened to have broken up with Ms. Lockmiller earlier that summer. By intentionally creating this false narrative, the investigators moved prematurely from an evidence-based investigation to a suspect-based investigation.

There was no physical evidence, no eyewitnesses and certainly no confession that linked Mr. Beaman to this crime, while there were numerous facts that substantially weighed against his involvement. However, the defendants chose to believe he was guilty and the record clearly shows that they set out to prove that he committed the murder in spite of their protestations of being objective.

Overview of This Homicide Scene and Investigation

At approximately 2:00PM Saturday afternoon, August 28, 1993, Morgan Keefe, a friend of Ms. Jennifer Lockmiller's, discovered her body in the victim's unlocked apartment at 412 North Main Street in Normal, Illinois. Ms. Lockmiller's apartment was one of four apartments in the building and was located upstairs in the building. Ms. Lockmiller's body was found in her bedroom, supine, with her legs spread and knees bent so that her lower legs were underneath her. Her shorts were around her left ankle, her underwear around the left knee and her blouse and bra were pushed up exposing her breasts. She had a shoe on her left foot and a matching shoe was located outside the bedroom door. One earring was found inside the door to her apartment and another near her bedroom. The victim was virtually naked. Lividity was set and consistent with the position in which the body was found. A light on top of a dresser in the bedroom was on and a floor fan was resting on her upper torso partially covering her face. The offender(s) strangled her with the cord attached to a clock radio and left the cord knotted around her neck. After she was dead the offender(s) stabbed her several times in the upper torso leaving a pair of scissors embedded in her chest with the handles protruding. The victim's purse was sitting on a table and did not appear to have been disturbed. While nothing of value seemed to be missing it is important to keep in mind that when the victim is a known drug user, as in this case, that illegal drugs may be missing, but understandably unreported. The air conditioning and TV were on. Crime scene and autopsy photos show post-mortem stab wounds around the victim's left breast and a peri-mortem abrasion on the inside of her right knee.<sup>4</sup> Overall, the scene suggested a struggle between the victim and the offender which may have begun near the door where her earring was found on the floor.

Forensic Pathologist Dr. Sharon Schnittker, who was present at the crime scene and performed the autopsy, thought it was possible that the victim had been sexually assaulted based on the position of the body and the position of her clothing, so she performed a sexual assault examination on the victim. She reported that due to the advanced state of decomposition it was not possible to determine whether or not the victim had sustained any vaginal or anal trauma. Officials involved in this homicide investigation never asked Dr. Schnittker for her opinion regarding the possibility that Ms. Lockmiller had been sexually assaulted.<sup>5</sup>

Detective Timothy Freesmeyer responded to the scene with a video camera and other equipment. After conducting a perimeter search of the apartment building, Detective Freesmeyer spoke with Liza Everett and Lori Solomon who lived in apartment #2, directly below the victim's apartment. They reported being slightly acquainted with the victim who they described as a white female with long blond hair, approximately 5'3" – 5'4", weighing about 110-120 lbs. They described Ms. Lockmiller as a "partier" who stayed up late and whose style of dress was somewhat like a 1960s "hippie" in an "almost sleazy" way. They reported smelling marijuana coming from her apartment on more than one occasion. They described the victim's boyfriend as having long brown hair and driving a small grey car, possibly a two-door Ford Escort. Both witnesses seemed to recall arguments between the long-haired male and the victim per Detective Freesmeyer's report.<sup>6</sup>

Detective Freesmeyer also spoke with David Singley and Susan Jenkins who resided in apartment #3, next door to the victim. They advised that they saw the victim on Tuesday, August 24, 1993 about 1:30PM, walking outside of the apartment building. She was wearing a light blue top and dark shorts. On Friday, August 27, 1993, the day before the body was discovered, Ms. Jenkins knocked on the door to the victim's apartment and heard the volume on the TV go down but no one answered her knock. David Singley told police that he saw a white car parked in the driveway at around 2:00PM when he returned from class on Wednesday, August 25, the victim's apartment and heard the volume on the TV go down but no one answered her knock. David Singley told police that he saw a white car parked in the driveway at around 2:00PM when he returned from class on Wednesday, August 25, 1993. In a subsequent interview with Detective Hospelhorn, Mr. Singley reported that when he entered the apartment building on August 25, 1993 around 2:00PM, he heard the door to Ms. Lockmiller's apartment open and close quickly and her stereo playing inside her apartment. He also reported that the window air-conditioning unit was not running in Ms. Lockmiller's apartment at the time, which he thought was odd because it was such a hot day. Approximately 5-10 minutes after he entered his apartment he heard the door to the Ms. Lockmiller's apartment slam shut and someone leave quickly. Shortly after that he left his apartment to go to a swimming pool and returned around 4:30-4:45PM that afternoon and left again around 5:15PM to return to the pool. At that time he noted that Ms. Lockmiller's window air-conditioning unit that had not been running at 2:00PM was now running and that the stereo that had been playing earlier was now off and that the TV in her apartment was on instead.<sup>7</sup>

Morgan Keefe, the friend of Ms. Lockmiller's who found her body, was interviewed around 4:00PM on August 28 by Detectives Warner and Daniels. They went to a movie Tuesday evening, August 24, 1993. Keefe and Lockmiller were supposed to go out together Wednesday night, but Ms. Keefe advised that Ms. Lockmiller did not answer her calls so she went out with other friends. She tried repeatedly to contact Ms. Lockmiller over the next few days without success, became concerned and went to her apartment on Saturday, when she discovered her body. She mentioned Alan Beaman, Mike Swain and "Bubba" (Stacy Gates) as boyfriends or former boyfriends of Ms. Lockmiller. In recounting her recent time with Ms. Lockmiller she advised that they had been out at Spanky's bar the previous Saturday evening along with her friend Kelly Hamburg. They left the bar to go to another and met two males along the way who were thinking about pledging Kelly's met another guy at the bar who bought her four or five drinks. She does not know his name, but knows that he lives in Woodstock, Illinois. She thinks he called Ms. Lockmiller and asked her if she would like to go out and Ms. Lockmiller's response was, "I can't believe he called me and wanted to go out". Ms. Keefe characterized Ms. Lockmiller as "kind of the queen of scamming drinks off of guys. Kind of flirts, you know, and whatever and he bought her a bunch of drinks and then he suggested going to a party afterwards... but Jen didn't want to go. She just basically wanted drinks off of him and then we walked off."<sup>8</sup> In her 911 call to authorities she asserted that, "I know who did it too. She had a psycho ex-boyfriend that she broke up with. His name's Alan, he went to Wesleyan and I only met him once and he was psycho and he used to harass her all the time and he used to break down her door."<sup>9</sup>

On August 28, 1993, Michael Swaine, who was sharing the apartment with the victim at that time, was handcuffed and taken to the police department and interviewed. He explained to the police that he and the victim had been seeing each other behind her old boyfriend's back. He identified Alan Beaman as the victim's old boyfriend, noting that he and Alan Beaman were close friends and had been roommates.

Mr. Swaine told police that he wanted to avoid becoming too involved with Jennifer because of her heavy alcohol use. When asked about Mr. Beaman, Mr. Swaine reportedly told Detective Freesmeyer that, "it was hard to say anything about him without making him seem really evil." Mr. Swaine stated that Mr. Beaman gets really jealous when he thinks that something is going on. He recalled an incident within the last two months when Mr. Beaman broke down the door to the victim's apartment to get in and punched holes into the wall of the victim's apartment. Mr. Swaine told police that Mr. Beaman went to Ohio at the end of July to disengage from the relationship with the victim. Mr. Swaine further noted that the victim told him that Mr. Beaman told her that he was over her and did not love her anymore. Mr. Swaine opined that he believed the relationship between Mr. Beaman and the victim was based on marijuana use. He further stated that the victim used pot, cocaine, LSD and had tried heroin once. He alleged that Mr. Beaman used pot regularly and tripped on LSD. He claimed that the victim and Mr. Beaman had broken up 18 times during the course of their relationship. Mr. Swaine also alleged that when the victim and Mr. Beaman fought, the victim would go to other apartments yelling, "help me, save me," although none of the neighbors reported that this occurred.<sup>10</sup>

In a second interview with authorities Mr. Swaine advised that although Mr. Beaman was Ms. Lockmiller's boyfriend, he and Ms. Lockmiller had sex about five times beginning in June through August 19, 1993. Sometime between July 11 and July 24, 1993, Mr. Beaman broke into Ms. Lockmiller's apartment while he was there. Mr. Swaine stated that he was so scared he hid in the closet and pulled one of Ms. Lockmiller's dresses over his head to conceal himself. Mr. Beaman confronted him on July 25, 1993 saying, "You're fucking my girlfriend." Mr. Swaine provided authorities with an alibi for August 23-27, 1993. He also agreed to take a polygraph, but later declined, saying that his mother wanted him to talk to an attorney before taking a polygraph exam.

Detective Freesmeyer seized a word processor, some discs and several letters from the victim's apartment. He found letters from numerous individuals including Stacy Gates (aka Bubba), Morgan Keefe, Dean Cauley and John (LNU). In his report, Detective Freesmeyer noted that Alan Beaman expressed his "enormous love" for Ms. Lockmiller in his letters to her. At one point he wrote, "Don't worry, I won't kill anybody, I don't believe in that."<sup>11</sup> Detective Freesmeyer reviewed the victim's telephone records and determined that on Sunday, August 22, 1993, there were 28 calls made from the victim's telephone number to that of Mr. Beaman. Due to the extremely short duration of each, it appeared that these calls were unanswered. The following evening, (Monday, August 23, 1993), there was a 13-minute phone call initiated from the victim's phone to Mr. Beaman's phone number.<sup>12</sup>

On Sunday, August 29, 1993, all of the detectives involved the case, along with the Chief of Police, Dean Kennedy, prosecutor James Souk, and Coroner Dan Brady, met at the Normal Police Department and discussed the case for approximately four and a half hours. Coroner Brady confirmed that strangulation with an electrical cord from an alarm clock was the cause of death and that the victim was deceased prior to being stabbed in the chest with the scissors. Detective Freesmeyer's report further noted that, "The two main suspects at that time were Alan Beaman and Michael J. Swaine"<sup>13</sup> (emphasis added). In other words, the immediate working hypothesis was that a current or former intimate partner had murdered Ms. Lockmiller. While that is one hypothesis, properly trained investigators know that they have to consider all reasonable hypotheses, being careful not to rush to judgment regarding potential suspects or motivations. There is little indication that the defendants seriously considered that the homicide of Ms. Lockmiller was anything other than an intimate partner homicide. In effect, the die was cast. From that point forward the investigation was suspect-based rather than an evidence-based one in which all evidence was interpreted in a manner consistent with the dominant hypothesis that Alan Beaman murdered Ms. Lockmiller.

Other potential suspects were developed, some were interviewed and four, (Stacy "Bubba" Gates, Michael Swaine, Christopher Carbone and John Murray) were polygraphed. The polygrapher found no deception on the part of Mr. Swaine and Mr. Carbone. However, he could not render an opinion regarding the results of the polygraphs of Stacy Gates and John Larbi Murray as Gates' responses were too erratic while Murray did not comply with the directions given to him for the proper completion of the polygraph, so it was discontinued. Further investigation substantiated alibis for Stacy Gates and Michael Swain. John Murray had no alibi for the time that Ms. Lockmiller is believed to have been murdered.<sup>14</sup>

Detective Daniels and Hospelhorn interviewed John Larbi Murray, a former paramour of Ms. Lockmiller, on September 2, and again on September 9, 1993. By the end of the second interview Detective Daniels believed that Mr. Murray was a viable suspect in the murder of Ms. Lockmiller.<sup>15</sup>

Also beginning in September, Michale Swaine became a cooperating witness and wore a wire to surreptitiously record conversations he had with Alan Beaman. In a recorded conversation that occurred on September 8, 1993, the following exchange occurred:

Mike: Are you OK man?

Alan: I'm hanging in there.

Mike: I wish just someone would tell me what is going on, cause I don't know. I'm just going crazy. I talked to the counselor, a counselor tonight at 5:00; gotta light?

Alan: Yep.

Mike: Thanks.

*Alan: Dude, I don't know shit, that's the problem...

Mike: ....I don't know what is going on. I wish you'd, someone would tell me something, why can't any - can't anybody? I don't know.

Alan: Nobody can man....

Mike: I got back into town, they haven't talked to me in a long time either. I got back into town and they questioned me like two nights in a row and then my mom was like, "get a lawyer" and I was like "shit, why? I didn't do anything."

Not only did Mr. Beaman deny knowing anything about the murder, but many of the things he said were inconsistent with being jealous about Ms. Lockmiller's relationship with Michael Swaine or anyone else, the alleged motive for her murder according to the defendants' theory. It also refutes the defendant's hypothesis that Mr. Beaman drove to Normal to rekindle his relationship with Ms. Lockmiller. The statements are especially credible as they occurred in what Mr. Beaman thought was a private conversation with a trusted friend. He had no idea that Mr. Swain was working as an agent for law enforcement and that he was recording this conversation.

On October 27, 1993, Detective Freesmeyer contacted Mr. Beaman and reported as follows: "I informed Alan that I was not going to beat around the bush with him and I was not going to mince words. Alan was informed that he was going to be arrested for Jennifer's death at one point or another. I told Alan that probable cause for an arrest already existed and that we were simply waiting for finalized results from the lab before we arrested him and started the timeclock....I informed him that we had a copy of the video tape showing him at his bank at 10:11AM on the south side of Rockford the day Jennifer was killed in direct conflict with his statement that he went straight home from work and went to bed. And finally, I informed Alan that his fingerprint was found on the murder weapon. After explaining what he was facing, I told Alan that if he wanted to talk to me about the incident and get the incident off his chest, that the State's Attorney had authorized me to tell him that we would not go for the death penalty in this case. I followed up by telling him, 'But if this façade continues, we're going for the death penalty.' After waiting a few seconds, Alan lifted his head and stated, 'But I didn't do it'.....I then told him that he would be best off to talk with me now and to get this entire ordeal over with before we have to go to court and ask for the maximum penalty, that being death. Alan once again paused before looking straight at me and stating in a low soft voice, 'I didn't do it.'"<sup>17</sup> Threatening a suspect with the death penalty violates basic police practices. It is coercive and should never be used, especially to try and leverage a confession as it was in this situation. This exchange is clear evidence that Detective Freesmeyer has prematurely concluded that Mr. Beaman is guilty of the murder despite any concrete evidence to support that conclusion and with a large amount of logical investigation incomplete.

On November 5, 1993 Detective Freesmeyer wore a wire and surreptitiously recorded a conversation with Mr. Beaman during which this exchange occurred:

Tim: You told me you were home sleeping, you told me that twice, right? That is not looking good. We talked about that you have got the motive, man, from all the letters that we saw, the infatuation that you had with her and the way she was dicking you around. That's not going to help you out. And I told you about the print that we found, Alan. You know, I don't know, I thought maybe you might have thought, thought of something over the last week that we could use to try to clear you up?

Alan: I haven't had time to think.

Tim: I mean I don't, I don't want to drag this thing out any longer than we have to and I am sure you don't either. It's got to be driving you nuts too. But at this point it is just a matter of waiting for lab results unless you can give us something else to work with, you know?

Alan: I got nothing. Wait for the lab reports. I'll be around.<sup>18</sup>

Detective Freesmeyer appeared to have shifted the burden of proof from himself and his colleagues to Mr. Beaman. Shifting the burden of proof onto a suspect is a factor in criminal investigative failures.<sup>19</sup> Reasonably trained law enforcement officers clearly understand that the burden of proof is theirs, not the suspect's. They also understand that it is not their job to believe or disbelieve anyone. It is their job to find facts. There is ample evidence in this case that Detective Freesmeyer and his colleagues routinely chose to either disbelieve evidence pointing to Mr. Beaman's innocence or that they selectively interpreted other information to support their premature conclusion that Alan Beaman was guilty of murdering Ms. Lockmiller.

For example, Carol Beaman testified before the grand jury that early in September 1993, she realized new tires had been purchased for Alan's car on August 24, 1993 and found the receipt showing the mileage to be 77,811 miles. She took a photograph of the odometer on September 1, 1993 showing the odometer at 77,494 meaning there had been 332 miles put on the car during those 9 days. She further testified that she had given it to Alan's attorney in September of 1993 and assumed that he had provided it to the authorities.<sup>20</sup> In summary, the mileage was inconsistent with Mr. Beaman having traveled from Rockford to Normal, Illinois and back when controlling for his routine travel. This odometer evidence was not presented to authorities until after Mr. Beaman had been arrested for Ms. Lockmiller's murder.

Rather than view this evidence as exculpatory, Detective Freesmeyer interpreted as inculpatory. He testified that he believed that Mr. Beaman tampered with the odometer immediately upon his return from committing the murder and that was his, "excuse as to why he could not have committed the murder."<sup>21</sup> Detective Freesmeyer could not explain why Mr. Beaman did not quickly bring this purportedly fabricated evidence to the attention of the authorities if Mr. Beaman had purposefully created it to prove his innocence. My experience has been that those who create false evidence as an alibi bring that fabricated evidence forward quickly and confidently. Mr. Beaman never brought this information forward at all, his mother did.

In April of 1994, Detective Daniels attended an unsolved homicide conference in Jacksonville, Florida at the request of Assistant Chief Walt Clark and presented the Lockmiller case. He returned with a list of 36 suggested leads, but apparently a number of those were not pursued.<sup>22</sup> During the May 16, 1994 meeting with Mr. Souk and investigators Detective Daniels stated that he tried to discuss that list of leads, but Mr. Souk cut him off saying, "I think we went as far as we can with this case. We are going to go ahead and issue a warrant for his arrest, meaning Alan Beaman's arrest."<sup>23</sup> Detective Daniels testified that right after the meeting he asked Police Chief Taylor why he was not given an opportunity to speak about his seminar findings. Chief Taylor asked him why he did not speak up and Daniels replied that he had, but was cut off.<sup>24</sup> Assistant State Attorney Souk obtained a warrant for Mr. Beaman's arrest and officers from the Normal Police Department executed that warrant.

Time and Travel Issues

While it is generally undisputed that Ms. Lockmiller was murdered the afternoon of August 25, 1993, it is the state's theory that she was murdered between 12:00-12:15 PM that afternoon even though there is no independent evidence to support this. This arbitrary choice for her time of death is another indication that Detective Freesmeyer and his colleagues, contrary to accepted police practices, were working this case backwards, i.e. starting with a conclusion as to who was guilty and then intentionally shaping, interpreting and creating evidence to support that conclusion. Standard police practice requires that every investigation be driven by the evidence and not by attempting to shape or create evidence to fit a predetermined conclusion. In this case, the conscious decision to narrow the time of death to that specific 15-minute window of opportunity is not based on any objective evidence, but appears to have been chosen by the defendants after determining when Mr. Beaman could, hypothetically, have had time to travel from Rockford to Normal and return by the time his mother returned from shopping, and then retrofitting the time of death to coincide with that information. Detective Freesmeyer's wrongful rush to judgment about Mr. Beaman's guilt is also apparent in the October 27, 1993 contact as previously noted.

Detective Freesmeyer testified that he only attempted to validate Mr. Beaman's alibi after he arrested him.<sup>25</sup> This is also completely contrary to the expectations of a reasonable law enforcement investigation. Reasonable law enforcement investigations require that all logical investigation be completed in order to make a determination if probable cause exists to charge anyone. Investigative work performed after a suspect has been arrested and charged is done under an overwhelming belief regarding the identity of the perpetrator, and therefore is especially prone to confirmation bias.

Detective Freesmeyer admitted that months prior to arresting Mr. Beaman he knew that Mr. Beaman was video taped by the bank surveillance camera leaving the bank at 10:11AM and that telephone calls were made from his residence at 10:37 and 10:39AM. The initial hypothesis of the state was that Mr. Beaman drove directly from the bank to Normal, Illinois where he murdered Ms. Lockmiller. However, if he returned home instead and made those two telephone calls it would have seriously undermined this hypothesis as it limited the time that Mr. Beaman would have had to drive to Normal, murder Ms. Lockmiller and return home before his mother arrived around 2:15 that afternoon. Therefore, it was an important to determine if Mr. Beaman could have traveled from the bank to his residence in time to make those calls. Detective Freesmeyer admitted that the issue of the drive time gave him pause as to whether Mr. Beaman had time to commit this crime prior conducting his time trials, but not after he did so. However, Detective Freesmeyer never conducted the time trial between the bank and Mr. Beaman's home until after he arrested Mr. Beaman. He failed to document the one time trial that showed by taking a bypass, Mr. Beaman could have arrived home in time to make those calls. The failure to document such an important finding violates standard police practices. He did mention that route in his testimony before the grand jury, but never mentioned it when he testified in Mr. Beaman's trial, even when defense counsel asked him about the bypass route.

Detective Freesmeyer offered this testimony before the grand jury on July 7, 1994 regarding the time trial that demonstrated that Mr. Beaman could have made the trip home in 25 minutes, which would have been in time to make those telephone calls:

Q: When you drove it the other way, did you – from Bell Federal – if you go a couple of miles south, do you get to this Route 20 going along the south side of town?

A: Yes, Bell Federal is on the corner of Newburg and Alpine. If you take Alpine straight south to 20 and around that would be probably the quickest route to Mr. Beaman's residence. And that took me 25 minutes. So once again, 25 added to the 10:11 would put me there at 10:36. The calls were at 10:37 and 10:39.<sup>26</sup>

However, during Mr. Beaman's trial Detective Freesmeyer testified as follows on direct examination regarding the time it took to drive between Bell Federal Bank and the Beaman residence:

Q: And how much time did it take you to make that drive?

A: Again, referring to my report, the time required to drive from Alan Beaman's residence to the Bell Federal Bank observing all speed limits, was 31 minutes.

Q: ....What was your purpose in doing that?

A: According to the phone records, there was a call coming out of the Beaman residence at 10:37 and 10:39. We had Alan on videotape at the bank at 11 minutes after ten. By driving that distance I wanted to see if it was possible for Alan to make it home to make that first phone call at 10:37AM. If he left the bank at 11 minutes after ten, made the 31-minute drive, it would put him home at 10:42.<sup>27</sup>

On cross-examination Detective Freesmeyer testified as follows:

Q: So you chose to select a route, did you not, that you took right through the heart of downtown Rockford?

A: As you stated earlier, I took the most direct route, sir.

Q: Does not that route take you directly through the heart of downtown Rockford?

A: Yes sir, it does.<sup>28</sup>

Q: As opposed to going down Meridian Road to the high speed bypass over to Alpine Road, and then up north to Bell Federal?

A: Yes, that would be correct.

The trial jury was unaware that Detective Freesmeyer had driven the bypass route in 25 minutes. It is noteworthy that Detective Freesmeyer observed all speed limits when he drove the route through Rockford in support of his theory that he could not have gotten home in time to make those phone calls, but admittedly sped as he drove to and from Normal to prove that he could make that trip before his mother got home and saw his car. A subsequent expert analysis by Robert Seyfried, a credentialed expert in traffic operations and engineering, has provided a report indicating that a reasonable drive time between the bank and Mr. Beaman's residence was 19-20 minutes, a time frame which would have easily allowed him to arrive home in time to make the telephone calls at 10:37 and 10:39AM.<sup>29</sup>

Another issue that plagued this investigation is that fact that in January of 1995, Detective Freesmeyer began working out of the state's attorney's office doing what he described as "pre-trial investigation" that included, "...mileage trips, checking mileage, intercity within Rockford, to and from Rockford."<sup>30</sup> The problem with this is that Detective Freesmeyer's objectivity and independence as an impartial law enforcement investigator was prone to being compromised as he was now working under the umbrella of Mr. Souk, the state's attorney prosecuting Mr. Beaman. Detective Freesmeyer testified that Mr. Souk offered him advice and recommendations.<sup>31</sup> A prosecutorial mind set could explain why he failed to document the one time trial between the bank and Mr. Beaman's residence that was exculpatory in nature.

Analysis and Conclusion

"...Don't jump to conclusions. Circumstantial evidence may be strong and the suspect's story weak. Be careful to make sure" - Lt. William Kidd (1940)<sup>32</sup>

In this case Detective Freesmeyer and his colleagues failed to follow standard police practices and that began a cascading series of errors. The first was a misclassification error. By immediately concluding that Ms. Lockmiller's murder was an act of intimate partner violence, they limited the overall scope of the investigation in a number of ways. First, they limited the universe of suspects to four: Stacy Gates, Michael Swain, John Murray and Alan Beaman. That error also meant that they shut down other avenues of investigation that reasonably trained detectives would have been expected to explore.

Well-trained detectives would have kept an open mind and considered all logical motives based on the method and manner in which the crime was committed as well as credible eyewitness testimony such as that provided by David Singley who heard the door to Ms. Lockmiller's apartment open and close twice around

2:00PM on the day of the murder. If true, and there is no reason to believe Mr. Singley was misleading investigators, the time of death could easily have been closer to 2:00PM and Mr. Beaman would then be eliminated as a suspect. Instead, the defendants purposely chose to ignore Mr. Singley's observations.

Another important avenue of investigation would have been to consider that Ms. Lockmiller was the victim of a sexual assault, but I saw no evidence that Detective Freesmeyer or his colleagues ever seriously considered this. A known sex offender or an opportunistic offender such as a burglar could have committed this crime. Those options were never seriously explored. Mr. James Souk, the assistant state's attorney prosecuting this case, testified as follows:

Q: Did any investigator go out and examine other reports of burglaries and sexual assaults that had occurred in the same geographic region at the time period prior to Ms. Lockmiller's murder?

A: I don't know.

Q: Is there any – did you have any recollection of that ever being discussed or being done?

A: I don't have any recollection of it being discussed and I'm not remembering from my review of the records that would indicate that was looked at.<sup>33</sup>

Well trained investigators would have conducted an exhaustive victimology, i.e. a study of the victim. This is especially important in cases like this where the victim's lifestyle included risk-enhancing behaviors such as illegal drug use, alcohol use or abuse, frequenting bars, exchanging telephone numbers with strangers and having multiple sexual partners. Detective Freesmeyer and his colleagues should have compiled a list of friends and associates from school; conducted investigations at the bars she frequented; checked any diaries, journals or calendars that she kept; and interviewed all those people they could identify beginning with those with whom she had been in contact with closest to her time of death. Minimal investigative effort was expended in these areas.

Instead the defendants had created a list of four suspects that almost immediately became a list of one, Alan Beaman. Within hours of discovering the body, before any meaningful investigation had even begun, including an autopsy, the investigators confronted Mr. Beaman, hoping to get a confession from him. Detective Freesmeyer testified that only hours after Ms. Lockmiller's body had been discovered, Alan Beaman was the primary suspect.

Q: So on Saturday night, Beaman was the primary suspect?

A: That would be a fair statement to say. Yes.<sup>34</sup>

But even if one were to limit the universe of suspects only the initial four, it is clear that John Murray was a more viable suspect than Mr. Beaman or the others. Mr. Murray was a former boyfriend of Ms. Lockmiller's and indicated to police that Ms. Lockmiller was interested in seeing him again. He first denied, but then admitted, supplying her with her drugs and said that she owed him money. He also initially misled police about being out of town when the murder occurred, but phone records showed that he was in Normal when the state suspects the murder occurred, had no alibi and resided a short distance from Ms. Lockmiller's apartment. He apparently was working as a confidential informant with authorities to minimize drug charges he could face. He had been charged with domestic violence and Detective Freesmeyer signed that report as shift commander. That report, which was dated October 7, 1994, alleges that Murray victimized his girlfriend, Deborah Mackoway, on a continual basis and she had filed for an order of protection. Murray allegedly pinned her down on the floor and elbowed her repeatedly in the chest. Mackoway reported that she was injured and that there were visible marks on her in between her breasts. A friend of Mackoway's was present and verified the marks where she had been elbowed.<sup>35</sup> Detective Daniels testified that John Murray became

C 10022

Mackoway reported that she was injured and that there were visible marks on her in between her breasts. A friend of Mackoway's was present and verified the marks where she had been elbowed.<sup>35</sup> Detective Daniels testified that John Murray became a suspect in Ms. Lockmiller's murder after his second interview.<sup>36</sup> Authorities attempted to polygraph Murray regarding his knowledge or involvement in Ms. Lockmiller's murder, but discontinued the polygraph because Murray refused to sit still and that type of movement renders the results of any polygraph meaningless. Of concern to Detective Daniels was the fact that Murray lived a 5-7 minute drive from Ms. Lockmiller's apartment and had no alibi during the time the state contends that murder occurred. Detective Daniels noted that Murray was on steroids which he believes, "could have very well tipped his temper so to speak when he went to visit her...or a reason could have been a fact that she owed him money for drugs that she used or that she herself would distribute."<sup>37</sup> Detective Freesmeyer testified that as he took over as the lead investigator he read over what everyone else had done and was aware of these facts, but devalued all of this information about John Murray stating that the totality of those circumstances, "did not raise a red flag that this is our person."<sup>38</sup> Thus, even if the only suspects were Michael Swain, Stacy Gates, John Murray and Alan Beaman, the strongest suspect was not Alan Beaman, but John Murray. But the universe of suspects was much larger and largely unexplored. Even some suspects who were identified, such as Danny Hosey, or Robert Graham, were investigated only superficially.

On September 27, 1993, Detectives Hospelhorn and Warner went to an abandoned truck stop at Main and Northtown Road in Normal and met a transient identified as Danny R. Hosey. He had knives in his car that appeared to have blood on them. Mr. Hosey described himself as a manic depressive who had been off his medication for sometime. He reportedly seemed disoriented and quoted from the bible. A previous employer was contacted and advised they had not seen him for some time, but recently observed him riding a bicycle on September 26, 1993. Investigators obtained an arrest photo and fingerprints of Mr. Hosey.<sup>39</sup> There is no indication that those prints were compared with the latent prints recovered from the crime scene or whether the knives were seized and tested for blood.

An arrest record for Robert Graham showing seven arrests for criminal trespass and other violations along with "investigate mental case" was in the file with the handwritten note, "Possible Suspect - follow up - Lt. Zayas". However, I could find no follow up investigation on this suspect. The lack of a thorough victimology, and a failure to look for prior similar crimes, as well as registered sex offenders, known burglars in the area, etc. unduly limited the scope of the crime. The lack of a thorough victimology and failure to look for prior similar crimes, as well as known sex offenders and burglars in the area, etc. unduly limited the scope of this investigation.

Freesmeyer's theory regarding motivation was that Mr. Beaman killed her in a fit of jealous rage. Social science and criminological research in the area of intimate partner violence is prolific and has been profusely published. One of the underlying dynamics in such cases is the pathological need to possess the targeted victim and the refusal to let the individual go. A common sentiment is, "If I can't have her, no one can." Forensic Psychiatrist Ronald Markman has written that, "...the heart of the issue is control....Men like this make their women into such integral parts of their lives that when the women threatened to break free, the danger was not one of loss of love, but a loss of control that was psychically interpreted as potential loss of life itself. Running away or 'letting go' could not dissipate the anxiety created by this anticipated loss. In fact, both of these steps would only heighten the anxiety. Unfortunately, violence usually is just what is needed to dissipate the anxiety as well as restore control.<sup>40</sup> The dynamics in this case are the complete opposite. At the time Ms. Lockmiller was murdered it appears that she was attempting to rekindle her relationship with Mr. Beaman, but he wanted her out of his life. It was she who called Mr. Beaman repeatedly. He did not call her at all. There is no indication that he was demanding that she not leave him. In fact, he consistently maintained that he was done with her and wanted her out of his life. An example of this can be clearly seen in the surreptitiously monitored conversation Mr. Beaman had with Michael Swain.

Mike: Morgan told me you talked to her on Monday though.

Alan: She called me.

Mike: What did she say?

Alan: She was trying to crawl back to me and I said, "I don't love you" ...and I hung up.

Mike: Dude, she was happy with me.

Alan: All I know is she was on the phone talking to me saying, "don't you think we could get back together some day" and I said, "No, I don't love you" and I hung up, is the last thing I ever said to her.<sup>41</sup>

By May of 1994 organizational momentum to charge Mr. Beaman appears to have taken over and a meeting was held to confirm that they would charge Mr. Beaman with Ms. Lockmiller's murder. Detective Daniels claimed that when he attempted to discuss the leads in the case that were developed at a conference on unsolved homicides that he attended the month before Mr. Souk cut him off. Detective Daniels testified that Mr. Souk said, "I think we went as far as we can with this case. We are going to go ahead and issue a warrant for his arrest, meaning Alan Beaman's arrest."<sup>42</sup> Detective Daniels testified that right after the meeting he asked Police Chief Taylor why he was not given an opportunity to speak about his seminar findings. Chief Taylor asked him why he did not speak up and Daniels replied that he had, but was cut off.<sup>43</sup> As noted above, no time trials had yet been conducted to determine if Mr. Beaman could have traveled from the bank to his home in time to make the two phone calls. Nonetheless, the defendants arrested Mr. Beaman for murder.

A standard investigative approach applied by the FBI and other leading law enforcement agencies is to apply a "template of plausibility" to criminal investigations, especially to a dominant hypothesis if one exists. This approach requires investigators to constantly question the plausibility of their assumptions, theories and conclusions.

In this case, investigators failed to apply the template of plausibility and failed to recognize that they had created numerous implausible and fanciful assumptions and conclusions as discussed above.

I have more than forty-five years of experience in investigating violent crimes, interviewing violent offenders and innocent suspects. I have trained FBI Agents, police officers, prosecutors and defense attorneys across the globe in proper investigative and interview techniques. Based on my review of the record in this case, it is my opinion that this investigation was riddled with almost every conceivable investigative failure possible and presents a case study on how such failures can lead to the arrest and conviction of an innocent individual. That the investigation was fatally flawed is primarily confirmed by the fact that it has never led to the real killer of Jennifer Lockmiller.

The statements and behavior of Mr. Beaman were not evidence of his guilt, but evidence of his innocence. The defendants violated the basic standards for police investigations by rushing to a judgment about the type of crime they were investigating, who was responsible for having committed it and either searching for or creating evidence that supported those conclusions while withholding exculpatory information about drive times and alternate suspects from the defense and consequently from the jury. In doing so they showed an utter disregard for the truth that not only denied justice for Mr. Beaman, but also needlessly endangered the public by leaving a murderer on the streets free to kill again.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

10

BY MR. SOUK:

11

12

Q Would you state your name, please, and spell your 13 last name?

14

A John Dierker, D-I-E-R-K-E-R.

15

Q By whom are you employed, Mr. Dierker?

16

A I'm employed with the Illinois State Police, Bureau
17 of Forensic Sciences, at the crime laboratory in Morton, 18 Illinois.

19

Q How long have you had that employment?

20

A Approximately ten years.

21

Q What is your job title?

22

A I'm a forensic scientist in the latent fingerprint
23 section.

24

Q What are your duties there?

1 to whether we'll find a print.

2 A print on a piece of glass, versus say a brick or rock,
3 something with a very rough irregular surface. And finally 4 how a print or how an object is treated afterwards is very 5 important as to whether we'll find a print or not. If it's 6 extensively handled, if it's exposed to temperatures, extreme
7 temperatures or humidity, that could all be very detrimental
8 to finding a latent print.

9 Q Also a number of factors as to how long -- if a good
10 latent print is left, how long it will last?

11 A There's no scientific way to determine how long a
12 latent print can last on an item.

13 Q Just give us an overall view, you've examined a 14 number of items in connection with this case and made some 15 identification of latent prints that are of value. Is that
16 correct?

17 A Yes.

18 Q Are you going to be able to tell us the age of any 19 of those fingerprints?

20 A No.

21 Q Is there any knowledge within your discipline at the 22 present time that allows any fingerprint examiner anywhere to 23 give that kind of information?

24 A No, not that I'm aware of, no.

1 Q Now opening People's Exhibit No. 62 and handing you
2 an object that appears to be an instrument cluster from a
3 vehicle. Ask you to examine that and tell us if that's one of 4 the items you were given for examination purposes in 5 connection with this case?

6 A Yes, it is.

7 Q Anywhere on that particular object did you find any 8 latent print of value for comparison purposes?

9 A Yes, I found nine latent impressions suitable for 10 comparison on the instrument cluster.

11 Q And were any of those nine prints the prints of Alan 12 Wayne Beaman?

13 A No.

14 MR. SOUK: May I have just a moment, your Honor?

15 THE COURT: You may.

16 Q (By Mr. Souk) I'm going to show you People's Exhibit
17 No. 25-A. I'm not going to open these clothing items. I'd 18 ask you to look at the packaging and tell us what that 19 contains.

20 A Contains a belt.

21 Q And is that an item that you were given to examine 22 for fingerprint evidence in connection with this case?

23 A Yes.

24 Q Did you find any latent prints of value on that belt?

A I found no latent impressions suitable for comparison.

Q Thank you. Show you People's Exhibit No. 40, which is already open, and is a red shoe. Ask you if that's an item you were given to examine in connection with this case.

A Yes.

Q And did you find any latent prints of value suitable for comparison?

A No, I found no latent impressions suitable for comparison.

Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 38, which I believe has already been opened, and contains a pink lighter, and ask you if that's an item you examined for latent fingerprints in connection with this case?

A Yes, it is.

Q Did you find any latent prints of value suitable for comparison purposes on that object?

A No, I found no suitable prints on this object.

Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 47, will not ask you to open this. Ask you from the labeling to tell us what's in that and if you examined it.

A This is marked trash taken from the victim's apartment, and, yes, I examined it.

C10045

1 Q Did you find any latent prints of value for
2 comparison purposes on any of the items in there?

3 A No, I found no suitable prints.

4 Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 43. We are not
5 opening this item because it has biohazard written on it.
6 Could you tell us what's in that package?

7 A Marked red handled scissors removed from the 8 victim's chest at autopsy.

9 Q Were you, in fact, provided a pair of scissors in 10 that bag and examined it for latent prints?

11 A Yes.

12 Q What was the result of that examination?

13 A My examination revealed no latent impressions
14 suitable for comparison on the pair of scissors.

15 Q Show you People's Exhibit 45, and the little package
16 that is 45-A, and this one's been opened so ask you if you
17 recognize those items? You don't need to open the smaller 18 package.

19 A Yes, I recognize the electrical cord. I'm not sure.
20 I recognize this piece of evidence.

21 Q Okay. That other package states it contains some 22 hair that was --

23 A Oh, okay.

24 Q -- tied in the electrical cord.

1           A    That was done in my presence at the Morton
2 laboratory.

3           Q    That was removed for another examiner to look at?

4           A    That's right.

5           Q    You don't do hair?

6           A    That's right.

7           Q    The electrical cord, did you examine that for latent
8 prints of value?

9           A    Yes.

10          Q    What was the result of that examination?

11          A    I found no suitable prints on the electrical cord.

12          Q    The last two items that you examined, the scissors
13 and the electrical cord. First as to the electrical cord,
14 could you comment please for us on the -- how good a surface
15 that cord is as far as leaving a latent print?

16          A    This particular electrical cord, there's very small 17 surface area to it, plus it's rounded. I think it would 18 probably be very difficult to find any latent impressions on 19 this cord.

20          Q    So it didn't really surprise you that you got no
21 result off that?

22          A    No, that would be very difficult. What I would 23 consider a very difficult surface to find prints on.

24          Q    How about the scissors, better or worse than the

1 electrical --

2 A The blade area would be better probably than the 3 electrical cord. However, the handles would be difficult.

4 Q Okay. The handle, you're talking about the red part
5 where you grasp it?

6 A Where you would grab a hold of the scissors.

7 Q That would not be a very good surface for prints
8 either?

9 A I don't believe so.

10 Q Why is that?

11 A Again, the rounded surface, it's a very small 12 surface. It's just not a very good surface to find prints off
13 of.

14 Q So it didn't surprise you that you didn't find 15 anything there either?

16 A No.

17 Q Show you now People's Exhibit No. 35, ask you again
18 to identify this by the labeling and not open it.

19 A Marked as plastic bag containing trash removed from 20 the victim's apartment.

21 Q Is that an item that you examined in connection with 22 this investigation?

23 A Yes, it is.

24 Q Did you find any latent prints of value for

1 comparison purposes?

2 A Our Exhibit No. 57, and this is marked 55 would
3 perhaps be the other bag of garbage --

4 Q Let me see. We may have one mixed up here. I think
5 we maybe got our exhibit number mixed up. Let me back up a
6 minute here. When you get items at the lab, you put an 7 exhibit number on them yourself, correct?

8 A Yes, that's correct.

9 Q And you write your reports based on your exhibit
10 number as you put it down?

11 A That's correct.

12 Q And if I do this right, I'm supposed to get the same
13 exhibit number on the court document or exhibits?

14 A That's what I was told.

15 Q And looks like we mixed that up a little bit?

16 A Yes.

17 Q Let's see if we can straighten it out. People's 18 Exhibit 57 that you previously looked at is actually your 19 People's Exhibit 55. Is that correct?

20 A That's correct.

21 Q And People's Exhibit 55 which I just showed you is 22 actually your Exhibit 57, correct?

23 A That's correct.

24 Q Okay. Now going back to 57, if I now show you

1 People's Exhibit 55, which is your Exhibit 57, is your
2 testimony still correct that for your Exhibit 57 and what you
3 thought was our Exhibit 57, that there were no latent prints
4 of value?

5 A My Exhibit 57 contained no latent prints suitable
6 for comparison.

7 Q All right. Now showing you once again our People's 8 57, which we recognize is your 55, could you tell us what the 9 results of your examination of People's 57 was?

10 A Yes, I found five latent impressions suitable for 11 comparison on the luggage tags contained within this bag.

12 Q In comparing those with the known prints that you
13 had, were any of those latent prints made by Jennifer
14 Lockmiller?

15 A Yes, there were two identifications to the 16 fingerprint -- fingerprint card marked Jennifer Lynn
17 Lockmiller.

18 Q Any prints identified as those of Michael Swaine?

19 A No.

20 Q Or Alan Wayne Beaman?

21 A No.

22 Q The other three latent prints, you made no
23 identification on?

24 A That's correct.

1 Q I'm going to show you People's Exhibit No. 56, and 2 without removing it, ask you to look at that item. And was 3 this an item you were provided at some stage of the 4 investigation to process for prints?

5 A Yes.

6 Q And did you do that in the laboratory?

7 A Yes, I did.

8 Q What was the result of your examination?

9 A My examination revealed that there was one latent
10 impression suitable for comparison on the garbage can.

11 Q And whose -- did you make an identification with the 12 known prints that you had?

13 A Yes.

14 Q And whose print was that?

15 A That latent print was made by the person whose 16 prints appeared on the fingerprint card of Michael J. Swaine.

17 Q I think we've got too much garbage here. I think we 18 missed one of those. Let me show you People's Exhibit 56,
19 which is also your Exhibit 56, and ask you if that -- what 20 that item contains?

21 A It's marked garbage bag taken from the victim's
22 bathroom.

23 Q And are there items of garbage in there also?

24 A Yes.

1 Q Did you make an examination of the contents of that
2 bag in connection with this investigation?

3 A Yes.

4 Q What were the results as far as first obtaining
5 latent prints of value?

6 A My examination revealed that there were eight latent
7 impressions suitable for comparison. They were all on the 8 garbage bag, itself.

9 Q Were any of those latent prints the prints of 10 Jennifer Lockmiller?

11 A Yes, three of the latent impressions were made by 12 the person's whose ink fingerprints appear on the card marked
13 Jennifer Lynn Lockmiller.

14 Q Any of the six prints identified to anyone?

15 A I identified two additional prints.

16 Q And who were those identified to?

17 A Identified to the card containing the name Tony 18 Daniels.

19 Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 60, and I'm opening 20 and removing some print cards from it, and is one of those the 21 print card of Tony Daniels from the Normal Police Department
22 that you compared in connection with this exhibit?

23 A Yes, it is.

24 Q Is it fairly common during the course of

1 investigations for you to get the fingerprints of police
2 officers and crime scene technicians who were involved in 3 gathering evidence to eliminate prints?

4 A We occasionally get those, yes.

5 Q The other four latent prints that you found on that 6 exhibit, did you make any identifications on those?

7 A No.

8 Q Show you People's Exhibit No. 46, ask you if you
9 recognize that item, again without opening it?

10 A Yes, I do.

11 Q What is that item?

12 A It's marked pink kitchen garbage bag found on sofa.

13 Q And did you examine that in connection with this
14 investigation?

15 A Yes, I did.

16 Q What were the results of that examination?

17 A My examination revealed that there were seven latent
18 impressions suitable for comparison on the garbage bag.

19 Q Did you make any identifications?

20 A Yes, I did.

21 Q What was the results on that?

22 A Five of the seven suitable latent prints were made
23 by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the 24 fingerprint card marked Jennifer Lockmiller.

1 lab as a crime scene technician?
2 A No, I think he submitted that to me.
3 Q Finally I'd ask you to put on a pair of gloves, if 4 you would, and examine People's Exhibit 23, and remove that 5 item. Do you recognize that item?
6 A Yes, I do.
7 Q And what is that?
8 A It's a Sony clock radio.
9 Q Was that submitted to you for examination in 10 connection with this investigation?
11 A Yes.
12 Q Did you examine it for latent fingerprints?
13 A Yes, I did.
14 Q What were the results of that examination?
15 A I found seven latent impressions suitable for 16 comparison on the clock radio.
17 Q With the known fingerprints that you had, did you
18 make any identifications?
19 A Yes.
20 Q And would you tell us the results of that
21 examination?
22 A Two of the seven latent impressions were made by the 23 person whose inked fingerprints appeared on the card marked
24 Alan Wayne Beaman, and four of the suitable latent prints were

C10055

1 made by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the card
2 marked Michael J. Swaine.

3 Q The remaining latent print, did you make any 4 identifications on that one?

5 A No.

6 Q Again, based on the unavailability of Miss
7 Lockmiller's additional prints, could that print have been 8 hers?

9 A Yes. I would need additional prints in order to 10 tell that.

11 Q You can return that to the bag. All of the 12 examinations and the results that you have testified to here
13 this morning, were those made to a reasonable degree of 14 scientific certainty based on the latest techniques available
15 in your field of expertise?

16 A Yes.

17 MR. SOUK: Thank you. Tender the witness, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Cross examination.

19 MR. BEU: Yes, thank you, judge.
20

21 CROSS EXAMINATION

1 scene, brushing their clothing, for example, against doors or 2 doorways or furniture, could that have the effect of 3 dislodging latent prints that might otherwise have been there?

4 A Yes, that could interfere with the residue also.

5 Q You've indicated that there is, in your knowledge
6 and experience, no way to attempt to age fingerprints,
7 correct?

8 A That's correct, to tell the age, yes.

9 Q Speaking specifically of the prints that you found
10 on the Sony clock radio, you also looked at them, did you not,
11 in an effort to see if they overlapped in any fashion, the six 12 prints that you found?

13 A Yes, I was asked to see if one was on top of one the 14 other prints.

15 Q You found that they did not overlap. Isn't that
16 correct?

17 A That's correct.

18 Q Had they overlapped that might have provided you 19 some basis to make an opinion as to a sequence in which they 20 were placed on the item?

21 A That's possible, but it would be very difficult to 22 determine that.

23 Q Was there a square box fan brought to you as part of 24 this investigation?

Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 57

1 A. Well, I mean, I was aware from reading the interviews
2 that Detective Daniels, perhaps as he had with Mr. Beaman, took 3 on a somewhat accusatory confrontative style of interviewing,
4 and particularly in the second interview. But I don't recall
5 anything other than what was in the interviews themselves.

6 Q. When Bill Heu was making his arguments and asking the 7 court to deny your motion in limine, were you aware that John 8 Murray was one of the possible other suspects that he was 9 addressing his concerns to?

10 A. During the first argument on that, I am not sure that 11 Murray's name was ever mentioned. I can't remember that 100
12 percent for sure. I don't think his name was mentioned. On the 13 second argument on March 15th, Murray is most of the discussion.

14 Q. At that point were you aware of the domestic violence
15 charges against Murray?

16 A. I would have been, sure.

17 Q. Were you apprised that John Murray had had two, I
18 think two appointments with a polygraph examiner?

19 A. That I don't have any recollection of. I'm aware now
20 and I have seen your exhibit with the report and so forth, but I
21 have no recollection about that.

22 Q. Did Detective Daniels ever talk to you about this to 23 the best of your memory?

24 A. I don't have any recollection of it.

C10117

1 Q. Did you ever -- sorry to repeat this, but just so the
2 record is clear, you have looked at exhibits in our submissions
3 of the polygrapher's impressions?

4 A. I saw a typewritten report and then some graphs and
5 some handwritten notes and so forth.

6 Q. So as you sit here today, your statement is that you
7 had never seen those pretrial?

8 A. I don't have any recollection of having seen them.
9 When I reviewed the State's Attorney's Office file, I didn't see
10 any indication they were ever in there. Certainly they are not 11 in discovery. If I had received them, they would have been in 12 discovery.

13 Q. Why?

14 A. Well, I provided everything in discovery. If you go
15 talk to Mrs. Domnick, my co-counsel, she will tell you that 16 those were my clear explicit instructions that we don't play
17 games with discovery. If we get something, we provide it. If
18 the police send it over, we provide it.

19 Q. That's fine. I guess the question is with reference
20 to the significance of the polygraph paperwork that you have
21 read. Had you known that, that as the examiner concluded Murray
22 had attempted to manipulate the polygraph results, would that 23 have been a significant fact for you in your consideration of 24 other suspects?

CAROL JEANNE BEAMAN,

having been called as a witness herein on behalf of the Defendant, having been first duly sworn on her oath, was examined and testified as follows, to-wit:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. BEU:

Q State your full name, please, and spell it for the court reporter.

A Carol Jeanne Beaman. The Jeanne is spelled, J-E-A-- J-E-A-N-N-E, and Beaman, B-E-A-M-A-N.

Q Mrs. Beaman, where do you live?

A [REDACTED], Rockford, Illinois.

Q You're married?

A Yes, I am.

Q You have a family?

A Yes, I do.

Q Tell us the composition of your family.

A My husband, and myself, and two sons and a daughter-in-law.

Q Okay. You're Alan's mother?

A Yes, I am.

medicine, you name it.

Q And now Mr. Beu asked you if you had independent recollection of being there 15 to 20 minutes that day, and I think your answer was that, well, you usually stayed 15 or 20 minutes.

A That would be about how much it would take to make sure she was back in her room, and usually -- usually I would check with the lady that lived with her to see if they needed anything, and set up medications and whatever else.

Q But again, you're going on usually and not some independent recollection of that day?

A I cannot remember any time when it wasn't that way. And besides, at my age, I would have had to stop at a restroom, too.

Q If you signed her out at ten o'clock, then you're out of there by 10:15?

A Signed her in at ten o'clock.

Q Signed her in, yes.

A I'd be out of there by, yeah, 10:15, 10:20, probably just depends.

Q And then the rest of the day you went shopping and returned home at 2:15 to 2:16. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Now first let me call your attention to the notes

C10427

1 that you made on August the 30th, and at that time you
2 indicated that, "After having breakfast I took my mother
3 home and did some shopping before returning home," and
4 there's a mark here, that you have indicated means
5 approximately --

6 A That's right.

7 Q -- "three P.M."?

8 A That's correct.

9 Q And at that point in your notes you didn't
10 elaborate, did you, on what kind of shopping you did?

11 A No, I didn't.

12 Q Incidentally, how long does it take you to drive
13 from where your mother lived then in Independence Village to 14 your home on [REDACTED] Road?

15 A I wouldn't attempt to make it in less than half an 16 hour.

17 Q If I told you that Detective Freesmeyer made it at 18 the speed limit in 16 minutes, would that surprise you?

19 A I would say he was lucky. He hit all the stop
20 lights, right?

21 Q And when you got home, Alan was sound asleep.
22 You assume he was?

23 A When I got home, his car was in the driveway. The 24 dog gate was open. The dog was by his closed door.

C10428

1 Q That was always your signal. You didn't make a
2 habit of going in and actually seeing him in bed?

3 A I don't know of how many mothers of nearly 21
4 year-old young men would open the door and check to see if 5 their sons were asleep.

6 Q I agree. Now on May the 18th when you were 7 questioned by Detective Daniels here at the Law & Justice
8 Center, on that day you said that you took her back to her
9 apartment, and then you did some grocery shopping, and then
10 when you got home it was somewhere between 2:30 and three 11 o'clock, and he was sound asleep in his bed?

12 A Correct. And to the nearest that I could recall 13 at that point that would have been what it would have been.
14 I knew I would have done some grocery shopping, because it
15 was the day before I was going to start really full-time
16 work at that point again for the fall. Other shopping I was 17 not really aware of from the standpoint of specificity. It
18 was only later when I had some time to work on that that I
19 came up with the receipts.

20 Q And then the following week when you were asked --
21 you testified at the bond hearing, correct?

22 A That is correct.

23 Q And Mr. Beu asked you, at that time, after you --
24 when you next had occasion to see Alan, and at that point

1485

C10429

AB018751

1 you gave the answer, "Wednesday at five in the evening."

2 That he was asleep when you woke him up, correct?

3 A I tried to wake him at five, I think. It was more
4 like six when he finally came out to -- to the dining room.

5 Q But I take it now that when you gave that answer,
6 what you really meant was -- is you took that question
7 literally and --

8 A Yes.

9 Q -- you didn't actually see him until five, but you
10 were still saying you were home --

11 A That's right.

12 Q -- sometime in that afternoon and the dog was in 13 front of the door?

14 A That's correct.

15 Q And in fact in that bond hearing you said that on 16 some other days, didn't you, that's how you told he was 17 home?

18 A Yes.

19 Q And at that time, at the bond hearing, when you
20 were asked your basic schedule that week, do you remember
21 telling Mr. Beu that school was not in session yet, but on 22 Wednesday you had taken your mother to the doctor for some 23 tests which did not take up the whole day, but a good part 24 of it?

A Hm-mmm.

Q Remember giving that answer?

A Yes, I do. Leaving at seven and taking her back to her apartment by ten, and spending time there, I would say would be a good portion of my day.

Q And basically in that bond hearing there wasn't any mention made of the shopping or where you'd been shopping?

A That's correct.

Q Correct?

A As far as I know.

Q Now your indication here is that, I take it, it had been a very hectic time for you, not just because of your son's situation, but because you had both been teaching all year, and you were pursuing a master's program?

A That is correct. I was working on my thesis at the time all of this was going on.

Q And so sometime beginning about May 27th is when it finally occurred to you that maybe you ought to try to check out the paper trail of where you were that day?

A My last class met May 17th, 1994. That was the day my son was arrested. On the way home from my last class I was daydreaming about all the things that I was going to do with all that wonderful free time that I had suddenly

1 been given. I arrived home to find the answering machine
2 blinking and his message to me saying that he had been
3 arrested and to call Bill, meaning Mr. Beu.

4 Q Okay, but I think, hadn't you previously indicated
5 that there was another week or ten days of dealing with 6 this?

7 A Dealing with that, the arrest, and trying to get 8 him bonded out, and -- and then at that point I still had to 9 write finals for five classes.

10 Q But at least some time during, let's say the early
11 part of June --

12 A When I finished writing my finals, that's when I
13 sat and tried to be very specific about the time.

14 Q And that's the point at which you tracked down
15 your Wal-Mart receipt and your Union Hall receipt, correct?

16 A That's correct.

17 Q And those are the two receipts that you found 18 first?

19 A That's correct.

20 Q And then based on that, you then remembered that 21 you had gone grocery shopping that day?

22 A It's not a matter of remembering. It's a matter
23 of saying, if I could pin that down and what store I was at.
24 I checked my canceled checks, found the check, and then I --

1488

C10432

AB018754

1 as has been indicated before even today, after finding the
2 canceled check, I went through a kind of what-if. I
3 wondered if I still had that receipt in the canister on the 4 T.V., and I sat down and spread those out over my kitchen
5 table, looking over every one of them, hunting for that one.

6 Q You're saying you already knew you went grocery
7 shopping, you just didn't know where?

8 A I would have gone to the store nearest my mother,
9 or the store closest to me, and I didn't know which one it
10 would have been.

11 Q Again calling your attention to your grand jury
12 testimony, and ask if you recall giving -- saying these 13 words as part of an answer that you gave: "And realizing
14 that I said I had gone shopping, there must be a paper trail
15 related to that, either canceled checks or receipts from 16 credit card. Credit card company sends me a yearly print-
17 out of everything that I charge, the type of store, the name
18 of the store, the date, the amount. So I went through that,
19 and when I saw that both charges that I had for that day
20 were in Loves Park, then I figured I must have also gone to 21 the grocery store that day since it was going to be the last 22 day before school started and I needed lunch materials, and 23 I started looking at canceled checks."?

24 A That's correct.

1489

C10433

AB018755

1 Q Well, you've indicated there that it's from the
2 receipts that you figured out that you went grocery
3 shopping?
4 A No, no, excuse me, after finding the receipts and
5 the credit card. First I found the credit card statement --
6 not found it, I had it. I looked at it. And I believe
7 earlier today I indicated to you that after seeing that I
8 had actually charged something those -- that day, I then 9 went to my file to find the actual receipts. Looking at 10 those and the times involved I also realized I would not 11 have been buying my groceries before, but after those 12 receipts, and I wanted to narrow it down further. So I went 13 to my canceled check file, found the canceled check, then 14 from there went to the container of grocery receipts to look
15 for further information.
16 Q And at that point in time, when you found the 17 canceled check, you still didn't know --
18 A For sure which store.
19 Q -- the store you went to. That's because the 20 check was made out to Gray's IGA, and there's four of them,
21 correct?
22 A That's correct.
23 Q So then you had to search further in this bucket
24 that you had kept your grocery receipts in during that year?

independent recollection?

A I'm saying that's the way I would have traveled.
If you want to call it an independent recollection, yes.

Q Now in leaving from your mother's --

A Yes.

Q -- you're indicating, of course, that you didn't go home at that point, correct?

A That is correct.

Q And you now know, I take it, from the phone records and discovery materials that there were two phone calls made out of your home at 10:37 and 10:39 that day?

A That is correct.

Q And you're telling us that you didn't make those phone calls?

A I did not make those calls, no.

Q And again, you're telling us that based on habit and what you ordinarily would have done that it would have made logical sense for you to have gone from your mother's to Wal-Mart because they're very close together?

A They're right across the street from each other.

Q As you sit there now, are you telling us that you have a clear independent recollection that you never went home that day?

Q Do you know where your husband was that day?

A At work at Woodward Governor, 35th Street plant.

Q He ordinarily would not have been home at that time?

A No, it's too far from our home to work to go home during the day.

Q So basically you don't know who made those phone calls, do you?

A Unless the dog made them, Alan made them.

Q You did make a phone call or have a phone call, phone conversation with Pastor Olson that afternoon, didn't you?

A Yes, Mitch called. Mitch Olson, who I think you've already heard from, called around three o'clock that afternoon, and apparently he and Alan had planned to rehearse that day. He asked if Alan was home, and I said, "Yes, but he's asleep." And he said, "Well, we need to plan a time when we're going to rehearse." And I suggested to him, at that time, that we were coming for the ice cream social, and if he was going to be there, that would be a logical time to rehearse.

Q And if the phone records indicate that call was made at precisely three o'clock, would you have any argument

The deposition of Mr. Joshua Whitney, called the above-entitled action, taken before Amy R. Campos,

Plaintiff's Exhibit No. 60

1 that was reported to me by others during the trial
2 process. Other friends were down for the trial and told
3 me about what -- the circumstances of the crime at least 4 as it was being presented by the prosecution.

5 Q. So you were in Rockford at the time Alan --

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. -- was on trial?

8 A. Yes. Sorry. Yes.

9 Q. That's okay. Do you recall what friends were 10 reporting to you what was happening at trial?

11 A. Chris Carbone.

12 Q. Did he sit through the trial that you know of?

13 A. He was there for at least a portion of it if not 14 the entire thing.

15 Q. What did he tell you about the timing of 16 Jennifer's murder?

17 A. That it was being presented that Alan had driven
18 down on the day of when they said her murder took place,
19 had had some kind of altercation with her, had killed her
20 and then driven back home and that, if my memory is 21 correct, his mother later found him sleeping at home or he 22 had to go to work that evening. I don't remember all of 23 the details.

24 Q. So what about his piece of junk car, as you call

C10528

1 it, would not allow him to get to and from Bloomington?

2 A. It was frequently breaking down. It had engine
3 problems, suspension problems. We commonly referred to it
4 as the millennium falcon, which in the Star Wars motif it
5 was constantly breaking down and having problems that just 6 wouldn't allow for it to drive two hours down and two 7 hours back without fitting into a perfect time frame as 8 was being presented at the time.

9 Q. Do you know whether Alan had driven that car to 10 and from Bloomington before?

11 A. Not for some months to my knowledge. I honestly
12 don't know what Alan's situation was for transportation at 13 the time. If he had access to another vehicle, I don't 14 know about it.

15 Q. Well, Alan had that piece of junk car in 16 Bloomington, right?

17 A. Yes. And he had nursed it back up to Rockford
18 on more than one occasion where he had to stop and get 19 some part working, or he had to get it towed, I believe,
20 on one occasion because it just stopped running.

21 Q. Did you ever ride in Alan's car on a trip either
22 to or from Bloomington to Rockford?

23 A. Once, I believe, during the holidays in 1993
24 or -- let me think for a moment. I believe -- actually,

C10529

1 around Christmas of 1992, I believe, we drove back up to
2 Rockford from Bloomington-Normal, and there was minor car
3 trouble along the way but nothing that he couldn't handle
4 at the time. Within another year -- I think that car was 5 actually no longer functioning at all within another year
6 or so.

7 Q. Did it break down during the time you were 8 riding in it?

9 A. It did not break down at that time, but he had 10 to do several sort of preventive maintenance things to 11 keep it running, check the coolant, refill it, make sure
12 that certain parts of it were working.

13 Q. Did you speak with any of Alan's lawyers --
14 criminal lawyers after his arrest?

15 A. No.

16 Q. Why not?

17 A. I was never asked.

18 Q. Did you feel like you had information that could 19 help Alan's defense?

20 A. No.

21 Q. Did you ever speak with any investigators
22 working on his behalf at the time of his trial?

23 A. No.

24 Q. What was your observation of how Alan reacted

This is Detective Hospelhorn. It's August 31, 1993 on Tuesday morning at approximately 10:09 a.m. and I am at the Normal Police Department interviewing Mr. David Singley.

Rob: Sir, could you state your name and spell your last name please.

David: Yes, my name is David Singley, S I N G L E Y.

Rob: And you understand that you are here on your own free will and you can leave at any time, is that correct?

David: Yes, that is correct.

Rob: This statement is given of your own free will.

David: That's correct.

Rob: Mr. Singley, I understand that you live in the same building as the victim. Could you give your address and apartment number?

David: Yes, my address is [REDACTED] Normal, Illinois 61761.

Rob: And your phone number?

David: My phone number is 309-454-4610.

Rob: Is your apartment directly across from the victim's apartment?

David: Yes sir, it is.

Rob: Did you know the victim?

David: Just in passing.

Rob: Did you know what her name was?

David: Yes, I did.

Rob: Ok, can you tell me what that is?

David: Yes, her name is Jennifer Lockmiller.

Rob: Had you ever been to her apartment or had she ever come over to your apartment for anything?

David: I had been to her apartment when we previewed the apartment complex last September of 1992 when we were looking towards renting an apartment for this year we previewed an apartment and that was the only time I had ever been in her apartment.

Rob: During the last week, starting say Sunday, August 22nd, through Saturday, August 28th, did you have any opportunity to see Jennifer around the apartment? The only time I saw her I believe was either Sunday afternoon or sometime Monday. I just seen her in passing uh, I don't know if she had been seeing some friends or what she had been doing but I just happened to see her out in the parking area out there.

Rob: Was she by herself at this time or was someone with her?

David: No, she was by herself.

Rob: Did you see her after Sunday afternoon or Monday?

David: No, I didn't.

Rob: Have you seen her vehicle in the lot, do you know which vehicle is hers?

David: Yes, I do.

Rob: Have you seen her vehicle leave or come back at any time during that week?

David: Not that I can recall right off the top of my head at this time.

Rob: Did you see anyone either come or go from her apartment during the week?

David: See, no I didn't but I noticed during the course of the week there was another car in the parking lot which um, I just know by previous association was a visitor of hers.

Rob: Do you know what type of car it is?

David: It appeared to be like a late 88 or 89 model I want to say it was a white Sunbird. Kind of a mid size car, I believe it was two door. I didn't really get that great of a look at it cause I didn't pay that much attention to it.

Rob: Are you sure that it is a Sunbird or Cougar or something else.

David: It could have been something else but it was a long the lines of like economy mid-size car, something like that.

Rob: And do you know approximately when you seen that there in the parking lot. Now the parking lot I am assuming you are talking about [REDACTED], is that correct?

David: That's correct.

Rob: Ok.

David: I saw it Wednesday afternoon at approximately on or about 2:00 o'clock.

Rob: in the afternoon, going back to the car, you say you are not sure if it was a two door or a four door?

David: No, just assuming from the size, I would say it was a two door.

Rob: Could it have been any type of vehicle as far as the make that's in that line.

David: It was an American made car.

Rob: An American made car?

David: There was no doubt that it wasn't an Import.

Rob: Wasn't an import. Was there anything else on the vehicle you said it was white in color?

David: That's correct.

Rob: Was there anything else on the vehicle that you can distinguish?

David: I believe there was a bumper sticker on either side of the license plate but uh I really I can't remember, I didn't pay that much attention, I just noticed that there was a bumper, there was ah, you know, one or two bumper stickers.

Rob: Did you see who got in or who got out of that vehicle?

David: No, I really can't recall at this time.

Rob: How many times had you seen either this car or a car that is similar to this one in that parking lot?

David: I can recall maybe one or two other times during the course of the summer that that car was parked there in that parking lot.

Rob: You say that car, are you positive that it's that same car or is it possible that it could be a different one?

David: I would say there is a possibility it could have been a different one but I just really doubt it just because just ah just from association I recognized that I have seen it before but I wouldn't say that it's not possible that it might have been another one similar.

Rob: Do you know who drove the other vehicle that you think this one might have been?

David: Honestly, I can't recall at this time. Uh,

Rob: Can you describe the person then?

David: I want to say, the only thing that I can remember because I only got a glance a glimpse of them once; it was a male. I would guess in early to mid 20's caucasian. He was he had grown a goatee and he had short hair, but that is really the only thing that I can remember cause it was earlier in the summer.

Rob: Ok. When was it that you had seen this person approximately?

David: I would say it was during the month of July.

Rob: Ok. Have you seen that person around there other than possibly the vehicle last week, but have you seen the person around there since July you said?

David: Uh, since July? Um no. I can't recall that I physically saw the person the only way that I knew that the person might be there was just by association with this vehicle. That's about all I can

Rob: Other than last week, had you seen the vehicle that you were describing earlier there before or since July?

David: Uh, no. Like I say, I have seen it maybe oh gosh, probably once or twice, during the month of July and then this time there in August.

Rob: Do you know, did Jennifer live by herself, or was someone living with her?

David: All the time that I knew she lived alone is about all that you know, she always had either one or two guys that would come over I wouldn't say frequently but they came around fairly often, you know.

Rob: Have you lived at your address there [REDACTED], how long have you lived there?

David: I have lived there since Sunday. However, my girlfriend has been renting it since uh mid to late May so I would visit there quite often during the summer during the summer months.

Rob: Did you live there last year?

David: No sir, I did not.

Rob: Is there anything else during the week that you had observed in the area that you wish to tell me now?

David: Sure, uh, Wednesday, when I came home from class on or about 2:00 in the afternoon, I entered, I was going I was approaching the apartment complex off of [REDACTED] and when I came in I opened the main door to the vestibule and the door to her apartment slammed shut real quick uh which I thought was kind of funny because I had approached the building in such a manner that I didn't see anybody go in ahead of me and it was, there was such a short distance to me that I would have assumed that I could have definitely seen somebody going before me or you know come from somewhere, but I didn't see anybody so I went into my own apartment and went on about my business and what not and within about I'd say 5 or 10 minutes, I heard the door to apartment [REDACTED] open and close again but I noticed when I went in, like I noticed pretty much every other day that she always played music cause she was usually always home when I would come home.

Rob: Ok. You said that when after you got back, you heard it slam quickly, did you hear anybody talking or any footsteps?

David: No, I didn't hear anybody talking or any footsteps or anything the only thing I noticed that slammed shut rather quick because I noticed the music I noticed the door had been open because the music was real loud at first and then it kind of got quiet like right after the door closed.

Rob: But you heard the door shut?

David: I heard the door shut, yes sir.

Rob: And then you said you went into your apartment which is [REDACTED] and across the hall?

David: That's correct. Went into my own apartment, like I say, went about my business um, I heard their door open, because I heard the music.

Rob: And how long ago, or how long after that?

David: I would say it was probably, I would guess it was within a 5 or 10 minute time period because

Rob: You said you came home about 2:00 so this would be about 2:00, 2:10, 2:15?

David: I would say it was right around 2:10.

Rob: On Wednesday, August 25th?

David: That's correct. Because I was kind of in a hurry cause it was hot and I was trying to change so I could get down to the pool so I didn't really pay much attention, like I say, I heard their door open again and close the music was still playing, but then whoever it was exited the front door, I didn't like I say, I didn't pay much attention, like I said I didn't pay much attention because I was kind of in a hurry.

Rob: When this person exited you couldn't tell if it was a male/female?

David: No. I couldn't tell.

Rob: Did you hear any vehicles leave at the time?

David: That is something that I have been trying to go over in my mind. I think a vehicle might have left but I am not positive I have been thinking about it as much as I can but I, nothing sparks in my memory.

Rob: Ok. Now when, let's go back to the vehicle that you seen at approximately 2:00, I am assuming that's when you come home from class and then you heard the door and right before that's when you seen this white vehicle?

David: That's correct.

Rob: Ok. Was that vehicle still in the lot when you left?

David: Ok. When I left to go to the pool, it I would assume it still was, I am not positive because, let me think about this here.

Rob: Do you know what time it was when you left to go to the pool?

David: Yea, it was about 2:15.

Rob: Ok. so the person left and it was between 2:00 and 2:15 when this person exited [REDACTED]

David: That's correct.

Rob: Once they exited was the door shut, or open?

David: The door was to her apartment was shut.

Rob: Was the stereo still going at that time?

David: Yes, it was. Yes, it was.

Rob: Do you remember what was playing on the stereo?

David: No, I sure don't. She always seemed like it was usually the same tape or same record that she listened to it alot. It was actually the same thing almost everyday.

Rob: Ok. Was there actual music coming from the room or was there talking?

David: As far as

Rob: Your definite that it was a stereo?

David: Yes.

Rob: And it couldn't have been a television that was on?

David: No. I am positive it was not. It wasn't a television.

Rob: Ok. Um, so after you left to go to the pool, did you notice anything about your return?

David: Ok. I went to the pool, when I left, I noticed that it was hot, but her air conditioning wasn't on, nobody really had em on cause ours doesn't work that good and I kind of figured that it was kinda the way it was for the whole apartment complex. Nobody's really works.

Rob: Her's wasn't on before you left?

David: No.

Rob: I came home on or about 4:30 that afternoon.

Rob: You are still talking about Wednesday the 25th?

David: That's correct. When I came in, opened the door to the vestibule there, and uh right away, when you walk in you can easily hear you know music or what not coming out of you know the apartment, but something struck me that the music was turned off but the TV was on and it was fairly loud actually because I could hear it the walls are thin there anyway but you can kind of tell if it's music or it it's like a TV but it struck me as funny because I could really hear the TV pretty clear.

Rob: Was the door shut to [redacted] at that time?

David: Yes it was.

Rob: And did you say that the air conditioner was on or off when you come back?

David: It was still off um, like I say, I noticed her TV was on because when we go into our apartment which is [redacted], before you go in you can always hear the music or in this case the TV but once you close the door to our and after you are in our apartment you can't hear anything the sounds um, you just can't hear it because the door blocks out the sound but this day, the TV was up so loud, that after I closed the door I could still hear the TV, um, let's see here. I went back to the pool at about 5:15 but this time, I just walked down there because my girlfriend had to have the car to go to work.

Rob: And your girlfriend is who?

David: My girlfriend is Susan Jenkins?

Rob: And she come to make a statement today also, is that correct?

David: That's correct. She also lives at [REDACTED] with me.

Rob: Ok.

David: And at that time, when I went to the pool, I noticed that the air conditioning had been turned on because you know

Rob: That was as you were leaving to go

David: As I was leaving I walked out underneath where the windows to her apartment was and that was on or about 5:15.

Rob: On which day?

David: On Wednesday.

Rob: On Wednesday the 25th of August?

David: That's correct. And I came home on or about 7:30, quarter to eight, didn't really notice anything just that the TV was still on and that was pretty much about it that I can remember for Wednesday.

Rob: Is there anything else that you can remember?

David: Yes there is. Then Wednesday, excuse me, Thursday, the 26th when we returned to the apartment, we being my girlfriend and I, we because Wednesday night, we went back to my house, or actually my mother's house, which is in Chillicothe Illinois um, to pick up a couple things and what not that I had forgotten when I moved down on Sunday, when we came back on Thursday morning the TV was still on and didn't really think much about it being the first week of school and all nobody really knows you know what kind of certain hours or what kind of certain schedule people keep and like I say I really didn't think much about it then Thursday afternoon when I can back from class there was a parking pass that was or a little tag hanging on the handle of the door from Redbird Apartments saying that we all had to go down and sign for our parking passes and what not and I didn't think much about it because everybody had one

Rob: and that was on what day?

David: That was on Thursday.

Rob: Ok. On Thursday when you had seen this, the TV was still on?

David: That's correct, the TV was still on. Let's see here. Then Thursday, well actually it would have been Friday morning, during the course of the night at about 1:00 a.m. Friday morning I was kind of in a restless sleep and cause I had to go to the bathroom and I was procrastinating about getting up and going out to the bathroom cause I was trying to go back to sleep but anyway, I am fairly positive that I heard the door to apartment [redacted] open and close and it was on or about 1:00 a.m. on Friday morning because I thought it was strange then later Friday morning that she had failed to take this little parking notification thing off the handle of her door.

Rob: And this was 1:00 a.m. Friday morning you think?

David: Yes, and like I say, I thought it was strange but then again I thought that she might have been out partying or what not and come back and maybe she was a little too intoxicated and didn't want to worry about getting into the apartment and getting some sleep before class so I didn't I figured well she saw it you know it was good enough.

Rob: Are you positive that it was a door opening and shutting?

David: Yea. I am positive. I couldn't mistake it with any other kind of a sound.

Rob: Ok. Are you positive it was her door?

David: Yea. Because, I just was I got to be familiar with what the door sounds like in different apartments when they open and close cause it's we all all packed in there so close together and the walls are so thin you know you can always tell when somebody's you know.

Rob: Did you hear anything as far as anybody coming up the steps?

David: No I didn't like I say, I was kind of in a in-between sleep and in-between getting up and having to go to the bathroom and what not so I didn't notice anything.

Rob: Ok. Anything else that you can think of?

David: About the only thing I can think of is the thing the reason why that stuck out in my mind was when I went to sign for my pass Friday, the parking pass, everybody I had seen the sheet that we had to sign and I am pretty certain that everybody had signed except I think maybe the fellow that lives down below us hadn't signed yet but we had signed but she had signed but like I say that's what struck me as funny because I thought well hell I know she seen the thing hanging on the

Rob: You say she had signed, who do you mean she?

David: She being Jennifer, she hadn't signed.

Rob: Had not,

David: No, she had not signed. I thought, like I say, I thought it was funny, because we were only allowed a certain amount of time to go pick these passes up and I thought damn she must just be saying the hell with it you know and she is just going to park there or what not, but I didn't think much about it. Friday also, Friday morning I noticed there was kind of slight smell in the vestibule area but I knew she had cats so I didn't really think too much about it.

Rob: Ok. That was Friday morning?

David: That's correct.

Rob: About what time?

David: I would say it was probably 9:00, 9:30.

Rob: In the morning?

David: That's correct. The TV was still on, which I thought was kind of strange but her living alone and pretty much how some people are when they live alone they just turn something on just to have noise you know a TV, a radio or what not, but it seemed like all the times I can remember she always, always played music while she was home that was really the only occasion I can remember that the TV had ever been on, from Wednesday on.

Rob: The stereo. Did the stereo ever come back on after Wednesday afternoon around 2 when you were hearing it did it ever come back on between then and Saturday the 28th?

David: No sir it didn't.

Rob: Was it strictly the TV on between them times?

David: Strictly the TV only.

Rob: Is there anything else that you can think of that you want to add?

David: Uh, noticed that one of her cats, the black cat, which like I say I knew she had three cats, my girlfriend knew it was her cat because she had seen it and somehow it got out of the apartment either Friday or Saturday, so we thought well, you know, we didn't think much about it at the time, but we did notice that somehow it had got out.

Rob: So just to double check on this, was there at anytime during the week, other than Sunday afternoon or Monday when you seen Jennifer, did you see anyone enter or exit apartment [REDACTED]

David: No sir I did not.

Rob: Did you see anyone around apartment number [REDACTED] between that time other than Jennifer on Sunday afternoon or Monday?

David: No sir I did not.

Rob: Anything else that you wish to add?

David: I don't know if this is really has to do with this but ah. There is an instance that took place back in mid July she had a friend she Rob: She meaning?

David: She meaning Jennifer,

Rob: Ok.

David: had a friend and he tried to break into her apartment.

Rob: And do you know what this friend's name is?

David: No, I do not.

Rob: Ok. Do you know what he looked like?

David: Yes. Uh, he had long hair. I would say he was probably about 5'9". He was early 20's at best and he was real lanky. He probably weighed only about 140 or 145. He had long straight black or dark brown hair. Like I say, he tried to break into her apartment. It was about 1:30 or 2:00 in the morning because we had been sleeping there and all of a sudden just all this racket started going on and she yelled something to the effect of she being Jennifer, yelled something like what are you doing here. How did you get here and he said something to the effect he said I need to talk to you and he said I came to get my fucking keys. Jennifer said you know just get out of here. Just leave. He said I rode my bicycle over here but I want to talk with you and then she said leave or I'll call the cops and he just said fucking bitch and he just kept I don't know of he was kicking in the door or throwing himself against the door or what he was doing but then he quit and he ran outside and he was running around the building and I could hear her sobbing, crying and I don't know. I couldn't hear what she was saying but I knew she was crying. He came back in about three or four more times and he was real calm at first but then it was like all of a sudden he really just exploded like he's really out of control he could come in and talk to her and like he was real calm, like he had calmed down and kind of get her calmed down, then all of a sudden he would just fly off the handle and start busting in the door.

Rob: Do you know if this person ever struck Jennifer?

David: No. I do not.

Rob: You don't know or no he didn't?

David: I don't know if he did?

Rob: Did this person, how did this person leave?

David: He, he came back in like I say about three or four more times he wanted in real bad he finally ran back outside and he was running around the parking lot and he yelled ah he yelled something like slut and something like that and he paused briefly outside our window there and he saw me and of course I got a good look at him he didn't say anything he just ran away he came back in and he was able to get into her apartment and then I could hear him yell something like I see your cherry stain on the bed then he ran out yelling you slept with him but you wouldn't sleep with me and then he said the only reason you dated me was to go to bed with my friend and I believe he yelled something when he was leaving he was like I knew him first.

Rob: Ok. Did you see that person around the apartment other than that night? Had you seen him there before?

David: Yes. I have seen him one other time and at the time I believe he was driving a gray Ford Escort there was always a lot of junk in the Ford Escort and it had some kind of Star Trek bumper sticker on it or something like that.

Rob: Had you seen that person or vehicle at the apartment since that in July?

David: No sir I haven't.

Rob: Is there anything else that you wish to add?

David: No sir. Not at this time.

Rob: This is Detective Hospelhorn. We are going to conclude the interview on August 31st, 1993 and it is approximately 10:39 a.m.

This is Detective Hospelhorn and it's Wednesday, September 8th, at approximately 5:02 p.m. We're at Normal Police Department in the middle interview room. Present with myself is Detective Tony Daniels and a David Singley.

RH: Mr. Singley, could you state your full name and social security number?

DS: Yes, my name is David O'Neal Singley, my social security number is [REDACTED]

RH: Could you state your address?

DS: Yes. My address is [REDACTED] Normal, Illinois, 61761.

RH: Mr. Singley do you live alone in apartment [REDACTED] or do you have a roommate?

DS: No, sir, I live with my girlfriend. Her name is Susan Jenkins.

RH: I'd like you to ah take a look at the calendar that's in front of you and call your attention to the week of August 22, 1993 through August 28, 1993.

DS: Okay.

RH: Uh, ISU school started on the 23rd, which is a Monday. Uh, Do you, what is your class schedule for that day?

DS: My class schedule for the 23rd of August, uh, first class started at uh about 10:00 in the morning and it ran to 10:50. Had a break from 10:50 to right about uh noon. I had another class from noon to 12:50 and then I had a class from 1 in the afternoon to 1:50 and then after that I uh went home.

RH: Between your classes on the breaks, where do you normally go?

DS: Ah, just kind of depends on what I have going on. Ah, normally I'll walk over to the student center or sometime the library.

RH: Do you ever go back to your apartment during the breaks?

DS: Ah, I usually do on Tuesdays and Thursdays because I have a little bit longer break.

RH: When you go to class do you normally walk or do you drive a vehicle?

DS: I walk to class.

alongside the ah main entrance there to the apartment building.

RH: Okay. Did you observe anybody outside or inside the hallway to the apartment building?

DS: No, um, I didn't observe anybody. Uh, like every other day that week, when I came in, um, her uh her stereo was playing and it seemed a little louder than normal because, like I said, it's loud but when you go in and you go up the stairs going to our apartment, as soon as you close the door, um, that shuts out all the noise. But it seemed like when I, I know when I closed the door I could still hear the music and I thought, geez, that's you know, for a for early afternoon that's kinda loud and what not. Because I know I could still hear the music even through our door when it was closed.

RH: Okay. What did you do after you returned home?

DS: Ah, when I got home, just went about my business, um, put my books down, um, poured myself a glass of iced tea and ah started to get changed over to go to the pool.

RH: Did you go to the pool that afternoon?

DS: Yes I did. Um, went to the pool then, I got to the pool about 2:10 but um I do remember when I when I first came in to the apartment, um it seemed like the door to her apartment uh closed pretty abruptly and I thought that was strange, because um when I was walking home from my last class on the 25th of August, um I noticed that there was nobody, uh I came, well I came in off [REDACTED] and I was able to see that there was nobody going in the apartment ahead of me. And when I came in the apartment, or when I opened the door then, her door closed, so I thought, well you know that's strange, well maybe she forgot something. But then when I was getting changed over, ah which was probably about a time interval of about 5 to 10 minutes, um, I noticed that her her door opened and then it closed again, because I noticed the music got louder when I when I heard the door latch click. When the door was open and then when it closed clu closed shut again the music uh went down. It was still loud, but it uh had gotten louder when the door was open.

RH: Okay, did you hear the door actually open and shut?

DS: Yes, I did. And then I I uh heard somebody go down the stairs and uh seemed like they were in a hurry because it didn't take em very long between the time the door to her apartment closed to the time that the door to the vestibule, uh to the apartment complex opened and closed.

RH: Did you see anyone leave the apartment?
DS: No, I didn't.
RH: Did you see anyone outside in the parking lot?
DS: No, I didn't.
RH: Did you see any vehicles or hear any vehicles start and leave?
DS: I think I heard a vehicle start and leave, but I'm not, I'm almost positive I did but I I couldn't tell you which vehicle it was.
RH: Okay, so you say that you got home at 1:50 to 1:55.
DS: That's correct.
RH: P.M. on Wednesday the 25th.
DS: That's correct.
RH: You went inside the building and you thought you heard the door open and shut real fast, at Jennifer's apartment?
DS: Yes, I did. I know I heard it open and close ah because its such we're in such a small area there that you know who's door is whose and, ah...
RH: Sure. Okay. You went inside your apartment to change to go to the pool, which you say took approximately 5 to 10 minutes?
DS: That's correct.
RH: And during that time that you were changing someone left ah the apartment in the apartment building.
DS: Yes sir.
RH: So that someone that would have left would have been between 1:55 and 2:10.
DS: That's correct.
RH: Okay. Once you uh changed to go to the pool uh and left your apartment, what time was that?
DS: That was probably about, I don't know, probably about 2:05, 2:08, something like that.
RH: Okay, when you went down to the parking lot did you observe any vehicles in the parking lot at that time?

that day?

DS: Ah, yeah, actually, um, when I left to go to the pool, ah, nobody had their air conditioning on.

RH: This would have been at 2:05?

DS: That's correct, 2:05, 2:08, I left to go to the pool, um, and I drove our blue station wagon, or actually my girlfriend's blue station wagon to the pool cuz she was still at class. Um, I came back uh I would say on or about 4:30, quarter till 5 because my girlfriend had to work at about 5:00. Um...

RH: Did you observe any vehicles in the parking lot at 4:30 or 5:00?

DS: No, um, I didn't, to be honest with you I didn't really pay that much attention.

RH: Okay, when you left, do you know specifically of any apartments that the air conditioning was on.

DS: No, um, none of them had em on that day.

RH: Okay, when you returned you said it was what time?

DS: It was probably about uh 4:30 quarter till 5:00 on Wednesday uh the 25th of August.

RH: Did you observe any air conditioning on at that time?

DS: Uh, at that time, no. Because I was I drove in and parked. Um, I didn't stay home probably about uh til about 5:15 then I decided to go back to the pool. Um, I didn't have a ride so I uh I walked and and that's the time when I came out of the apartment and went walking towards the pool and then I noticed that the window air conditioner to apartment [redacted] was on.

RH: Could the air conditioner have been on when you returned at 4:30 or quarter till 5?

DS: Ah, it certainly could've. I know that when I came back in, ah, the stereo was turned off and it was replaced by ah the TV. It was the TV, the TV was turned on.

RH: Okay, when you left, or when I'm sorry, when you returned from the pool at 4:30 or quarter till 5, was the stereo on or the TV on?

DS: The stereo was off and the TV was on.

RH: Okay, backing up at 2:05 or 2:08 when you left to go to the tag that Redbird Apartment Management had hung on the door was still on the door.

RH: What time did you go downstairs?

DS: Oh, it was probably about 10:00, 10:15.

RH: This would have been Saturday, August 28?

DS: That's correct.

RH: Do you recall if there was a stereo or TV on at that time?

DS: Yes, the tv was still on.

RH: Do you recall any vehicles in the parking lot at that time?

DS: Ah, Jennifer's car, the two gals that lived down underneath [REDACTED] their car was there and that's about all that I ah that I remember ah besides our blue station, or excuse me, my girlfriend's blue station wagon, ah, but I'm not certain that Ryan's car was there and I'm not certain that his girlfriend's truck was there either.

RH: After you went downstairs, what did you do?

DS: Ah, opened the front door to the vestibule there and just, just trying to see what kinda day it was gonna be, if it was gonna be real hot or whatnot and just turned around and went back up the stairs.

RH: Okay. Were you there ah at the time that the police officers were uh notified that, of Jennifer's death.

DS: Ah, no I wasn't. Uhh. myself, my girlfriend, her two sisters and her parents, uh we were all out to eat that afternoon.

RH: Okay. What time did you return?

DS: Oh boy, we returned, probably, 2:30, ah, is my best guess.

RH: When was the last time that you seen Jennifer?

DS: Last time that I saw Jennifer was probably, Monday the 23rd or possibly Tuesday the 24th.

RH: And what time would that have been?

DS: It would have been in the afternoon.

RH: Ah, do you know what time in the afternoon?

APPENDIX 003303

DS: Yes sir that's correct.

TD: You were in your apartment and you saw her leave?

DS: No, ah, she was walking towards the apartment complex.

TD: Oh, coming back to the apartment complex.

DS: Yes sir.

TD: Okay, so Monday and Tuesday you have classes up till 1:50 is that right?

DS: That's correct.

TD: Okay. I want to clear up the position, directions where these cars are usually parked. If you're standing in your driveway facing your building, you are facing north, is that correct?

DS: That's correct.

TD: So then the driveway is on the south side of the building?

DS: That's correct.

TD: And you have ah doors leading to the vestibule to that apartment building?

DS: We have one door.

TD: And what side of the building is that door on?

DS: That is on the south side.

TD: Are there any doors exiting the common hallway on the north side?

DS: Yes, ah there is a door on the lower level and there is also a door on the ah second level.

TD: Okay, calling your attention back to Wednesday when you had, when you came home from class and you heard the music up loud and then, ah, you heard the door to her apartment slam shut, you stated you went into your apartment and then you heard footsteps leave leaving her apartment. Is that correct?

DS: That's correct.

TD: Could you tell from the footsteps what door those footsteps exited from?

DS: Yes, ah they went out the south door.

EXAMINATION AND RESULTS (Continued)

Examination of Exhibit #23 revealed latent impressions suitable for comparison. Comparison revealed that two (2) of the suitable latent impressions were made by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the card marked Alan Wayne Beaman. Comparison revealed that four (4) of the suitable latent impressions were made by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the card marked Michael J. Swaine. Comparison of the one (1) remaining suitable latent impression to the submitted inked fingerprints and palmprints of the above listed subjects did not reveal an identification; however, legible inked fingerprints, including the extreme tip, side and lower joint areas, and inked palmprints, showing clear and complete ridge detail, are needed for a conclusive comparison.

Examination of Exhibit #46 revealed latent impressions suitable for comparison. Comparison revealed that five (5) of the suitable latent impressions were made by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the cards marked Jennifer Lynne Lockmiller. Comparison of the two (2) remaining suitable latent impressions to the submitted inked fingerprint and palmprint cards marked Michael J. Swaine did not reveal any identifications. Comparison of the two (2) remaining suitable latent impressions to the submitted inked fingerprint and palmprint cards marked Jennifer Lynne Lockmiller and Alan Wayne Beaman did not reveal any identifications; however, legible inked fingerprints, including the extreme tip and side areas, and inked palmprints, showing clear and complete ridge detail, are needed for a conclusive comparison.

Examination of Exhibit #50 revealed one (1) latent impression suitable for comparison. Comparison revealed that the suitable latent impression was made by the person whose inked fingerprints appear on the card marked Michael J. Swaine.

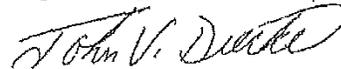

Examination of Exhibits #25A, #40, #43 and #45 revealed no latent impressions suitable for comparison.

EVIDENCE DISPOSITION

The above evidence will be retained in our evidence vault and should be picked up within 30 days.

Photographic copies of the suitable latent impressions will be retained on file at the Morton Forensic Science Laboratory in the event additional inked fingerprints and palmprints, including those for elimination purposes, become available.

Respectfully submitted,

1           Before they had broken up, I don't
2 remember. I mean, she might not have wanted him to 3 know either because they were going out. Does that 4 make sense?

5 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

6           Q. Yeah. And during the time that you were 7 going out -- strike that.

8           During the time that Alan and Jennifer 9 were going out, safe to say you didn't want him to 10 know then either, right?

11          A. Correct.

12          Q. Okay. Okay. We had earlier discussed a 13 little bit the incident when you were with Jennifer 14 in her apartment and Alan barged in.

15                 What do you recall about that occasion?

16          A. I remember that -- do you want me to tell
17 you starting with when he approached the door?

18          Q. No. I'd like you to start at the point
19 when you made plans to go to Jennifer's apartment
20 on that evening.

21          A. Okay. That night I wanted to see Jennifer
22 so I faked a phone call. I pretended I was talking
23 on the phone with friends and told Alan I was going
24 to go see some friends that had come into town.

70

1 Q. Let me stop you just for a moment and then
2 we -- when you say that you faked a phone call, can
3 you explain to me what you did, how you faked it?

4 A. Sure. I don't remember exactly where we 5 were and what we did. But I assume that he was 6 outside and he came in and I pretended to be on the 7 phone saying, okay, yeah, I'll try and borrow his 8 car right now and come over and hung up on a
9 nonexistent phone person.

10 Q. You were speaking to a dial tone?

11 A. Right, right. And I said, oh, some of my 12 friends are in town; can I borrow your car to go
13 see them, thinking that he would let me borrow his 14 car and keep on hanging out with the friends and I
15 would go see Jennifer.

16 Q. At the point that you made the phone call
17 as a pretext to going to see Jennifer, did you know
18 that she wanted you to come over?

19 A. I think I did but I'm not sure. She had 20 been over earlier that night, I believe. Even 21 though they were broken up, she would still hang 22 out with us. I believe at that point more to see
23 me than to see her ex-boyfriend.

24 And I believe she went home, and we had 71

1 the understanding that I would try and go over.

2 Q. Okay. So you do the fake phone call and
3 then you ask Alan to borrow his car under the 4 pretext of going to see the friends that you
5 purported to have spoken to on the phone, right?

6 A. Correct.

7 Q. What time was it that you faked the phone
8 call?

9 A. I think it was late. I don't remember.
10 But in my testimony, it said it was like 2:00
11 o'clock in the morning.

12 So obviously they had appeared in town at 13 2:00 a.m., so I assume that Alan would have been a
14 little suspicious.

15 Q. It would have been rational of him to be 16 suspicious?

17 MS. BARTON: Objection to form.

18 MR. DiCIANNI: I'll join.

19 THE WITNESS: I mean, because of all -- I don't 20 know how he would have felt but obviously he was 21 because -- he was suspicious because he came and 22 found us. It wasn't -- it wasn't an implausible
23 situation but it wasn't totally plausible either.

24

72

1           A.    I hoped that we would kiss and I don't
2 know -- I mean, I hoped that I would continue the 3 relationship with her. I was -- I wanted to kiss
4 her and see where things went from there.

5           Q.    So would it be fair to say that when you
6 went to her apartment on that night, you considered
7 it at least a possibility you would have sex with 8 her?

9           A.    Sure.

10          Q.    Okay. And once you arrived at Jennifer's
11 apartment, what happened between the two of you?

12          A.    We talked for I don't know how long and 13 then apparently -- and I don't remember this. But 14 apparently we engaged -- we had oral sex. She 15 performed oral sex on me.

16                   And after that, I'm not sure if we just 17 stopped independently or if we were stopped because 18 Alan arrived at the door.

19          Q.    Did you recall telling the police that at 20 the time Alan arrived, you and Jen were going into 21 the bedroom and you had just kissed her?

22          A.    I don't remember telling them about that,
23 but if it's in the record, I assume that's what 24 happened. I had a better recollection at that

77

1 point.

2 Q. So putting together your recollection just 3 now with what you told the police, is it fair to 4 say that you had had oral sex with her and you were 5 kissing and going into the bedroom; does that sound
6 right?

7 A. Sounds like it would have been the logical
8 progression of things. Like I said, I don't
9 remember if it actually happened that way but it
10 seems like it would happen that way.

11 Q. Okay. Anything else you can recall that 12 we haven't discussed about that incident at 13 Jennifer's apartment prior to Alan's arrival?

14 A. No.

15 Q. What happens when Alan shows up?

16 A. Alan showed up and started banging on the 17 door. I immediately panicked because I didn't want
18 him to know that I was there. I didn't know what 19 he was going to do. I just didn't want to be in 20 that situation.

21 So I went and hid in the closet and
22 Jennifer went to the door and told him to go away.
23 And I didn't hear -- I heard what happened. I
24 didn't see what happened.

78

1           But I heard him break the door in somehow
2 and pretty much stormed through the apartment
3 saying where is he.

4           He did open the closet and didn't see me
5 and stormed out of the apartment again, thinking, I
6 believe, he said that did he go out the window. So
7 he thought I had snuck out the window.

8           Q.   Okay. Let's try to break that down a
9 little bit step by step.

10           At the point when you first heard Alan
11 outside the door, were you fully clothed?

12           A.   I believe -- I don't know. I don't know.
13 Yeah, I don't know.

14           Q.   Was Jennifer, if you recall?

15           A.   As far as I know, she was, but I'm not 16 sure.

17           Q.   Do you recall any kind of a rush between 18 the two of you to put on your clothes when, you
19 know, you first heard Alan outside the door?

20           A.   I don't remember, but I remember that 21 there was an immediate panic and I would have -- if 22 I was in any form of undress, I would have rapidly
23 clothed myself and tried to either escape or hide.

24           Q.   At the point that you ran into the closet,

79

1 Q. You don't have any specific recollection
2 of being scared for your physical safety; is that a
3 fair statement?

4 MS. BARTON: Objection.

5 THE WITNESS: Yes.

6 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

7 Q. Do you have a specific recollection of 8 being scared of shame or social disapprobation if 9 you were discovered?

10 A. No specific recollection of that. Just a 11 fear of everything, any possibility of what could 12 happen.

13 Q. So fair to say that you experienced this 14 as a traumatizing situation but don't recall it
15 being a situation in which you were scared for your 16 physical well-being?

17 A. Correct.

18 Q. You said that it was hard to maintain a
19 sense of time which I can understand.

20 Did you have any recollection of how long
21 it was before Alan calmed down?

22 A. I don't. But by that time we drove home,
23 he was calm.

24 Q. Well, prior to your driving home, Kris

85

1 with Alan.

2 Q. When you left the apartment with Kris
3 Perry, you were walking?

4 A. Yes.

5 Q. Kris Perry was walking the same direction
6 as you for a time?

7 A. I believe so. I don't have a recollection
8 of it. We would walk out so it was the same door
9 that we walked out, yes.

10 Q. At the time that Alan drove up, were you
11 with Kris Perry still?

12 A. I believe I was. I don't remember if he 13 drove up or if he walked up. I don't remember if I 14 started walking home and he picked me up on the 15 way.

16 For some reason in my recollection, I
17 remember him picking me up on a street on the way
18 home which would mean I probably said I want to 19 walk home and cool off or just sort of breathe.
20 And then Alan pulled up and said get in; I'll give 21 you a ride home. And he was calm so I did. But 22 I'm not positive of that.

23 Q. Did you view that as a magnanimous thing
24 on Alan's part, to offer you a ride after a

89

1 situation with a fair amount of friction between
2 the two of you?

3 A. You mean a charitable thing?

4 Q. Yeah.

5 A. I thought it was nice, yeah. I thought it
6 was good that he did that. Yeah, I -- I probably 7 was surprised that he wasn't mad at me and was mad
8 at Jennifer or was upset with Jennifer instead of 9 me. I mean, he was upset with me, I'm sure, but he 10 didn't blame me for the situation.

11 Q. Was it your perception that he was able to 12 manage his anger with you and Jennifer during the 13 time that he was giving you a ride home?

14 MS. BARTON: Objection to form.

15 THE WITNESS: As we were going home, he was 16 emotional, but he was managing his anger, yes.

17 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

18 Q. Is there anything else that you can recall 19 about the entire series of events surrounding the 20 evening when Alan barged in on you and Jennifer
21 that we haven't discussed yet?

22 A. Not that I can recall.

23 Q. Let me direct you to a portion of your 24 trial testimony just to refresh your recollection

90

1 to be an additional page. Let's not -- that
2 shouldn't be in the exhibit. Take that off.

3 Let's take this piece by piece. The first
4 page which is marked AB 703, Exhibit 6, indicates
5 that it's September 1st, 1993?

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. And the third page, AB 705, indicates a
8 September 2nd date?

9 A. Oh, okay, right.

10 Q. And the fifth page, AB 707, toward the 11 bottom of the page indicates a September 7th date,
12 right?

13 A. I see that.

14 Q. So fair to say that Exhibit 6 is a
15 transcript of the phone overhears on the 1st, 2nd
16 and 7th of September, 19 --

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. Let me direct your attention to Page 4 of 19 the exhibit which is a portion of the transcript
20 relating to the September 2nd, 1993 overhear.

21 Do you see the part where you're speaking
22 and it begins this is Mike Swaine?

23 A. Uh-huh, yes.

24 Q. This is Mike Swaine. I'm sorry. I'm just 180

1 a wreck and I just -- I just really need to talk to
2 somebody and I don't know who else to talk to 3 because I can't say anything. Do you know if he's 4 okay?

5 Did I read that right?

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. So part of what you're doing here is 8 you're inquiring whether Alan is okay, right?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. And part of what you're doing is putting 11 yourself forward as an emotional wreck who needs
12 someone to talk to, right?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. And so was part of the strategy or the 15 goal in contacting Alan to sort of put yourself
16 forth as an emotional wreck in order to get him
17 talking?

18 A. Yeah, it seems like it.

19 Q. Because, you know, being -- being a
20 college kid at the time, you wouldn't just decide
21 to present yourself as an emotional wreck in this 22 conversation unless you had been given some sort of 23 instruction, right?

24 MS. BARTON: Objection to foundation, calls for 181

1 thought it would be helpful to speak with Alan and
2 they thought by overhearing our conversation, that 3 they would accomplish that.

4 So we did it twice and in person and
5 that's when it actually happened.

6 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

7 Q. You hadn't been successful in getting
8 through to Alan on the phone?

9 A. No.

10 Q. In part, because others would pick up the 11 phone, wouldn't let you talk to him, right?

12 A. Correct. They wouldn't -- out of -- they 13 probably had their lawyer tell him not to talk to 14 anybody.

15 Q. So was part of the reason for approaching
16 him in person to cut through those who on the phone
17 were preventing you from talking to him?

18 MS. BARTON: Objection to form and foundation.

19 MR. DiCIANNI: Join.

20 THE WITNESS: I would say it was just -- the 21 purpose of doing that was to talk with him and it
22 wasn't because they failed. They did fail.

23 But the purpose of me doing the in-person
24 overhears was to just talk with him and see if he

185

1 said anything incriminating. I don't remember it
2 being -- that the phone over -- the failure of the 3 phone overhears was the reason for that. It could 4 have been. I don't remember that at all.

5 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

6 Q. You don't recall any particular reason why
7 attempts at phone overhears were discontinued and 8 attempts at in-person overhears commenced?

9 MS. BARTON: Objection to form.

10 THE WITNESS: I remember the reason for that.
11 He was in Rockford for the phone interviews and he 12 was in Bloomington when we did the in-person
13 interviews. So he was there. I didn't need to 14 call him. I could walk up to his room or walk over 15 to where he was. It was proximity in my opinion.

16 BY MR. SHAPIRO:

17 Q. Okay. All right. Well, let's talk about 18 the in-person overhears.

19 You recall there were two of them?

20 A. I do.

21 Q. Do you recall any discussions you had with 22 any police or prosecutor prior or subsequent to 23 either of those in-person overhears?

24 A. I don't remember planning sessions but I

OLDER MALE: WHO? UH ..ALAN?

MIKE: ALAN.

OLDER MALE: YEA, HE'S OKAY.

MIKE: OKAY. OH, IS IT OKAY...

OLDER MALE: YOU SAY, MIKE SWAINE?

MIKE: YEA.

OLDER MALE: OKAY.

MIKE: I LIVED WITH HIM THIS SUMMER.

OLDER MALE: WHAT DID YOU SAY?

MIKE: I LIVED WITH HIM THIS SUMMER.

OLDER MALE: OKAY, I'LL TELL HIM UH, THAT UH, THAT YOU CALLED.

MIKE: OKAY, IT'S JUST....

OLDER MALE: AND UH, UH, WE'RE KEEPING A RECORD OF CALLS, BUT..

MIKE: OKAY, THAT'S FINE.

OLDER MALE: HE, HE WORKS AT NIGHT.

MIKE: OH.

OLDER MALE: HE WORKS ALL NIGHT SO HE'S ASLEEP.

Today is September the 8th, 1993, we are in McLean County Illinois. This will be a state authorized, consensual, in person over hear, reference a NPD homicide investigation

Tech: Would you state your name please?

Mike: Michael J. Swaine

Tech: Mike, are you aware that your conversation will be recorded and monitored?

Mike: Yes I am.

Tech: And do you indeed give your consent to these recordings?

Mike: Yes

Tech: Ok, the time now is approximately 9:51 p.m. This state authorized over hear will now commence.

Mike: Is it clear?

Tech: Mike, when you get out there, hold on just for a second and I will have Tim yell at you

Mike: Ok

Mike: I'm going inside.

Alan: Hey man

Mike: What's up? What drop is that?

Alan: Oh Jesus, I don't fuckin know.

Mike: We have that one don't we?

Alan: You've got that one, it's these ...

Mike: Small ones

Alan: Side pieces and the middle piece, this is just fucked up.

Mike: I'm sorry dude.

Alan: Do you want to do this?

Mike: It's like 10:00, we're getting ready to leave over across the street and I just was going crazy, I'm sorry.

Alan: No that is alright, I can use a break anyway. Maybe we can go outside.

Mike: Take a smoke or something? I could use one too. Hey that's mine. Thanks dude.

Mike: Are you ok man?

Alan: I'm hanging in there.

Mike: I wish just someone would tell me what is going on, cause, I don't know, I'm just going crazy. I talked to the counselor, a counselor tonight at 5:00, gotta light?

~~e36~~ (281)

C11060

Alan: yep

Mike: Thanks.

Alan: Dude, I don't know shit, that's the problem.

Mike: I talked to Ron yesterday, after pro, he was a cool guy.

Alan: yeh, he is.

Mike: I'm talking to some lady, um, Mary Horgan, she's cool but I don't know, I just, I pretty much sit there and go "I don't know what is going on, I wish you'd, someone would tell me something, why can't anybody". I don't know.

Alan: Nobody can man.

Mike: I am just going crazy and I try to keep myself busy and ...

Alan: Yeh, that's what I am tryin to do, I been kind of board,

Mike: Yeh? What did you do all day?

Alan: Fucked around, sat around, waited to go to this class, that class, you know, it was like I had a class and then I had like an hour and then I had another class and then an hour and then another class. Fucked up.

Mike: Do you know your stuff is in the uh .....

Alan: Yeh, I know, I'll get it one of these days.

Mike: You left a lot of stuff. I just threw it all in a bag in your trunk thing.

Alan: That's cool.

Mike: Yeh. So you don't know anything that is happening?

Alan: They haven't talked to me in a while.

Mike: I got back into town, they haven't talked to me in along time either. I got back into town and they questioned me like two nights in a row and then my mom was like, "get a lawyer" and I was like "shit, why, I didn't do anything."

Alan: Yeh, get one, you need one, did you get one?

Mike: Yeh, I have one but I mean, I don't know

Alan: Dude, the reason you have a lawyer during this is so they can't pull shit on you and make you say shit that is not true.

Mike: But, I mean, there is nothing that I, I mean I told them about the drugs and everything.

Alan: I know, but they will ask you shit about, you know, an interrogation, it's like, they will say something, they will reword it, they will reword it again, then they will reword it again, and they will twist everything you say into something else. You know, they are not there to get the truth, when they are questioning you they are there to bust you.

Mike: But I want them....

C-367

(282)

C11061

AB000383

Alan: Move on to the next guy.

Mike: But if they know the truth, but if they know the truth, I mean, if I told them everything...

Alan: They don't know shit, that is why they're bugging us.

Mike: Why didn't you go to the funeral dude?

Alan: I'm the last person her parents would want to see.

Mike: Really? They are really nice, I talked to them.

Alan: They are nice people, but then, if I was there, her brothers would have been on me like that. (Alan snaps his fingers)

Mike: I think I met Bubba.

Alan: Bubba's a cock.

Mike: I don't know.

Alan: Bubba used to handcuff her, tie her to curtains or to the shower rod....

Mike: What?

Alan: Put a gag in her mouth, take pictures of her and shit, (inaudible)...

Mike: Why did she tell you that?

Alan: Huh?

Mike: Why did she tell you that? I really miss her a lot, you know how much I, do you know how much I liked her?

Alan: Yeh, my whole problem with the whole thing is that I can't even, you know, give a shit. Sometimes even crying.

Mike: Why not, I've done it like everyday.

Alan: Oh, I did, I did, believe me, but, at this stage it's just like, I don't know, pick up the pieces and move on, she's in a better place.

Mike: Yeh, but there is no rea..., she shouldn't be there.

Alan: Why?

Mike: Because she was, so you think she should have been murdered?

Alan: No I don't think she should have been murdered but there is nothing you can do about that man, Mike, remember .....

Mike: I should have just stayed in town.

Alan: Remember, no, no, cause then you would have been in town when it happened and then you would have been...

Mike: I could have protected her..

Alan: No, no, Mike, number one, it's not your fault. It could have happened the next night if you had been there, or the night before, or this week, or next week.

C11062

C 383

363
(283)

Mike: No, but, what if it happened that week that I was gone, it was just someone who came and did it and fucking left, and if I was there they would never have been there.

Alan: Maybe, but what are you, what can you do about it Mike?

Mike: I can just torture myself, I don't know.

Alan: What's the fucking point in that?

Mike: Nothing.

Alan: Alright, you've been torturing yourself every since all that shit went down in July, you know or actually it was like, June I guess, I mean what the fuck? It's not worth it anymore, you can't do anything about it.

Mike: It was June 11th

Alan: Yeh. You can't dig her up and put her back, bring her back to life. You can't, you know, you can't do any of that. All you gotta do is pick up the pieces and what's, you know, I mean, why the fuck do you think I'm even talking to you Mike?

Mike: Dude, I know, I lied to you about that night too, I did sleep with her.

Alan: Yeh, I knew that.

Mike: How did you know that?

Alan: Dude, that pussy never tasted the same again?

Mike: What?

Alan: Her pussy never tasted the same again.

Mike: I never tasted it.

Alan: It was good.

Mike: I really miss her alot.

Alan: They walked in on you while you two were going at it didn't they?

Mike: No.

Alan: Oh.

Mike: No, we did it in the Sigma Chi House.

Alan: Ah, See, it's things like that that make me not grieve about her.

Mike: Why?

Alan: Why? Because she fucked me over.

Mike: Dude, she told me about the miscarriage and everything, you fucked her over.

Alan: Like I even knew, like I even had a clue.

Mike: She told me she told you and you just blew it off. She went, I'm glad she went, she went back to Meredith and made up with her, which is cool.

Alan: Dude, I didn't know what to think after all that, all I know is I got dragged through the mud for ten months and then she died.

Mike: Then why didn't you break up with her?

Alan: I don't know.

Mike: She told me all through July that she didn't want, she told me all through that time, I was going over there to talk to her I wasn't doing anything with her, I was talking to her because she kept saying to me that she couldn't deal with it and she didn't want to keep going out with you. I'm gonna burn this cigarette out, I'm not even paying attention. I am sorry dude, I feel bad about lying to you too, I'm just sick of lies.

Alan: I was too.

Mike: What?

Alan: That's why I walked away from it all and said "fuck it". And, I was still thinking "fuck it" when I heard.

Mike: Dude, Morgan told me...

Alan: And all I could think was "fuck it".

Mike: Morgan told me you talked to her on Monday though.

Alan: She called me.

Mike: What did she say?

Alan: She was trying to crawl back to me and I said, "I don't love you"...

Mike: Dude....

Alan: And I hung up.

Mike: Dude, she was happy with me.

Alan: All I know is she was on the phone talking to me saying, "don't you think we could get back together some day" and I said, "no, I don't love you" and I hung up, is the last thing I ever said to her.

Mike: Then how come I can't get over her now?

Alan: Cause you were with her, you loved her and she loved you at the time that it happened.

Mike: I didn't love her.

Alan: Well, whatever.

Mike: I told her that I didn't want a relationship with her.

Alan: I'm serious man, you gotta do this one solo, I did, You got to. You know, you gotta just fuckin buckle down, find something to do to grasp your sanity for just a few days until you can say "fuck it". You know I loved you or I cared about you or I liked you, you know, and ...

Mike: And your dead.

Alan: And your dead, so I gotta go on.

2365

Mike: But it is different than "fuck it", "you fucked me over", "I gotta go on".

Alan: It is different, but it's, it's just, you know, it's not there. You can't think about it, you can't touch it, you can't grasp it. And if there is a better place, God knows she is there, cause she fucking went through hell in her life. She was never going to be happy man.

Mike: But she was.

Alan: No she wasn't!

Mike: She was so happy with me, she told her parents this, she told Morgan that she told Heidi this, and she told me this.

Alan: She told everybody that the first month I was going out with her too.

Mike: But then why would she do, why would she call you? You want me to wait over here dude?

He is coming back we will talk more.

Alan: It's just too much for me to be able to deal with so I just said "fuck it, I can't deal with it so I am not going to". I just walked away from it. Dude, she is better off than you are.

Mike: But I didn't get murdered, that's the big thing, I mean if she would have died...

Alan: Ok, you didn't get murdered. Are you that afraid of death?

Mike: No, I am not at all afraid of death right now.

Alan: Then can you imagine that it would be that horrible for her to be dead? Is there a God Mike?

Mike: I think so.

Alan: Alright then.

Mike: But why would he let something like this happen? Why would he let someone do this?

Alan: You can't, you can't stop em and you can't let em, there is no, you know..

Mike: Let who?

Alan: It just happens. Shit happens and shit happens to you, it happens to me, it happened to Jen all her fucking life. No matter what you did, her parents were gonna still beat her up.

Mike: What do you mean?

Alan: No matter what, forget about it.

Mike: What do you mean? Dude, I've had to deal with knowing so little ....

Alan: Her parents used to beat her up all the fucking time when she was a little kid, all through high school. For awhile they didn't while she was in the hospital, they felt bad, but they were slapping her around while she was dating me, "cause she was a tramp" they said, and they were hitting her.

Mike: But Phil told me about the wild sex that he, you'd described to him that you had, I never had it with her. We'd watch movies and play pool and, she'd come in the, she would sneak into our apartment when she would go to the bathroom and kiss me good night.

Alan: Yeh.

Mike: And I felt shitty the whole time during that to you but, I can't even be around you anymore without thinking of her and feeling shitty.

Alan: Same here.

Mike: You can't be around yourself anymore?

Alan: I can't be around you.

Mike: I know.

Alan: And the only reason I don't feel shitty at all is cause she was just, you know, she was fucking you.

Mike: But she wasn't.

Alan: Ok, but sneaking into the apartment to kiss you good night. I saw you two passing notes and shit, I knew.

Mike: Dude, we weren't passing notes, she gave me like three notes.

Alan: Well, she would squeeze your hand, I always thought you were passing notes, but, I don't know.

Mike: We were passing hugs and warm feelings and assurances.

Alan: Well that's good, I am glad you could do that, I wish you could have done it without me there.

Mike: I am sorry, no I am not really, because I cared about her and I wouldn't take that back. I really wouldn't take anything back this summer except the fact that she is dead. And if me not being involved with her at all this summer could have helped her at all I wouldn't have done it. I wouldn't have talked to her at all.

Alan: Dude, that wouldn't have helped. At least she was happy for the last month of her life. If you say she was, then she was, you know. For one brief shiny moment she was actually happy, she was never happy with me.

Mike: But you said for the first month she was happy?

Alan: For the first month, for the first month, while it was just sex and fun.

Mike: Then why didn't you break up? Why didn't she break up with you or why did you break up with her?

Alan: Because, it was a contest dude, it was ammo, it was like "who's gonna do, who's gonna, who's gonna screw who over first, I am not going to be the one, she is going to be the one", but she was saying the same thing about me.

Mike: But you...

Alan: And when she did, she had to lie about it so we stayed together.

Mike: That's wrong; you did it with Meredith, dude.

APPENDIX 003334

Alan: I didn't fuck Meredith.

Mike: She was pregnant with your baby, she had a miscarriage.

Alan: Dude, I didn't know she was pregnant, I didn't know about the miscarriage.

Mike: I don't know, I don't even remember if she told me about that.

Alan: She was acting like a total royal bitch and I didn't know why, ok? Alright, if I had known she was pregnant, that would have been cool, but she didn't tell me. If I had known about the miscarriage, that would have been cool, but she didn't tell me. So I didn't know, so I tried to run away from somebody that I thought was just being a bitch, ok? I'm sorry if that makes me the bad guy, you know, I know, I know she and I put each other through alot of hell, alright, but that has nothing to do with it anymore, you know, it was over before her life was.

Mike: Dude this isn't going to be over for me until I read in the paper who did it.

Alan: Somebody's been captured. That will be a nice relief for me too, it really will, but I don't think they are going to find anybody.

Mike: Why?

Alan: Because it has been two weeks and they still haven't. What if it was some fucking nut that just happened by?

Mike: She wouldn't let some fucking nut in though, she kept, I told them when they questioned me that they, she kept her doors locked the whole time, when I would leave for work, I'd lock the doors.

Alan: So what if it was the one day that she didn't lock the door?

Mike: I don't know.

Alan: What if it was, It could have been, you know, somebody she knew, it could have been a drug connection.

Mike: Dude she didn't ...

Alan: Who knows?

Mike: But she didn't buy any drugs anymore. She didn't, she drank with me, I was trying to help her with that.

Alan: So was I, didn't do any good.

Mike: Dude, you were drinking with her though. I didn't, I haven't drank since I came to pick you up in Rockford.

Alan: You weren't around from the first.

Mike: But why did you give up?

Alan: Why did I give up? Cause she took everything out of me and squished it.

Mike: Then..

Alan: You don't understand it, I'm a hollow fucking shell, alright. I have been for ten months, stay out of it, I got nothing!

~~C 368~~

(287)

C11067

Mike: What do I have?

Alan: I got no heart, I got no soul, I got no mind.

Mike: When you started to see it all go why didn't you just say "fuck it" and leave her?

Alan: Because the one fucking thing I do have left, is pride!

Mike: And so you didn't want to say good bye? I am sorry.

Alan: I wasn't going to be the one to do it, she was.

Mike: Dude...

Alan: And she was, so I walked away.

Mike: Dude, you didn't walk away easy.

Alan: Dude, I wasn't going to stand by and watch the shit go on while I was still living with you.

Mike: You did it for two months. Listen I gotta sit down I am sorry. She, I don't even remember what I was going to say, remember that fight you had with her?

Alan: Which one?

Mike: The one at Don's, the one that I saw?

Alan: Oh, hey man, she started it.

Mike: I saw the first part of it, dude she didn't start shit!

Alan: Dude, she was laying there on the ground, and I walked up to see what was wrong. I was asking her "what's wrong, what's wrong?" she, and the first thing she said to me was, "how much farther do I have to spread my legs to make you happy, baby". Dude, that woman dug into me with every fucking ounce of sharp, silver she had, every single time she could, and I still love her. And the only solace I can possibly find is that she is in a better place and I gotta pick up the pieces and go on.

Mike: Why is that solace if she's .....

Alan: If you can't do, If you care about her at all, do what she would want you to do which is fucking move on and get a grasp on your reality and make something of yourself, and be proud to have known her for a little while.
...

Mike: Dude, that's really easy to say and hard to do, I have cried...

Alan: You don't know the half of it. It's really easy to say "I want to forgive you" and it's really easy to say that "I want to be your friend again"...

Mike: You want to forgive me?

Alan: And I am trying damn hard.

Mike: Why would you...

Alan: If you don't think I am doing a good enough job you don't have to be around me, you know, I understand that.

Mike: Dude, I am not going to, I'm probably not going to be, I don't know, I will try and. Dude, throughout the whole thing you said it wasn't my fault and it was hers, and now I feel shitty.

Alan: At this point, it's 50/50 man.

Mike: You know that I never trusted her, do you know that?

Alan: I never did.

Mike: I feel so guilty for not, I don't know, I figured if she did it to you, she would do it to me too.

Alan: She would have, she did it to Bubba, she did it to John Bon, she did it to every single guy she's ever gone out with..

Mike: She didn't do it to John Bon, did she?

Alan: Fuck yeh.

Mike: With who? Then she just lied to me.

Alan: Yeh, she lied to you. She lied to me, she lied to you, she lied to Bubba, she lied to her parents, she lied to everybody she knew because she, she wasn't even lying, she didn't know. She probably couldn't even remember half the time she slept with guys. She would get wasted at a party and go home with somebody.

Mike: You think that is what this was?

Alan: Yeh, I think that's what it was. She got wasted, I wasn't there, she was horny, you were there.

Mike: I wasn't there though, I was in Elmhurst the whole week.

Alan: I am talking about you and her getting started.

Mike: Dude, it didn't start then, it started the week before.

Alan: I don't fucking know.

Mike: What?

Alan: I don't when it started. It seems to me it started at the beginning of the summer. Neither of you may have known it, but, I saw it.

Mike: May have known what, that we were starting?

Alan: Uh-huh.

Mike: Do you got another cig, could I have another cigarette dude? I will buy you a pack sometime, I am sorry.

Alan: Mike, chill out ok?

Mike: That is what she always said, you gotta stop saying you are sorry.

Alan: Well do it.

Mike: Do what, stop?

Alan: Mike she's gone, you are still here. Pray real hard, go to bed, and move on with your life. Man, I know it is hard to do and easy to say....

Mike: I can't do it right now.

Alan: Ok, maybe you can't do it right now, but if it is what you aspire to.

Mike: If I aspire to it? I don't aspire to anything now, I could care less if I lived or died. I just want this to be resolved. I'll be, I won't be happy then, I will be satisfied, I don't even know, I don't know if I will be satisfied.

Alan: Nobody is ever satisfied, what's up Bo?

Mike: Who is that?

Alan: Friends of mine.

Josh: Hey guys.

Mike: Hey Josh, what's up?

(Alan and Josh are having a conversation about going out that night)

Mike: I am sorry man, I am throwing alot of this shit off on you. I just, I don't know, I just, when I talked to your parents twice last week when I called and I was like, I don't know, I was just, I needed to talk to somebody cause nobody was talking to me here and I had counselors appointments but they in the future. And I don't know why your parents wouldn't let me talk to you?

Alan: I couldn't talk to anyone.

Mike: But why, I mean, I took the pol, I didn't think that either and I talked to my lawyer and he said "take the polygraph test" and I did and I am clear. And like you said you had an alibi, I had an alibi all week, I was with people all week and. But why couldn't you talk to anybody? I mean I wanted to talk to you, me?

Alan: If I'd been talking to you, I would have just chewed you out and hung up on you.

Mike: Why?

Alan: Why?

Mike: You were broken up with her.

Alan: It doesn't matter.

Mike: Why, dude, you know you suggested that I stay with her.

Alan: I know, that didn't mean I had to be around it.

Mike: You weren't.

Alan: I know.

Mike: But I mean, But that doesn't tell me why you couldn't fucking talk to me and I was going crazy, I, I don't even know what I was thinking. I was here with my mom and I was chewing at my mom, and telling her about sex and drugs that I haven't had before May.

~~e 37/~~

Alan: At that point there was nobody there. There was nobody inside my head.

Mike: Why?

Alan: Why?

Mike: I didn't sleep for a week, what, no, I just started eating on Monday, and when I saw you I almost stopped eating, cause you were just, I don't know, I thought you would be effected a little bit more than that if you were, if you were in love with her.

Alan: I'm just doing what she would want, you know, doing what she would want.

Mike: Dude, she wanted you to find someone else.

Alan: That wasn't very clear. Every time I even looked at another chick she freaked.

Mike: Not after she broke up.

Alan: Yeh, and after ten months of raking me over the coals about other chicks like I am even going to look at another chick right after she breaks up with me. Jesus Christ man, you know she actually had me trained good?

Mike: Why did you let her train you?

Alan: Powerful woman man, she would have trained you too. Ten times worse.

Mike: I told her that I wanted to stop seeing her when school started.

Alan: That is why she was calling back, she told me about that.

Mike: Did she? When, since you talked to her Monday?

Alan: That Monday, she said "Mike told me 'he doesn't want to talk to me anymore". I was like, "ha, he fucked her and doesn't want to talk to her anymore."

Mike: I didn't say I didn't want to talk to her.

Alan: Well, that is what she said, so...

Mike: How could you love her and laugh at her like that, how could you love her and say, I was hurt when you said "This is ammunition".

Alan: She was on my memory, and she still makes me laugh, she still makes me cry, she still makes me hurt, she still makes me feel, she still makes me hungry. She is still inside me, and always will be, and I know what she would want me to do and that is pick up the pieces, rebuild all the bridges that got torn down in all that bullshit, just go on with my life and I will never forget, never forget, remember, remember her, the way you saw her happiest.

Mike: I can make her happy. I almost said that when you, uh...

Alan: (Deep sigh)

Mike: What?

Alan: Nobody can make anybody happy, you gotta find it for yourself. Nobody can make anybody happy.

Mike: Dude, you said she made you feel happy?

Alan: You don't understand.

Mike: I don't understand anything. That is why I am trying to sort things out and talk to you and talk to Mary Horrigan and Alan: I am telling you man, I just can't tell you, you know, it's not, it's something so unspoken and so just, I just felt for her.

Mike: But she made you feel?

Alan: Yeh, she made me feel. She pulled me out of a bottle, and I sobered up, and I pulled her out of a bottle of pills.

Mike: For what?

Alan: All for not I guess.

Mike: No, I mean, for, what were her pills for?

Alan: Dude, she was writing prescriptions for herself and going to the stores and picking up high intense grade speed. She got caught for it twice, she was in a shit load of trouble when I met her, and I stood by her.

Mike: How could she get straight A's and do that?

Alan: Because, grades were her life. You tried to tell her that somebody that gets an A is not necessarily smarter than somebody that gets a B, she'd kill you.

Mike: She wouldn't have done anything to me.

Alan: Oh, when I tried to tell her that she uh, ripped me half, literally. (Inaudible mumbling)

Mike: My stuff is still there.

Alan: My bike is still there.

Mike: Your what? Your fan is there.

Alan: My fan? Which fan?

Mike: The dual head fan.

Alan: Oh (inaudible mumbling)

Mike: I just can't go on without knowing and one of the reasons I almost called you was just to say, "did you do this", cause that is the only thing that made sense to me.....

Alan: No, I didn't.

Mike: "I fucked over Alan so he's fucking around with me".

Alan: No, I didn't do it.

Mike: That is good to hear. So nothing, none of this is effecting you?

Alan: Yeh it is man, are you crying?

Mike: No I am not going to cry in front of you now, I feel fine now, I am fine when I am talking to people. But as soon as I get alone I go to my room and see a picture that I have of her and me....

Alan: Throw the picture away.

Mike: I don't want to throw it away.

Alan: Well then keep it and remember and smile when you see it instead of fucking crying.

Mike: I do, I cry happy tears. Did Boner tell you about the funeral?

Alan: That would have been an uncomfortable situation at best, I'm sure.

Mike: You just said, But you didn't even want to go?

Alan: I wanted to go, I wanted desperately to go, but I couldn't go, the U.S. legal system denied me that privilege.

Mike: That's bullshit, they can't deny you anything. You said you had a lawyer, you didn't need to tell them anything.

Alan: Who do you think was her parent's number one suspect?

Mike: Her parents talked to me and said that you were disturbed and said that they didn't know who did it.

Alan: Who do you think, who do you think were her parents number one suspect, give me a fucking break.

Mike: I don't know.

Alan: Me.

Mike: I don't know.

Alan: It was me. I was their number one suspect. If I had shown up at the funeral her brothers would have beat the shit out of me.

(Alan is talking to someone else)

Mike: I will leave you alone, I am sorry, longer break than you expected to take. I can't feel anymore for anybody, I felt like I was on valium all day yesterday in class.

Alan: I'm the same as you, I'm feeling better.

Mike: You do, why, sometimes it can be better and then I feel, then I go home and I feel shitty, cause I don't know what to think, so many thoughts are racing through my head.

Alan: My number one rule since I heard has been "stay stoned".

Mike: Why, my number one rule is don't drink, don't do drugs, even though Jen would say "do them, they are fucking fun", wouldn't she?

Alan: Yeh, she would.

Mike: Mother fucker.

Alan: Maybe she wouldn't say that now.

Mike: Why wouldn't she say that now? She's partyin with Jim Morrison.

Alan: Yeh, down in South America.

Mike: Why in South America?

Alan: That's where everybody goes when they're dead.

Mike: I am going to South American right now then.

Alan: No you are not, if you kill yourself, I will kill myself.

Mike: That is another thing, don't ....

Alan: If you kill yourself, I will kill myself.

Mike: Dude,..

Alan: Mike!

Mike: You are not going to do that, why would you do that?

Alan: Because I give too much of a fuck about you.

Mike: Don't care about me, I wasn't talking about suicide. I was talking about going to South American on a plane and visiting her.

Alan: Don't do it. You got pieces to pick up, you got a responsibility.

Mike: Dude, you know what broke me up last week the most? Was that Perry told me that Jen told her once that Jen came to him and said "I am fucking freaked out because Alan said he was going to kill me and kill himself" and that just freaked me out you sayin that I am sorry.

Alan: I never said that.

Mike: That is what Perry told me I don't know anything ...

Alan: Perry's full of a lot of shit too.

Mike: ..what's a lie or what.

Alan: I told her if she killed herself I would do it too.

Mike: She wasn't going to do it.

(Alan and Mike are talking to Kurt.)

Mike: Dude, I'm going to go home I think.

Alan: Are you sure?

Mike: Yes, I'm sorry. I'll talk to you some other time, I don't...

Alan: Mike..

Mike: I've hugged so many people lately Alan, I can't, I am sorry.

Alan: Alright.

Mike: I have been getting sick about it, people are giving me so much, I mean, it is nice to be comforted to an extent, but I am just like "fucking back off". I am sorry dude.

Alan: I understand. Don't let go.

Mike: I'll be ok, I'll be fine, I will. I will probably talk to you again sometime, I'll say, "Alan, I'm going crazy, help me."

Alan: I want you to come to me alright?

Mike: That's fine.

Alan: Alright.

Mike: If you want to talk to me, your welcome to.

Alan: I will.

Mike: O.K.

Alan: Dude, take care.

Mike: Thanks man, take care of yourself, I feel bad for not saying those words to her, I know it's bullshit but.

Alan: It's alright.

Mike: Thank's man, take it easy.

Alan: Don't do anything stupid.

Mike: What?

Alan: Don't do anything stupid.

Mike: I'm not going to.

Alan: Alright.

Pause

Mike: I'm going to go back to my apartment. I'll stop by Walgreens on the way, I will meet you there.

Mike: He said he was going to go back there and lock up. If you want to stay there for awhile until he leaves you can do that or I will be back at my apartment and you can just pull in the drive way or go to Walgreens and I will meet you there. Just so you don't drive away and look suspicious or something.

(Mike is singing, now he is whistling.)

Mike: I'll give you some music relief, I could use something. Singing, praying, the truth. Ugh. I hate cigarettes.

(Mike is whistling.)

Alan: I don't know man, it's just like, I mean even the cops are totally clueless.

Mike: I don't know.

Alan: I mean their, their..

Mike: I haven't talked to them in a week.

Alan: Dude, dude, they got, people, they're asking people to come in and take lie detectors, they think, then their talking to Carbone, they are talking to JC....

Mike: But why don't, but if they pay for it why don't, have you taken one yet?

Alan: Huh?

Mike: Have you taken one yet?

Alan: They haven't asked me to, they never did ask me to.

Mike: It's weird, that should be the first thing that they ask you, cause that is what they said to me, like, right away.

Alan: Yeh, well, you were, I mean you were there, so ...

Mike: Yeh.

Alan: It's different, you know what I mean?

Mike: I guess.

Alan: I mean, they come and found me in Rockford, and..

Alan: Talk to Jen?

Mike: Yeh.

Alan: She called me, Monday.

Mike: Yeh, Morgan told me about that.

Alan: And I was just like, "I don't want to talk to you", you know.

Mike: You just talked to her for like a minute?

Alan: Yeh.

Mike: I don't know, I wish she was here, I talked to the counselor tonight.

Alan: yeh.

Mike: Again, which just pisses me off, and then I'd say, I mean I said that "either you or her are telling me lies".

Alan: Dude, all I know is what she told me and I don't know, it's just like...

Mike: She didn't tell you she was going out with anybody that week? She told me that Bubba was coming into town that, on the weekend, but that was the one after, that was supposedly after.

Alan: Yeh, well she just, all, see all I know is that she called me and she was just like "don't you think, you know, you still love me, bla bla bla bla bla, Swaine doesn't want to see me anymore..." you know, and I am like, you know, I mean what the fuck were you thinking Mi..., you know, and, and, and, I don't want to talk to you click, you know, and then I didn't hear from her again and then the next thing I knew was Saturday night.

Mike: You said you have an alibi right? I'm sorry.

Mike: What did you, what were you, what were you..?

Alan: I was out with Carbone Wednesday night, I was at a party every night that week, Carbone and I went to that party Wednesday night, and I have been at work every night.

Mike: But then in the day you had to work right?

Alan: I have been at work every night. I work from like 2 in the morning, 1 in the morning, you know, sometime around there until usually 9 or 10 in the morning.

Mike: Well you said you had a, I don't know, I just wish, I don't know, I wish, cause I know, I know that people have been talking about you and I just haven't said anything. But, why don't you go to the police and just tell them everything that, cause I mean ...

Alan: I told them everything I know, I mean..

Mike: Then say "give me a lie detector test and then you can wipe me off of your list" and that will be fucking it.

Alan: But see they can't even wipe you off their list with a lie detector test

Mike: Cause that's what they did for me. But they did, they did, for me.

Alan: They pretty much wiped me off the list too now. They haven't even bothered to talk to me or anything since then. I mean it is like, you know, my alibi checks out, they don't need to worry about it.

Mike: They'll worry about it, I think they'll. I mean, I had an alibi too and someone said that they saw my car in her driveway on Wednesday and I had to take two lie detector tests to prove that I wasn't there.

Alan: Well see, nobody has said anything about me, so.

Mike: Yeh, I don't, I don't know who, I don't even know who talked to the police. I know like, me and Katie and just people who are around here and they called everybody from the summer company.

Alan: Yeh, I don't know, people are talking about me. I don't really fucking care, you know, fuck them, I mean, it's just like ...

Alan: I didn't know certain things.

Mike: Like what?

Alan: I didn't know, you know. A lot of things I didn't know until you told me last week.

Mike: There is nothing to tell really.

Alan: I know, but.....

Mike: I wasn't carrying on a relationship with her, I wasn't going to.

Alan: Yeh, I know that, but it is just like,...

Mike: I wa...., I, right now though.

Alan: That, that doesn't even matter, man, all that shit is behind, you know, It's just like "fuck that".

Mike: But dude that's, none of that is behind, I don't want there to be future right now, I just want her back.

Alan: You are not going to be able to get that man.

Mike: I know, but then I want whoever did it to be gone.

Alan: That would be a good start.

Mike: That is why I got mad because, I don't know, I assumed they talked to Bubba, because I have told them everything about, I didn't know much about him, I didn't even know his real name.

Mike: She told me his real name.

Alan: Oh.

Mike: But I forget it, she had it written down, I am sure, but I don't know. And alot of things that you said about her and me upset me because, because I read a note yesterday from Kris, that she sent to Kris Perry that said that, she was finally happy. And it was a wonderful letter, it was so, I almost cried when I read it. But it would have been happiness just because it said this was the best time of her life because she got a new belief in God, her faith in God was reaffirmed, she was happy with life again, she got out of a bad relationship, and you know it was a bad relationship for the both of you.

Alan: Yeh.

Mike: And she got into a better one, and she thought she was finally finding love.

Alan: She would have gone just as crazy on you in two months.

Mike: I don't buy it.

Alan: She said she was just as happy as she could ever be after she started going out with me. After she broke up with a bad relationship with Bubba man.

Mike: That doesn't mean that she would have been the same with me, but that might not have been a bad relationship.

Alan: Ok, well it might not have been a bad relationship but you say there wasn't a relationship, so..

Mike: What with me?

Alan: yeh.

Mike: There wasn't really, we both defined it as not having a relationship.

Alan: Yeh, it was just kind of...

Mike: I cared about her and I had the most fun with her that I have had in a long time, this has been the best summer of my life until about a month ago.

Mike: But this, this didn't effect you at all?

Alan: Yes it does, it did, I don't know if it does anymore.

Mike: Are you still seeing Ron?

Alan: Huh?

Mike: Are you still seeing Ron?

Alan: No, I haven't seen Ron since I was in Rockford, but...

Mike: You saw him in Rockford?

Alan: No, I didn't see him in Rockford.

Mike: Oh.

Alan: I haven't seen Ron since I left for Rockford.

Mike: And you are totally Ok?

Alan: Dude, I'm freaked out, ok? I am, but it's just like, she wasn't mine, she didn't love me, she wasn't mine....

Mike: But you said that she did?

Alan: I am just walking away. Dude, if she fucked you in the Sig Chi basement on June 11...

Mike: Not in the basement.

Alan: ....she didn't love me.

Mike: That is bullshit, cause she fucked you after that.

Alan: She didn't love me any more.

Mike: But, but she, then if she..

Alan: If she fucked you, she didn't love me.

Mike: Dude, don't leave.

Alan: Don't try to tell me shit that is not true. I'll leave.

Mike: Alan, you said that she called you and said "I love you, I need you back" Dude, I am not gonna be able ....

Alan: She was bullshitting me and she was just looking for something to do while you were gone.

Mike: Dude...

Mike: He just got mad and went away. If you want me to go back in and try it again, honk three times, if not, I will go back to Walgreens.

Q8 – One BPB sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, Ex #15, box with cord from clock." Bag contains one yellow and white box sealed with RET, BET, PET, YET and CT. Box bears a hand drawing of the configuration of the cord and knot(s). Box contains two pieces of black cord. One piece has two cut ends and measures approximately 34 inches in length. Both cut ends are covered with CT. One end is labeled in part "end attached to clock radio cut at scene." Second piece of black cord has one cut end and one male-plug end and measures approximately 40 inches in length. Since no knots remain for reference, the entire length of both sides of both pieces of cord was swabbed in an attempt to recover DNA. (One moistened swab and one dry swab for each piece - total of four swabs)

Q8A – One manila envelope sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, ISP# 93-2654:45B, swabbings from pieces of cord." Envelope contains one manila envelope sealed with BET labeled in part "P93-2654 #45B, swabbings from pieces of cord." Envelope contains one CPB containing four microcentrifuge tubes each containing one swab head. All swab heads bear gray/brown colored staining. Tubes are labeled P93-2654 45B (I, II, III and IV) respectively.

Q8B – Four swabs from ISP combined with four swabs from GTI extracted together into one sample. (Four tubes - two swab tips in each tube concentrated down to one tube)<sup>ii</sup>

Q9 – One BPB sealed with C, labeled in part "200808888, Ex # 92 & 43, red plastic handled scissors recovered from victim." Bag contains one BPB sealed with RET, BET and CT labeled in part "P93-2654 Ex. 43, red plastic handled scissors removed from victim's chest at autopsy." Bag contains one pair of red plastic handled scissors. Scissors measure approximately 8.5 inches in length with the handles measuring approximately 3.5 inches and the blades measuring approximately 5 inches. Base of blades and part of handles closest to blades bear red/brown colored staining. These areas were avoided during swabbing. Portions of handles not bearing visible staining were swabbed in an attempt to recover DNA. (One moistened swab followed by one dry swab - total two).

Q9A – One manila envelope sealed with CT, labeled in part "200808888 ISP#P93-2654:43A, swabbing from handle of scissors." Envelope contains one manila envelope sealed with BET labeled in part "P93-2654 #43A, swabbings from plastic handles of scissors." Envelope contains one CPB containing four microcentrifuge tubes each containing one swab head. All swab heads bear dark gray colored staining. Tubes are labeled P93-2654 43A (I, II, III and IV) respectively.

Q9B – Four swabs from ISP combined with two swabs from GTI extracted together into one sample. (Three tubes - two swab tips in each tube concentrated into one)<sup>ii</sup>

Q10 – One BPB sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, Ex #79, Jean shorts removed from victim at autopsy." Bag contains one BPB (original packaging of item) and one pair of denim shorts. Shorts are "Lee" brand, size, "16 REG" and bear multiple areas of staining of various sizes, colors and intensity.

Q10AA – Swabs of fly area of shorts focusing on snap, zipper and fabric immediately surrounding each. (One moistened swab followed by one dry swab - total two)<sup>ii</sup>

Q10AB – Swabs of exterior sides of shorts at the waist and hips. (One moistened swab followed by one dry swab - total two)<sup>ii</sup>

Q11 – One BPB sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, Ex #100, Belt (no evidence tag attached)." Bag contains one brown leather faux braided belt with gold in color buckle. Belt is 32 inches in length. Belt appears to have been processed for latent prints.

Q11A – One white small drip-like stain located on the buckle end of the belt. Swabbed in an attempt to recover DNA.<sup>ii</sup>

Q11B – Swabs of remainder of buckle end of belt, approximately 4", (minus white stain), buckle and approximately 6" of opposite end of belt with holes. (One moistened swab followed by one dry swab - total two)<sup>ii</sup>

A presumptive test for the presence of semen was negative on items Q10 (26 stains), Q11 (one stain) and Q12 (18 stains).

DNA Results:

DNA extracts of Item Q8B, Q9B, Q10AA, Q10AB, Q11A, Q11B, Q12B and Q12C were amplified by Polymerase Chain Reaction and analysis of fifteen<sup>2</sup> and seventeen<sup>3</sup> STR systems was performed.

The genetic profiles obtained from these samples are listed in the Summary of Observed Alleles charts.

No reportable Y-STR genetic information was obtained from Item Q9B, swabs from scissors.

Q1 - One BPB sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, Jennifer Lockmiller Sex Assault Kit". Bag contains one SAECK box sealed with purple evidence tape, labeled in part "P93-2654, Jennifer Lockmiller. Kit contains multiple sub exhibits.

Q1A - One white envelope sealed with BET and PET, labeled in part "P93-2654, fingernail clipping and scrapping right" [sic]. Envelope contains one white paper packet containing five pieces of apparent fingernail, one piece of possible tissue and one wooden nail scraper. One side of each piece of nail appears to bear red fingernail polish.

Q1A1 - Two pieces of apparent fingernail

Q1A2 - One piece of possible tissue

Q1B - One white envelope sealed with BET and PET, labeled in part "P93-2654, fingernail clipping and scrapping left" [sic]. Envelope contains one white paper packet containing five large and three small pieces of apparent fingernail. One side of the larger piece of fingernail bears red fingernail polish. The interior of the white paper packet bears multiple apparent red fingernail polish flakes. Two of the larger pieces of fingernail and the three smaller pieces of nail were extracted as sample Q1B.

Q1AB - Remaining fingernail clippings from right and left hand as well as swabs of remaining nails and swabs of interior of paper packets.

Q2 - One manila envelope sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, J Lockmiller Vaginal Swabs - From ISP Sex Assault Kit". Envelope contains one heat sealed CPB labeled in part "P93-2654. Bag contains two clear plastic screw top tubes, both are labeled "93-2654 J.L. Vag 32B". Each tube contains three partial swab heads with partial wooden sticks. One tube contains swabs labeled "1, 2 and 3", the other tube contains swabs labeled "4, 5 and 6". All swab heads bear heavy yellow staining. Portions of swabs labeled "2, 3 and 6" were utilized for DNA

Q2A - The remainder of vaginal swabs labeled "2, 3 and 6".

Q3 - One BPB sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, Extracted DNA Tubes &

Slides". Bag contains one CPB labeled in part "F031671, Laboratory # P93-2654." Bag contains one cardboard slide mailer, not opened or examined. Bag also contains one CPB sealed with BET and purple ET labeled in part "F03-1671. P93-2654:108." Bag contains 8 microcentrifuge tubes.

Q3A – One microcentrifuge tube labeled "F031671 01m, 1671 01m". Tube reportedly contains dried down DNA extract from swabbings of the Left Hand Fingernails of Jennifer Lockmiller.

Q3B – One microcentrifuge tube labeled "F031671 02m, 1671 02m". Tube reportedly contains dried down DNA extract from swabbings of the Right Hand Fingernails of Jennifer Lockmiller.

K2 – Blood stain card, reference standard from Alan Beaman.

K3 – Blood stain card, reference standard from Michael Swaine.

K4 – Blood stain card, reference standard from Stacey Gates.

K6 – Oral swab, reference standard from Jennifer Lockmiller.

Q7 - One manila envelope sealed with CT labeled in part "200808888, sub exhibits of Exhibit #20." Envelope contains one manila envelope sealed with BET labeled in part "P93-2654 #20 sheet, semen stains & controls." Envelope contains five screw top tubes all labeled in part "P93-2654 #20" tubes labeled "Stain 1, Stain 2, Stain 3, Control 1 and Control 2" respectively.

Q7A – One piece of black fabric bearing a yellow/white colored stain. Stain measures approximately 9.0 cm x 3.6 cm.

Serology Results:

The presence of seminal fluid was indicated on Item Q2, vaginal swabs.

The presence of semen was confirmed on Item Q7A, piece of black fabric.

DNA Results:

Differential extractions resulting in epithelial fractions (EF) and male fractions (MF) were performed on Items Q2 and Q2A, vaginal swabs and Q7A, piece of black fabric.

DNA extracts of Item Q1A1, Q1A2, Q1B, Q1AB, fingernail samples; Q2, Q2A, vaginal swabs; Q3A, Q3B, DNA extracts from Cellmark; Q7A, piece of black fabric; and Items K2, K3, K4, K6 and K7, reference standards were amplified by Polymerase Chain Reaction and analysis of fifteen STR<sup>1</sup> systems was performed.

DNA extracts of Item Q1A1, Q1A2, Q1B, Q1AB, fingernail samples; Q2, Q2A, vaginal swabs; Q3A, Q3B, DNA extracts from Cellmark; and Items K2, K3, K4 and K7, reference standards, were amplified by Polymerase Chain Reaction and analysis of seventeen Y-STR<sup>2</sup> systems was performed.

The genetic profiles obtained from these samples are listed in the Summary of Observed Alleles charts.

No reportable Y-STR genetic information was obtained from Items Q1A1, Q1A2, Q1B and Q1AB, fingernail samples, Q2A-EF, vaginal swab and Q3A and Q3B, DNA extracts from Cellmark.

Autosomal DNA Results Summary:

The partial genetic profile obtained from Item Q1A1, right hand fingernail scrapings and clippings of Jennifer Lockmiller, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. No DNA foreign to Jennifer Lockmiller was detected in this sample. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The partial genetic profile obtained from Item Q1A2, piece of apparent tissue from the right hand fingernail scrapings and clippings of Jennifer Lockmiller, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. No DNA foreign to Jennifer Lockmiller was detected in this sample. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The partial genetic profile obtained from Item Q1B, left hand fingernail scrapings and clippings of Jennifer Lockmiller, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. No DNA foreign to Jennifer Lockmiller was detected in this sample. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The partial genetic profile obtained from Item Q1AB, remaining fingernail clippings, scrapings, swabs from the remaining nails as well as swabs of the paper packets from both the right and left hand of Jennifer Lockmiller, is female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile. Activity detected below the reporting threshold indicates a possible mixture at the D3S1358 locus.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q2-EF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. No DNA foreign to Jennifer Lockmiller was detected in this sample. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q2-MF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, consists of a mixture of at least two individuals with one major female contributor. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a contributor to this major genetic profile. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this major genetic profile. Activity detected at the Amelogenin locus reflects evidence of a male contributor. An additional indication of a mixture of DNA was detected below the reporting threshold at the D19S433 locus.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q2A-EF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this genetic profile. No DNA foreign to Jennifer Lockmiller was detected in this sample. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q2A-MF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, consists of a mixture of DNA from at least two individuals with one major female contributor and additional minor alleles. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a contributor to the major genetic profile. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this major genetic profile.

Activity detected at the Amelogenin locus reflects evidence of a male contributor. Assuming one minor contributor, Jennifer Lockmiller, Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to the minor alleles detected. DNA foreign to the tested individuals in this case was detected in this sample.

Genetic data obtained from Item Q3A, extract from Cellmark, was rendered unsuitable for both statistical evaluation and comparative statements.

The partial genetic profile obtained from Item Q3B, extract from Cellmark, is single source and female in origin. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to this partial genetic profile. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial genetic profile.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q7A-EF, piece of black fabric, consists of a mixture of at least two individuals with one major female contributor and minor alleles. Jennifer Lockmiller cannot be excluded as a contributor to the major genetic profile. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this major genetic profile.

Activity detected at the Amelogenin locus reflects evidence of a male contributor. Michael Swaine cannot be excluded as a possible contributor to the minor alleles detected. These minor alleles are expected to occur in approximately 1 in 20,981 in the Caucasian population, approximately 1 in 27,460 in the African American population and approximately 1 in 9,622 in the Hispanic population among unrelated individuals. Statistics for the minor alleles are based upon allele frequencies at the following loci: D8S1179, D21S11, D7S820, CSF1PO, D3S1358, TH01, D13S317, D16S539 and vWA. Assuming one contributor, Jennifer Lockmiller, Alan Beaman, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to the minor alleles detected.

The genetic profile obtained from Item Q7A-MF, piece of black fabric, is single source and male in origin. This genetic profile is identical to the genetic profile obtained from Michael Swaine. This genetic profile is expected to occur in approximately 1 in 1.9 quintillion in the Caucasian population, in approximately 1 in 20.9 quintillion in the African American population and in approximately 1 in 1.4 quintillion in the Hispanic population among unrelated individuals. Jennifer Lockmiller, Alan Beaman, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this genetic profile.

Y-STR Results Summary:

The haplotype profile obtained from Item Q2-MF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, consists of a mixture of at least two males. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this mixture.

The haplotype profile obtained from Item Q2A-MF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, consists of a mixture of at least two males with one major contributor. Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this major haplotype profile.

The partial minor haplotype profile obtained from Item Q2A-MF, vaginal swabs of Jennifer Lockmiller, consists of three alleles at the following loci: DYS458, DYS19 and DYS391*.

GTI Case #: FP302

Assuming one minor male contributor, Alan Beaman, Michael Swaine, Stacey Gates and Larbi John Murray are excluded as contributors to this partial minor haplotype profile.

Items Q1A and Q1B, fingernail samples from Jennifer Lockmiller were consumed in analysis, however both DNA extract and amplified product remain from these exhibits<sup>ii</sup>.

Evidence will be returned to the submitting agency upon completion of this case.

I hereby certify that the above testing was conducted according to currently accepted scientific standards in the forensic community and that the results and conclusions as stated above are an accurate and true reflection of said testing and this report accurately details the opinions and interpretations of the undersigned.

The Hon. Richard L. Broch

NOTICE OF APPEAL

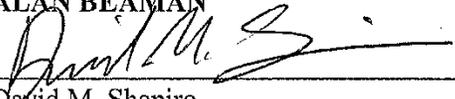

Plaintiff-Appellant Alan Beaman appeals to the Appellate Court of Illinois for the Fourth District from the following order entered in this matter in the Circuit Court of McLean County: the order of June 22, 2016 granting summary judgment in favor of Defendants-Appellees Timothy Freesmeyer, Dave Warner, Frank Zayas, and the Town of Normal.

By this appeal, Plaintiff-Appellant will ask the Appellate Court to reverse the order of June 22, 2016, and remand this cause with directions to reinstate all counts of the complaint for trial on the merits as to all claims, or for such other and further relief as the Appellate Court may deem proper.

C12501

Respectfully submitted,

ALAN BEAMAN

TO: Circuit Clerk, McLean County, McLean County, Illinois:

Whereas, ALAN W. BEAMAN (SID: 34309270) was convicted of the crime of Murder, Case: 94CF476 in the Circuit Court of McLean County and was sentenced May 10, 1995 to 50 Years,

Whereas, it has been represented to me that ALAN W. BEAMAN (SID: 34309270) is a fit and proper subject to Executive Clemency.

Now, Know Ye, that I, PAT QUINN, Governor of the State of Illinois, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution of the State, do by these presents:

PARDON

ALAN W. BEAMAN (SID: 34309270)

of the said crime of which convicted, and ALAN W. BEAMAN (SID: 34309270) is hereby acquitted and discharged of and from all further imprisonment and restored to all the rights of citizenship which may have been forfeited by the conviction.

Grant Pardon Based Upon Innocence As If No Conviction.

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

Indeed, he allowed the arrest to occur even though he knew that case was half-baked and not ready for charging and prosecution. See supra at 40.

II. THE INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS CLAIM (COUNT II) MUST PROCEED TO TRIAL.

It goes without saying that the conduct at issue here—pursuing plaintiff’s conviction maliciously, disregarding and manipulating the evidence, and sending an innocent man to prison for a dozen years for a crime he could not have committed—is extreme and outrageous conduct. See Carrocia v. Anderson, 249 F.Supp.2d 1016, 1028 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Treece v. Village of Naperville, 903 F. Supp. 1251, 1259-60 (N.D. Ill.1995), aff’d, 213 F.3d 360 (7th Cir. 2000)); Padilla v. City of Chicago, 932 F. Supp. 2d 907, 930 (N.D. Ill. 2013); Fox v. Tomczak, No. 04 C 7309, 2006 WL 1157466, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2006); Wallace v. City of Zion, No. 11 C 2859, 2011 WL 3205495, at *6 (N.D. Ill. July 28, 2011); McDonald v. Vill. of Winnetka, No. 00 C 3199, 2001 WL 477148, at *6 (N.D. Ill. May 3, 2001). Therefore, the circuit court erred in granting summary judgment on the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim.

III. THE CIVIL CONSPIRACY CLAIM (COUNT III) MUST PROCEED TO TRIAL

“Since conspiracies are generally evolved under the cloak of secrecy, the courts have traditionally permitted proof of a conspiracy by indirect or circumstantial evidence . . .” Rosee v. Bd. of Trade of City of Chicago, 43 Ill. App. 3d 203, 239 (1st Dist. 1976). “A conspiracy may generally be inferred from circumstances,” People v. Small, 319 Ill. 437, 449 (1925), so long as the circumstantial evidence of conspiracy is “clear and convincing.” McClure v. Owens Corning Fiberglas Corp., 188 Ill. 2d 102, 134 (1999).

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

II. PLAINTIFF'S CLAIMS FOR INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS, RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR, AND INDEMNIFICATION MUST PROCEED TO TRIAL.

Defendants argue that the claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress, respondeat superior, and indemnification must fall with the malicious prosecution claim. Because a jury must decide the malicious prosecution claim for the reasons described above, these other claims (Counts II, IV, and V) must also proceed to trial.

III. PLAINTIFF'S CIVIL CONSPIRACY CLAIM MUST PROCEED TO TRIAL

Defendants attack the conspiracy claim (Count III) with a logical sleight of hand. First, they dodge the disputed facts surrounding misconduct by asking the court to put "Plaintiff's claims of misconduct aside." Def. Br. 47. Then they declare that evidence of officers working together on a case, standing alone, does not make a conspiracy. Id. 46-48. Of course, if one ignores the misconduct and focuses only on the coordinated investigation, a conspiracy looks less plausible, but only because the misconduct provides powerful evidence of the conspiracy. Defendants' argument, in short, is like asking someone to ignore the turkey, cheese, and mustard—and then declaring that bread alone does not make a sandwich.

Again, defendants do not seriously challenge the disputed facts surrounding Freesmeyer's grand jury perjury, his manipulation of the time trials, and his concealment of exculpatory evidence. Zayas let Plaintiff get arrested even though he knew the case was shoddy and incomplete. Whether Warner hid the Murray polygraph presents a genuine issue of fact, as the federal court recognized. Taking these facts as true, as we must in this posture, it would be an extraordinary coincidence if the defendants all decided in solitude to cook the evidence in a way that would nail Alan Beaman, a college student with an alibi could prove a termination indicative of innocence. In Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F.Supp.2d 660, 673 (N.D.Ill. 2005), the district court merely recognized that if a governor's pardon uses certain language, that pardon may indicate a conviction was terminated in the plaintiff's favor for purposes of a Heck analysis only. Nevertheless, a district court decision is not precedential here, and in any event a case stands only for the issues it decides. Sanner v. Champaign County, 88 Ill.App.3d 491 (4th Dist. 1980).

Plaintiff also argues the evidence showed he is innocent, but the termination element of his claim turns on why the case was terminated, not what the civil court hearing the malicious prosecution tort case thinks of the strength of the evidence against the plaintiff. Plaintiff has presented no other evidence to satisfy his burden, and therefore the Circuit Court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim.

II. The Circuit Court Properly Granted Summary Judgment On Plaintiff's Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress Claim.

The Circuit Court properly recognized that plaintiff's intentional infliction of emotional distress ("IIED") claim is based on the alleged malicious prosecution and, therefore, fails because plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim fails. Jiminez v. City of Chicago, 830 F.Supp.2d 432, 451 (N.D.Ill. 2011) (success of the IIED claim was contingent on the success of malicious prosecution claim); Walden v. City of Chicago, 755 F.Supp.2d 942, 962 (N.D.Ill. 2010) (IIED claim was "intertwined" with the malicious prosecution claim). Here, because plaintiff bases his IIED claim on the alleged malicious prosecution, his IIED claim also fails. Moreover, absent proof sufficient to establish common law malicious prosecution, defendants are immune from liability for a prosecution, regardless of how plaintiff styles his cause of action. 745 ILCS 10/2-208.

Because the Circuit Court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim, summary judgment on the IIED claim was also properly granted.

III. The Circuit Court Properly Granted Summary Judgment On Plaintiff's State Law Civil Conspiracy Claim.

On appeal, plaintiff confines his conspiracy claim to defendants conspiring among themselves to maliciously prosecute him, abandoning his claim that defendants conspired with the McLean County State's Attorney. To prove a civil conspiracy, a plaintiff must show an agreement to accomplish either an unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose by unlawful means. Mosley v. City of Chicago, 614 F.3d 391, 399 (7th Cir. 2010); Buchner v. Atlantic Plant Maint., Inc., 182 Ill.2d 12, 23 (1998). Most significantly, a plaintiff must prove a meeting of the minds between the defendants. A conspiracy claim cannot be based on speculation or conjecture. The plaintiff must show the defendants acted in concert. Fritz v. Johnson, 209 Ill.2d 302, 317-18 (2004).

First, for all of the reasons the defendants were entitled to summary judgment on Count I, they were also entitled to summary judgment on Count III. As explained above, the Circuit Court properly found there was no evidence to show a fact issue on the elements of plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim. Moreover, the Circuit Court properly found there was no evidence of a conspiracy. Plaintiff argues that a conspiracy is shown by the following: (1) defendants collaborated closely on the case and shared information and therefore must have known there was no probable cause to arrest and prosecute Beaman; (2) Freesmeyer ignored exculpatory evidence and alternative suspects, lied to the grand jury and skewed time trials; (3) Warner "buried" the Murray polygraph; and (4) Zayas allowed the arrest to go forward, knowing the evidence could not justify it. Plaintiff's claims of misconduct aside, his argument flags nothing more than defendants

THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

(Docket No. 122654)

ALAN BEAMAN, Appellant, v. TIM FREESMEYER et al., Appellees.

Opinion filed February 7, 2019.

JUSTICE KILBRIDE delivered the judgment of the court, with opinion.

Chief Justice Karmeier and Justices Thomas, Garman, Burke, Theis, and Neville concurred in the judgment and opinion.

OPINION

¶ 1 The issue presented in this appeal is the proper test to satisfy the “commencement or continuance” prong of the tort of malicious prosecution. In 2008, this court reversed plaintiff Alan Beaman’s conviction for the murder of his ex-girlfriend, Jennifer Lockmiller. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 82 (2008). We concluded that the State violated his constitutional right to due process under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), when it failed to disclose material and exculpatory information about a viable alternative suspect. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81.

¶ 2 Beaman initiated this action, alleging defendants, Tim Freesmeyer, Dave Warner, and Frank Zayas, former officers with the Normal Police Department, acted maliciously in investigating him and aiding in his prosecution. Beaman asserted claims of malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and conspiracy against those individual defendants. Beaman sought damages from defendant, the Town of Normal, on theories of respondeat superior and indemnification. The circuit court of McLean County granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, finding no genuine issue of material fact as to Beaman's claims of malicious prosecution. The appellate court affirmed. 2017 IL App (4th) 160527. For the following reasons, we reverse and remand to the appellate court for further proceedings.

I. BACKGROUND

On August 28, 1993, 21-year-old Jennifer Lockmiller, a student at Illinois State University, was found dead in her apartment in Normal, Illinois. A number of police officers from the Normal Police Department were involved in investigating Lockmiller's death. Those officers included defendants, Detective Tim Freesmeyer, Detective Dave Warner, and Lieutenant Frank Zayas. Freesmeyer served as the principal detective in the investigation. Warner's role included serving as an evidence custodian and investigating one of the suspects, Stacey Gates. Zayas supervised Detective Freesmeyer and Detective Warner in the Lockmiller investigation until he retired in November 1994. Other individuals involved in the Lockmiller murder investigation included McLean County State's Attorney Charles Reynard and Assistant State's Attorney James Souk. Souk acted as the lead prosecutor in Beaman's criminal prosecution.

The murder investigation only focused on individuals Lockmiller knew. Police questioned Lockmiller's then-boyfriend, Michael Swaine, as well as former boyfriends, including Beaman, Stacey Gates, and Larbi John Murray.

A meeting was held on May 16, 1994, to determine whether to arrest Beaman for Lockmiller's murder. Those in attendance included State's Attorney Reynard,

Assistant State's Attorney Souk, Freesmeyer, Zayas, Normal Chief of Police James Taylor, and Detective Tony Daniels. During the meeting, Reynard decided to charge Beaman. Souk agreed. At his deposition in this case, Daniels testified he suggested a list of investigative avenues to pursue before arresting Beaman. Souk responded, "I think we've got our guy," and stated, "we went as far as we can with this case." Souk said they were going to issue a warrant for Beaman's arrest.

¶ 7 Prior to trial, the State filed a motion in limine to exclude evidence of Lockmiller's relationships with men other than Beaman and Swaine. The State argued that Beaman should not be allowed to offer alternative-suspect evidence unless he could establish it was not remote or speculative. The prosecutor informed the court that the State did not possess nonspeculative evidence of a third-party suspect. The trial court reserved ruling on the motion.

¶ 8 Later, the State and Beaman's defense counsel discussed Lockmiller's relationship with an individual identified as "John Doe," namely, Larbi John Murray. Souk told the court Doe had "nothing to do with the case." Souk did not disclose to Beaman's trial counsel Murray's criminal records that exposed his drug and steroid use and incidents of domestic violence against a subsequent girlfriend, nor did Souk disclose his incomplete polygraph examination. Beaman's trial counsel had no specific evidence pointing to another individual who could have committed the offense. The trial court granted the State's motion in limine.

¶ 9 At trial, the State argued that all of the other possible suspects were excluded due to alibis:

"Did we look at Mr. Swaine? You bet we did. Did we look at [Gates]? You bet we did. Did we look at a lot of people and interview a lot of witnesses? You bet we did. And guess who sits in the courtroom *** with the gap in his alibi still unclosed even after all this?"

¶ 10 The jury found Beaman guilty of first degree murder. He was sentenced to 50 years of imprisonment. Beaman's conviction was affirmed on appeal. People v. Beaman, 279 Ill. App. 3d 1115 (1996) (table) (unpublished order under Illinois Supreme Court Rule 23).

¶ 11 In April 1997, Beaman filed a petition for postconviction relief. Beaman alleged, in part, that the State violated his right to due process by failing to disclose material information on Murray's viability as a suspect. An evidentiary hearing was held on Beaman's petition. After the hearing, the circuit court denied Beaman's postconviction petition. The appellate court affirmed. People v. Beaman, 368 Ill. App. 3d 759 (2006).

¶ 12 In 2008, this court found the State violated Beaman's constitutional right to due process of law when it failed to disclose the evidence related to Murray and reversed the circuit court order denying Beaman's postconviction petition. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81-82. In that appeal, we summarized the undisclosed evidence as consisting of four points: "(1) [Murray] failed to complete the polygraph examination; (2) [Murray] was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to [Beaman's] trial; (3) [Murray] had physically abused his girlfriend on numerous prior occasions; and (4) [Murray's] use of steroids had caused him to act erratically." Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 74. We concluded that the State's case against Beaman was "tenuous" and that the evidence withheld by the State was favorable to Beaman because it supported Murray's viability as an alternative suspect. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 77-78. We determined that "[w]e cannot have confidence in the verdict finding [Beaman] guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him, along with the nondisclosure of critical evidence that would have countered the State's argument that all other potential suspects had been eliminated from consideration." Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81. We vacated Beaman's conviction and remanded the case to the circuit court for further proceedings. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 82.

¶ 13 On remand, the State declined to re prosecute Beaman and dismissed the charges against him. Beaman was released from prison in June 2008. In April 2013, the State of Illinois certified his innocence. On January 9, 2015, Governor Pat Quinn pardoned Beaman "based upon innocence as if no conviction."

¶ 14 In January 2010, Beaman filed a federal section 1983 (42 U.S.C. § 1983 (2006)) civil suit against defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas, as well as against Souk, Reynard, and other detectives. Beaman alleged three federal claims: (1) defendants acting individually and in conspiracy withheld exculpatory evidence in violation of Brady (individual liability), (2) defendants conspired to deprive Beaman of exculpatory evidence (conspiracy liability); and (3) defendants failed to intervene to prevent the violation of his rights. Beaman included state law claims for malicious prosecution, civil conspiracy, and intentional infliction of emotional distress against the Town of Normal.

¶ 15 The district court dismissed claims against Souk and Reynard based on absolute or qualified immunity. The claims against the other detectives, who are not named defendants in this case, were voluntarily dismissed after discovery revealed they were not involved in the suppression of evidence. The district court granted summary judgment on the federal claims to the remaining defendants, Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas. Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, 832 (C.D. Ill. 2014).

¶ 16 The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015). Neither the district court nor the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals addressed the state law claims of malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress, or conspiracy against the Town of Normal for lack of jurisdiction. Beaman, 776 F.3d at 506.

¶ 17 In April 2014, Beaman filed the civil action that is the subject of this appeal against defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, Zayas, and the Town of Normal, pleading the state law claims that the federal court had dismissed without prejudice. Beaman's complaint alleged malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and civil conspiracy against all defendants, as well as claims of respondeat superior and indemnification against the Town of Normal for recovery of damages.

¶ 18 Defendants moved for summary judgment. Defendants maintained that no evidence established a genuine issue of material fact on four of the five elements of Beaman's malicious prosecution claim. Defendants contended, as a result, they were entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the malicious prosecution claim and the remaining claims that were predicated on the contention that he was maliciously prosecuted.

¶ 19 The circuit court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, reasoning that Beaman could not satisfy the elements to establish a malicious prosecution claim. The court found the prosecutors who handled the case, not the defendant officers, decided to prosecute Beaman. The court highlighted Daniels's deposition testimony and pointed to his statement that, during the May 1994 meeting with investigating officers and lead prosecutors, Souk rejected Daniels's suggestions to investigate other avenues. Souk stated the investigation was complete and an arrest warrant would be issued for Beaman. The court found that defendants "did not exert any unusual influence on the prosecutors which caused a malicious prosecution to take place against [Beaman]." The circuit court dismissed the remaining claims as dependent on the malicious prosecution claim.

The appellate court affirmed the grant of summary judgment on the "commencement or continuance" element of malicious prosecution and did not address the circuit court's other grounds for dismissing that claim. 2017 IL App (4th) 160527. We allowed Beaman's petition for leave to appeal. Ill. S. Ct. R. 315 (eff. July 1, 2017). We allowed The Innocence Network; former state and federal prosecutors Stuart Chanen, William Conlon, Tyrone Fahner, Jonathan King, Scott Lassar, Jeremy Margolis, Ronald Safer, John Schmidt, Jeffrey Singer, James Thompson, Scott Turow, and Dan Webb; the City of Chicago, Illinois Municipal League, Illinois Prosecutors Bar Association, Illinois State's Attorneys Association, Intergovernmental Risk Management Agency, and City of Peoria (the governmental amici); and the Illinois Fraternal Order of Police Labor Council, Illinois Fraternal Order of Police, Illinois Troopers Lodge No. 41, and Chicago Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 7 to file amicus curiae briefs. Ill. S. Ct. R. 345 (eff. Sept. 20, 2010).

¶ 21

II. ANALYSIS

In this appeal, Beaman challenges the circuit court's grant of summary judgment in favor of defendants. Section 1005(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that summary judgment is proper when the "pleadings, depositions, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law." 735 ILCS 5/2-1005(c) (West 2016). Summary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation and "should be allowed only when the right of the moving party is clear and free from doubt." Adams v. Northern Illinois Gas Co., 211 Ill. 2d 32, 43 (2004). "[W]here reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or where there is a dispute as to a material fact, summary judgment should be denied and the issue decided by the trier of fact.” Espinoza v. Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry. Co., 165 Ill. 2d 107, 114 (1995). In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, we must construe the pleadings, depositions, admissions, and affidavits strictly against the movant and liberally in favor of the opponent. Adams, 211 Ill. 2d at 43. We review an appeal from a ruling on a motion for summary judgment de novo. Jackson v. TLC Associates, Inc., 185 Ill. 2d 418, 424 (1998).

¶ 23

A malicious prosecution action is a civil tort brought by a plaintiff “for recovery of damages which have proximately resulted to person, property or reputation from a previous unsuccessful civil or criminal proceeding, which was prosecuted without probable cause and with malice.” Freides v. Sani-Mode Manufacturing Co., 33 Ill. 2d 291, 295 (1965); see also 26 Edwin A. Jaggard, Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure 6 (William Mack ed. 1907) (cited here as 26 Cyc.) (“Malicious prosecution, regarded as a remedy, is a distinctive action ex delicto for the recovery of damages to person, property, or reputation, shown to have proximately resulted from a previous civil or criminal proceeding, which was commenced or continued without probable cause, but with malice, and which has terminated unsuccessfully.”).

¶ 24

This court has long recognized that “suits for malicious prosecution are not favored in law.” Joiner v. Benton Community Bank, 82 Ill. 2d 40, 44 (1980); Schwartz v. Schwartz, 366 Ill. 247, 250 (1937); Shedd v. Patterson, 302 Ill. 355, 359-60 (1922). This court has explained:

“Public policy favors the exposure of crime, and the cooperation of citizens possessing knowledge thereof is essential to effective implementation of that policy. Persons acting in good faith who have probable cause to believe crimes have been committed should not be deterred from reporting them by the fear of unfounded suits by those accused. It was for the purpose of encouraging and protecting those who exercise their constitutional right to appeal to our courts for redress of private or public grievances that the circumstances in which malicious prosecution actions may be brought have been rather narrowly circumscribed.” Joiner, 82 Ill. 2d 44-45.

¶ 25 When a person is wrongfully convicted of a crime, however, it has profound consequences. Nevertheless, malicious prosecution actions are subject to more stringent limitations than other tort actions and will be allowed only when all of the requirements for maintaining an action have been met. See 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 5 (2018); see also Joiner, 82 Ill. 2d at 45 (same); Swick v. Liataud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 512 (1996) (same).

¶ 26 To state a cause of action for the tort of malicious prosecution, the plaintiff must prove five elements: “(1) the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant; (2) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) the presence of malice; and (5) damages resulting to the plaintiff.” (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512; Ritchey v. Maksin, 71 Ill. 2d 470, 475 (1978); Freides, 33 Ill. 2d at 295. The absence of any of these elements bars a plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim. Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512.

¶ 27 The circuit court determined that Beaman could not satisfy the first four elements to establish a malicious prosecution claim. The appellate court affirmed the circuit court, finding no genuine issue of material fact on the “commencement or continuance” element of the malicious prosecution tort, and did not consider whether Beaman could satisfy the other elements to establish a malicious prosecution action. Accordingly, our analysis will focus on the “commencement or continuance” prong of a malicious prosecution action.

¶ 28 Beaman contends that the appellate court applied the wrong standard to the “commencement or continuance” prong. Beaman submits that three different approaches have developed to analyze the “commencement or continuance” element. Plaintiff describes these approaches as (1) the “significant role” test; (2) the “advice and cooperation” test; and (3) the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test.

¶ 29 According to Beaman, the “significant role” test is the predominant rule in Illinois, and it provides that liability for malicious criminal prosecution “extends to all persons who played a significant role in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff, provided all of the elements of the tort are present.” Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975 (1988) (citing 54 C.J.S. Malicious Prosecution §§ 18, 19 (1987)); see also Bianchi v. McQueen, 2016 IL App (2d) 150646, ¶ 72; Barnett v. Baker, 2017

IL App (1st) 152443-U, ¶ 40; Rodgers v. Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co., 315 Ill. App. 3d 340, 348-49 (2000). Beaman contends that the “significant role” test is routinely employed by federal courts in malicious criminal prosecution cases. See, e.g., Mitchell v. City of Elgin, No. 14 CV 3457, 2016 WL 492339, at *7-8 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 9, 2016), rev’d in part on other grounds, ___ F.3d ___, 2019 WL 76881 (7th Cir. 2019); Collier v. City of Harvey, No. 97 C 2823, 2000 WL 1468746, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2000). Beaman submits that federal courts also use the “significant role” test for instructing the jury in malicious prosecution cases against police officers. See e.g., Final Jury Instructions, Brown v. Spain, No. 11-C-08403, 2014 WL 6813086 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 16, 2014) (“An officer commences or continues the prosecution of a person if the officer played a significant role in causing the commencement or the continuation of the prosecution of the person.”); Instructions to the Jury, Payne v. Maher, No. 11-CV-6623, 2014 WL 7684881 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 14, 2014) (“A person causes a criminal proceeding to be commenced or continued if he plays a significant role in the initiation or continuation of criminal charges at any time from the arrest through the conclusion of the criminal case.”); Jury Instructions, Wells v. Johnson, No. 06-CV-06284, 2012 WL 1569523 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 19, 2012) (“A person commences or continues a proceeding if he initiated the proceeding, if his participation was of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation, or if he played a significant role in causing the prosecution of the Plaintiff.”).

¶ 30 Beaman describes the “advice and cooperation test” as providing that the “commencement or continuance” element is met if the officer’s participation was “so active and positive as to amount to advice and cooperation.” See, e.g., Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d 635, 647 (2002); Collier, 2015 WL 5081408, at *9.

¶ 31 Finally, Beaman explains the “pressure, influence, or misstatement test.” According to Beaman, this test, as applied by the appellate court here, provides the plaintiff must establish that an “officer pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied.” 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 58.

¶ 32 Defendants counter that these supposedly different approaches are actually consistent with each other, even if some of the courts’ language differs, and that all require proof of causation. According to defendants, all of Beaman’s purportedly different approaches look for some action by the police that affects the prosecutor’s independent judgment, in other words, actions that are the proximate cause of the prosecution.

¶ 33 We agree with defendants that, while cases may use differing language when analyzing the commencement or continuance element, in each case, the court examined the defendant’s conduct or participation in the commencement or continuation of criminal proceedings against the plaintiff. In other words, the relevant inquiry is whether the officer proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the criminal proceeding.

¶ 34 It is useful to examine the history of the common-law tort of malicious prosecution. In the 1800s, “it was common for criminal cases to be prosecuted by private parties.” Rehberg v. Paulk, 566 U.S. 356, 364 (2012). Those private parties did not enjoy immunity from suit; rather, “a private complainant who procured an arrest or prosecution could be held liable in an action for malicious prosecution if the complainant acted with malice and without probable cause.” Rehberg, 566 U.S.

at 364. “Both English and American courts routinely permitted plaintiffs to bring actions alleging that the defendant had made a false and malicious accusation of a felony to a magistrate or other judicial officer.” Briscoe v. LaHue, 460 U.S. 325, 351 (1983) (Marshall, J., dissenting, joined by Blackmun, J.). After 1871, criminal cases were increasingly prosecuted by public officials who, unlike private prosecutors, were absolutely immune from tort claims for malicious prosecution. Rehberg, 566 U.S. at 365. However, courts have continued to recognize claims for malicious prosecution against private individuals whose conduct led to the plaintiff’s criminal prosecution.

¶ 35 In Illinois, common-law malicious prosecution actions have long been recognized. See, e.g., Richey v. McBean, 17 Ill. 63, 64 (1855) (recognizing that an action for malicious prosecution “must charge that the defendant was actuated by malice in setting on foot the prosecution, and that the same was done without probable cause”); see also Hurd v. Shaw, 20 Ill. 354, 355 (1858) (rejecting a malicious prosecution claim where there was no evidence that the defendant was the prosecutor of the charge against the plaintiff “or that he originated the indictment”).

¶ 36 This court first addressed whether a defendant who did not directly initiate the criminal proceedings against the plaintiff could be held liable in a malicious prosecution action in Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143 (1866). In Gilbert, the defendant’s business partner began the prosecution against the plaintiff by swearing out an affidavit needed to issue a warrant and “directed the officer in its execution.” Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 146. The court in Gilbert explained that the defendant could be liable only if “he either directly participated in causing the arrest, or advised it to be made.” Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 146. The defendant’s mere knowledge of or consent to the actions of his business partner was insufficient unless that “‘consent’ should be of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and co-operation.” Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147. If the defendant took some affirmative action to “advise and encourage the arrest” that led to the prosecution, then the defendant could be liable. Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147. If, however, the defendant merely allowed his partner “to follow the dictates of his own judgment, without interference on his part,” then he would not be liable. Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147.

¶ 37 The Gilbert court remanded the case for a new trial because the jury was erroneously instructed on this issue. Thus, in a case where someone other than the defendant took the official action of initiating the criminal prosecution, Gilbert established the “active and positive” advice or cooperation test.

¶ 38 As the governmental amici aptly point out in their brief, “historically, what is now the ‘commence or continue’ element was originally stated as two elements” that highlighted the legal cause element and that, over time, the two elements were collapsed into what is now stated as a single “commencement or continuance” element. Our research has revealed that in Glenn v. Lawrence, 280 Ill. 581 (1917), this court set forth six elements that will sustain an action for malicious prosecution:

“(1) the commencement or continuance of an original, criminal or civil judicial proceeding; (2) its legal causation by the present defendant against plaintiff, who was defendant in the original proceeding; (3) its bona fide termination in favor of the present plaintiff; (4) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (5) the presence of malice therein; and (6) damage conforming to legal standards resulting to the plaintiff. 26 Cyc. at 8.” Glenn, 280 Ill. at 585.

¶ 39 The Cyclopaedia of Law and Procedure, published in 1907 and cited by Glenn, sets forth these same six elements. See 26 Cyc. at 8. The Cyclopaedia of Law and Procedure further explains that “[t]o sustain the action [for malicious prosecution], it must affirmatively appear as a part of the case of the party demanding damages that the party sought to be charged was the proximate and efficient cause of maliciously putting the law in motion.” 26 Cyc. at 17.

¶ 40 In 1965, this court continued its reference to six elements for maintaining a cause of action for malicious prosecution in Freides (33 Ill. 2d at 295). In 1978, however, in Ritchey, this court cited Freides but collapsed the first two elements into one: “the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant,” reducing the number of elements required to maintain an action for malicious prosecution from six to five. Ritchey, 71 Ill. 2d at 475. Later, this court continued to use five elements to evaluate malicious prosecution claims. See Joiner, 82 Ill. 2d at 45; Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. Despite the variation in the language and elements of a malicious prosecution cause of action, the “commence or continue” element has always required the defendant’s conduct to be the legal cause of the commencement or continuation of the underlying criminal proceedings. Indeed, all of the parties agree that a malicious prosecution action requires proof of legal causation.

The issue in this case concerns the proper approach for determining when a police officer commences or continues a prosecution, e.g., when the defendant's conduct is the legal cause of the commencement or continuation of the original criminal proceedings. Plaintiff interprets differing language used by courts as different legal standards or tests applied in cases against police officers to establish the "commencement or continuation" prong. We, however, agree with defendants that all of these approaches are aimed at examining the actions by the police that may have caused the plaintiff's wrongful prosecution in the original criminal proceeding. For example, the court in Cervantes v. Jones, 23 F. Supp. 2d 885 (N.D. Ill. 1998), examined whether, under Illinois law, a plaintiff could meet the commencement or continuance prong requirements for malicious prosecution, stating:

"In order to be liable for malicious prosecution, 'a defendant either must have initiated a criminal proceeding or his participation in it must have been of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation.' Denton v. Allstate Ins. Co., [152 Ill. App. 3d 578, 583 (1986)]. Put another way, '[l]iability for malicious prosecution ... extends to [police officers] who played a significant role in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff[.]' [Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 975]. See also [Reed v. City of Chicago, 77 F.3d 1049, 1053 (7th Cir. 1996)] (plaintiff must show that the officer used improper influence on the prosecutor or made knowing misstatements to the prosecutor in order to secure the prosecution); Newsome v. James, [968 F. Supp. 1318, 1323 (N.D. Ill. 1997)] (stating the issue as whether the police officer 'got the ball rolling in the unwarranted prosecution' of the plaintiff)." Cervantes, 23 F. Supp. 2d at 888.

Thus, the differing language used in malicious prosecution cases is based on a causal analysis determining whether the defendant's actions proximately caused the plaintiff's wrongful prosecution.

¶ 42

With this background in mind, we now examine whether the appellate court properly determined that Beaman failed to meet the "commencement or continuation" element in granting defendants' motion for summary judgment. The appellate court held that Beaman was required to “establish that officer[s] pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied.” 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 58. The appellate court’s decision rested heavily on its observation that “ ‘[t]he State’s Attorney, not the police, prosecutes a criminal action’ ” and a need to “protect[ ] officers in their performance of their police work.” (Internal quotation marks omitted.) 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶¶ 57-58 (quoting Colbert v. City of Chicago, 851 F.3d 649, 655 (7th Cir. 2017)).

¶ 43 This court has recognized that prosecutors ordinarily rely on police and other agencies to investigate criminal acts. People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24. Significantly, “ ‘it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.’ ” (Emphasis in original.) Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24 (quoting People v. Wilson, 254 Ill. App. 3d 1020, 1039 (1993)). Contrary to the appellate court’s standard, however, this court established long ago, in Gilbert, that a person can be liable for commencing or continuing a malicious prosecution even if that person does not ultimately wield prosecutorial power or actively deceive prosecutors. See Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147. Illinois courts have adhered consistently to this standard, holding that liability for malicious prosecution “extends to all persons who played a significant role in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff, provided all of the elements of the tort are present.” Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 975 (citing 54 C.J.S. Malicious Prosecution §§ 18, 19 (1987)); see also Bianchi, 2016 IL App (2d) 150646, ¶¶ 72-73; Rodgers, 315 Ill. App. 3d at 348-49.

¶ 44 “Liability thus depends on whether the defendant was actively instrumental in causing the prosecution, and the presumption of prosecutorial independence can be overcome by showing that the defendant improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018). Police officers may be subject to liability for malicious prosecution “[i]f they initiate a criminal proceeding by presentation of false statements, or by withholding exculpatory information from the prosecutor.” 3 Dan B. Dobbs, Paul T. Hayden, & Ellen M. Bublick, The Law of Torts § 587, at 392 (2d ed. 2011) (cited here as Law of Torts).

¶ 45 The established definition of “commence or continue” reflects that the fundamental purposes of tort law are to hold wrongdoers liable for foreseeable consequences of their actions and to deter wrongful conduct. See Siemieniec v. Lutheran General Hospital, 117 Ill. 2d 230, 259 (1987); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 901 (1979). As the former state and federal prosecutors submit in their amicus brief, liability for malicious prosecution “calls for a commonsense assessment” of those persons who played a significant role in the criminal case. This significant role assessment necessarily includes those persons whose participation in the criminal case was so “active and positive” to “amount to advice and co-operation” (Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147) or those persons who “improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution” (52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)). In other words, the separate standards cited by Beaman actually fall within the “significant role” standard for determining whether a person proximately caused a plaintiff’s wrongful conviction.

¶ 46 Thus, liability for malicious prosecution requires an examination of whether the defendant’s conduct is both the cause in fact and a proximate cause of the commencement or continuation of the original criminal proceedings. Law of Torts at 390; see also 26 Cyc. at 17 (“To sustain the action [for malicious prosecution], it must affirmatively appear as a part of the case *** that the party sought to be charged was the proximate and efficient cause of maliciously putting the law in motion.”). In determining whether the defendants’ conduct was the proximate cause of the commencement or continuation of the original criminal proceedings, the court must examine whether the defendants played a significant role in the plaintiff’s prosecution.

¶ 47 We conclude that the appellate court’s standard failed to consider whether the defendants proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the criminal proceeding against Beaman. The appellate court focused its inquiry on whether the “officer[s] pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied.” 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 58. On remand, the appellate court must examine whether the defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in Beaman's prosecution.

¶ 48

III. CONCLUSION

¶ 49

For the foregoing reasons, we reverse the judgment of the appellate court and remand the cause for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

1 would have gotten a copy of it. So he would have had to
 2 disseminate the report. If my memory serves me
 3 correctly, that's -- should have been the way to process
 4 that.
 5 Q. Okay. So let me try to take that step by step
 6 so I make sure I'm understanding.
 7 Assuming Detective Warner received the report,
 8 he should direct the original to records?
 9 A. Yes. The originals always went to records.
 10 Q. And by sending it to records, the report would 11 become part of the central file for this case?
 12 A. Right, uh-huh.
 13 Q. And upon receiving this report, Warner should 14 make sure that you get a copy?
 15 A. Yeah, should have made sure everybody else
 16 would have gotten a copy of it.
 17 Q. And when -- when you say "everybody," do you
 18 mean all of the detectives working on the case?
 19 A. Working on the case, yes.
 20 Q. Okay. And he should have also made sure that 21 the chief got a copy?
 22 A. Oh, yes, sir.
 23 Q. Okay. And upon receiving the report that's 24 shown in Exhibit 4, do you have any reason to doubt that

1 Detective Warner would have gone through the steps that
 2 you and I just discussed?
 3 MR. DiCIANNI: Object to speculation.
 4 A. I -- I don't know. I -- he should have
 5 followed the procedure, disseminated the information.
 6 Q. Uh-huh. And he would have been trained to 7 follow that procedure?
 8 A. Yes, sir.
 9 Q. And assuming the report went to the records
 10 department and became part of the central file, the 11 report would have been transmitted to the State's 12 Attorney's Office, right?
 13 A. Yes.
 14 MS. EKL: Objection; form, foundation.
 15 A. It should have been, yes, sir.
 16 Q. Okay. If the lead state's attorney in this 17 case did not receive a copy of this report, would you
 18 find that surprising?
 19 A. Yes, I would have, yes.
 20 Q. Now, I'll represent to you that this report was 21 not provided to Mr. Beaman's defense lawyers prior to or 22 during his trial. Do you have any explanation of why
 23 that might have occurred?
 24 A. No, sir, I don't.

1 Q. Would you agree with me that this is a report
 2 that should have been provided to Mr. Beaman's defense
 3 lawyers?
 4 A. Yes, sir.
 5 MR. DiCIANNI: I'll object to speculation, to 6 lack of foundation, legal conclusion.
 7 A. Yeah, they should have gotten a copy of it,
 8 yes.
 9 Q. When you were a law enforcement officer, did
 10 you receive training with regard to the duty to provide 11 exculpatory evidence to defendants' lawyers?
 12 A. Yes, sir.
 13 Q. And did -- did detectives that you supervise
 14 also receive that training?
 15 A. Yes, sir, I'm sure they did.
 16 Q. Based on the training that the detectives
 17 working on the Lockmiller case received, should they 18 have recognized that the report shown in Exhibit 4 is 19 something that ultimately should have been provided to 20 the defense?
 21 MR. DiCIANNI: Objection; speculation.
 22 A. Yes, sir.
 23 Q. And why is it that the report should have been 24 provided to the defense?

1 A. It's valuable information. It should have
 2 relayed to the State, yes.
 3 Q. And you didn't -- you mentioned relayed to the 4 State. And ultimately relayed to the defense, right?
 5 A. Right, yes, sir.
 6 Q. And when you say that it's valuable
 7 information, what's valuable about it?
 8 MR. DiCIANNI: I'll object to asking him to 9 speculate about why it would be valuable.
 10 A. Well, I mean, it's a result of an examination
 11 conducted on one of the suspects; therefore, it's 12 something that should have been relayed to the defense.
 13 Q. And the report shown in Exhibit 4 indicates
 14 that Mr. Murray didn't follow directions given to him
 15 during the polygraph, right?
 16 A. I'm sorry. Repeat that question again.
 17 Q. Sure. Does the report indicate that Mr. Murray
 18 did not follow directions given to him by the polygraph
 19 examiner?
 20 A. It says, "Did not follow specific directions."
 21 That's what it says, yes.
 22 Q. Uh-huh. And it also says that the subject had 23 to be dismissed from the laboratory because he wasn't
 24 complying with the instructions, right?

1 A. Yes, sir.
 2 Q. So would you agree with the proposition that
 3 one of the reasons the document shown in Exhibit 4
 4 should have been given to the state's attorney and 5 ultimately to the defense is that it casts some 6 suspicion on an alternative suspect?
 7 MR. DICIANNI: I object to asking him to 8 speculate about what it does.
 9 A. I would say that it would be an interesting
 10 report to read and, yeah, probably it would be a red
 11 flag to look at this person a little bit closer, yes.
 12 MR. SHAPIRO: Mark this as Exhibit 5, please.
 13 (Zayas Exhibit No. 5 was marked for 14 identification.)
 15 Q. Mr. Zayas, I'm showing you a document that's 16 been marked as Exhibit 5. It's a two-page exhibit.
 17 Please take as long as you want to review it, and let me
 18 know when you've had a chance to do so.
 19 A. Yes, sir.
 20 Oh, let me read the second page.
 21 Q. And Exhibit 5 is a report from a polygraph
 22 examiner regarding Stacey Gates?
 23 A. Uh-huh.
 24 Q. Right?

125

1 A. Yes, sir.
 2 Q. And it's addressed to Detective David Warner,
 3 right?
 4 A. Yes, sir.
 5 Q. Okay. And assuming this document was received
 6 by the Normal Police Department, it would have been 7 directed to David Warner, right?
 8 A. Yes, sir. It's addressed to him.
 9 Q. And with regard to Exhibit 4, the polygraph
 10 regarding Mr. Murray, we just talked through the steps
 11 that would occur with regard to the document when it
 12 arrived, right?
 13 A. Yes, sir.
 14 Q. Would the exact same process that you just 15 described with regard to the polygraph report for 16 Mr. Murray have been followed for the polygraph for 17 Mr. Gates?
 18 MR. DICIANNI: Object; speculation.
 19 A. Yes, sir.
 20 Q. So fair to say that copies of the polygraph
 21 report shown in Exhibit 5 should have been disseminated
 22 to all of the investigators involved in the case?
 23 A. Yes, sir.
 24 Q. And Mr. Warner should have directed the 126

1 original of Exhibit 5 to central records, right?
 2 A. Yes, sir.
 3 Q. And the state's attorney would have received a
 4 copy of the report through central records, right?
 5 A. Yes.
 6 MS. EKL: Objection; form, foundation.
 7 Q. And a copy of the document shown in Exhibit 5
 8 would have also gone to you and to Chief Taylor, right?
 9 A. Yes, sir.
 10 Q. Do you have any reason at all to doubt that 11 those steps would have been followed after the receipt 12 of this?
 13 MR. DICIANNI: Objection. You're asking him to 14 speculate.
 15 MR. SHAPIRO: Let me -- I don't think I got the 16 question out quite.
 17 MR. DICIANNI: Oh.
 18 Q. Do you have any reason to doubt that the 19 document shown in Exhibit 5 would have been -- that -- 20 strike that.
 21 Do you have any reason to doubt that all the 22 procedures we've just been discussing would have been 23 followed by Mr. Warner when he received Exhibit 5?
 24 A. No, sir.

127

1 MR. DICIANNI: Objection; speculation and lack
 2 of foundation.
 3 Q. And you stated that the polygraph report with 4 regard to Mr. Murray, Exhibit 4, was a red flag. Would
 5 you agree that the polygraph report involving Mr. Gates
 6 was also a red flag?
 7 MS. EKL: Objection; form.
 8 MR. DICIANNI: Yeah, speculation.
 9 MS. EKL: Misstates testimony.
 10 MR. DICIANNI: I join.
 11 A. Yes, sir.
 12 Q. And why is it that you would characterize the 13 Stacey Gates polygraph report as a red flag?
 14 MR. DICIANNI: Same objection.
 15 A. Well, again it was another -- the report
 16 indicated that there was some anomalies in the results,
 17 and the polygraphist would have indicated that, and that 18 should have been made aware to -- to the defense and the 19 prosecutor.
 20 Q. And is it fair to say that the investigators
 21 working under you in the detectives division would have 22 been trained to recognize this document as exculpatory
 23 evidence?
 24 MR. DICIANNI: Yeah, I'll object to

1 That's why I asked the question that way,
 2 Did you think it was a difficult
 3 circumstantial case?
 4 A. Of course it was a difficult
 5 circumstantial case.
 6 Q. Okay. Now, here comes the next
 7 question. Did you think it was a difficult
 8 circumstantial case because there wasn't enough
 9 physical evidence to base a conviction on, there
 10 was no confession from the defendant and there
 11 was no eyewitness testimony? Is that why you
 12 thought it was a difficult circumstantial case?
 13 MS. EKL: Objection, asked and answered.
 14 THE WITNESS: That certainly went into it.
 15 BY MR. BOWMAN:
 16 Q. Okay. Is there anything else that went 17 into its being a difficult circumstantial case?
 18 MS. EKL: Other than what he already 19 testified to.
 20 BY MR. BOWMAN:
 21 Q. No. I'm asking him to explain right
 22 now. Is there anything else that went into it
 23 being a difficult circumstantial case?
 24 A. I -- you know, I -- just off the top of 137

1 my head, I'm not thinking of delineating the 2 factors that made it difficult. It just was 3 clearly a difficult case.
 4 Those are part of the factors, and
 5 obviously if you have a confession, a case is 6 not so difficult. If you have eyewitnesses, it
 7 probably isn't so difficult. And when you have 8 a case that's in essence totally circumstantial,
 9 and, you know, I think this was the most 10 difficult case in my career, not because of 11 comparing it to other totally circumstantial
 12 murder cases but because I, you know, didn't
 13 have as far as I know a totally circumstantial
 14 murder case that I ever tried.
 15 But, you know, the fact of the things
 16 that weren't there, yes, certainly no direct 17 evidence and all circumstantial evidence makes 18 for great difficulty in putting a case together.
 19 Q. And actually there was a degree of 20 difficulty added to this case when the Bell
 21 Federal videotape surfaced, wasn't there?
 22 MS. EKL: Objection, form.
 23 THE WITNESS: Well, when that surfaced, that 24 -- prior to the time that surfaced, our 138

1 information was that Mr. Beaman had gotten off
 2 work at 9:00 o'clock and so would have been in a
 3 position to head for Normal at 9:00 o'clock.
 4 When the video surfaced, that took an
 5 hour and eleven minutes off the time frame
 6 making it clear he was still in Rockford at Bell
 7 Federal at 11 minutes after 10:00.
 8 BY MR. BOWMAN:
 9 Q. Did the video surface before or after 10 you and the investigators agreed to initiate 11 this prosecution?
 12 MS. EKL: Objection, form, foundation.
 13 THE WITNESS: After I and the investigators
 14 agreed to do what?
 15 BY MR. BOWMAN:
 16 Q. May 16, you have a meeting with the 17 investigators. It's at the McLean County
 18 State's Attorney's Office. You recall that,
 19 right, May 16 of 1994?
 20 A. As I indicated before, I can't recall
 21 where it was but yes, there was a meeting.
 22 Q. And that was the meeting at which 23 everybody went around and talked about whether 24 charges should be filed against Beaman or not?

139

1 A. It was a discussion. I don't recall
 2 the details of it.
 3 Q. Did you chair that meeting?
 4 A. I don't recall.
 5 Q. In any event, you do recall that that 6 was the date that the charges were approved and 7 the prosecution of Mr. Beaman was initiated,
 8 correct?
 9 A. You phrased it in terms, Mr. Bowman, of 10 the investigators and me making a decision to 11 charge him. The prosecutors made the decision
 12 as to whether to charge him.
 13 And the final decision would have been 14 made by the state's attorney, Mr. Reynard, not 15 by the investigators. The investigators' input
 16 would have been listened to.
 17 Q. Well, we'll talk about the 18 investigators' input in a minute and I don't 19 want to engage in a debate right now about whose 20 decision it was.
 21 But in any event, we can all agree that
 22 on May 16, a decision was made to file a
 23 criminal complaint against Alan Beaman for the 24 murder of Jennifer Lockmiller; can we not?

1 (Witness sworn.)
2 CHARLES REYNARD,
3 called as a witness herein, having been first duly
4 sworn, was examined and testified as follows:
5 DIRECT EXAMINATION
6 BY MR. BOWMAN:
7 Q. Tell us your name, please, sir.
8 A. Charles Reynard.
9 Q. I'm -- I'm not going to address you as 10 I would if I were before you in court. I'll use
11 your last name. I'm not going to use your title
12 because of the circumstances and I appreciate
13 that. No disrespect is intended.
14 Could you -- you're familiar with this
15 process, I'm sure. Have you ever been a
16 deponent yourself on any prior occasion?
17 A. I don't recall being deposed. I may 18 have been deposed. I've been a witness.
19 Q. You will abide by the rules, I'm sure.
20 The only thing to bear in mind, I think, in the 21 deposition context is that, you know, it
22 sometimes seems more like a conversation. And 23 with that atmospheric, it's possible to 24 anticipate what I'm going to say and to jump in.

1 characterization. I think that's laced with
2 meanings or suggested meanings which are not
3 essentially fair.
4 But at the literal level, that's not
5 too far off.
6 If my professional responsibilities
7 were directly implicated by this information, I
8 would be intensely interested in terms of what 9 do I do now.
10 But I'm very busy now with those 11 professional responsibilities and that's one of 12 the reasons I haven't been able to 13 comprehensively keep track of that which is of 14 interest to me but not directly implicating my 15 current professional responsibilities.
16 BY MR. BOWMAN:
17 Q. Got it. Do you have an opinion today
18 as to Mr. Beaman's guilt?
19 MS. EKL: Objection, foundation to the 20 extent that your question is asking him based on 21 things that he has already told you he doesn't 22 know about.
23 MR. BOWMAN: Well, I'm not asking him to 24 provide an opinion. I'm asking him if he has 21

1 one.
2 THE WITNESS: Yes.
3 BY MR. BOWMAN:
4 Q. What is your opinion?
5 A. That his -- while I respect the 6 ultimate disposition of the court in finding 7 reasonable doubt, I continue to believe that he 8 was probably guilty.
9 Q. Okay. What's that based on?
10 A. Opinions formed on the apprehension of 11 evidence as it was reported to me back during 12 the course of the investigation, during the 13 trial proceedings, during the Appellate
14 proceedings.
15 Q. The intent of my question was to get 16 what evidence you're referring to.
17 A. I don't have a great grasp of what that 18 evidence is now. So I'm basically relying on 19 the fact that my bottom line is as I just 20 indicated to you.
21 But all of the details that go into 22 that opinion or even very many of them are not 23 there for me today.
24 Q. Your interrogatories indicate

22

1 graduation from Loyola University.
2 What specific institution was that?
3 A. College of Law.
4 Q. What specific institution?
5 A. Chicago.
6 Q. Chicago?
7 A. Yes.
8 Q. What led you to Oak Park following
9 graduation?
10 A. Well, I was in Oak Park before
11 graduation and I stayed there for a time after 12 graduation looking for work.
13 Q. It says here that you were in private 14 practice as a sole practitioner.
15 What did you do?
16 A. I worked hours for an Evanston attorney
17 and I had a few cases of my own.
18 Q. Did you --
19 A. I was mainly treading water looking for 20 work with the public defender's office back
21 then. My friend was Tom Royce. He was first
22 assistant at the time.
23 Q. And what -- and then after a year, you
24 went and became assistant state's attorney down

23

1 here?
2 A. Correct.
3 Q. Did you have any relationship to this
4 community when you came down here?
5 A. No.
6 Q. What were the circumstances that led to 7 your coming down here to serve as an assistant
8 state's attorney?
9 A. I was interviewing with the director of 10 what was then called the State's Attorney's
11 Appellate Assistant Service in Elgin by a 12 gentleman named Mr. Irish, I believe, and he 13 said the state's attorney in Bloomington has a 14 couple of openings; you might want to go down
15 there.
16 Q. And who was that state's attorney?
17 A. Paul Welch.
18 Q. Was it a full-time job?
19 A. Yes.
20 Q. What were your duties when you were the 21 assistant state's attorney for the two years
22 from '75 to '77? And I'm just reading off these 23 interrogatory answers. If I get something
24 wrong, you'll tell me.

24

1 THE WITNESS: The answer is no.
2 BY MR. BOWMAN:
3 Q. Do you recall any discussion about the 4 state of the forensic investigation at any
5 point?
6 MS. EKL: I'm sorry. At any point?
7 MR. BOWMAN: At any point prior to charging.
8 THE WITNESS: Well, I -- not real
9 specifically. I do recall evidence of 10 fingerprint being on, I believe it would be, the 11 radio.
12 I am fairly confident I heard
13 conversations concerning or reports of 14 conversations concerning other forensic evidence
15 but I'm not -- it's not coming back to me. It's 16 not coming back to me. I'm doing my best.
17 BY MR. BOWMAN:
18 Q. You saw -- you indicated that in your
19 review of the records, you saw evidence that you
20 had become directly involved in one of the 21 judicial applications for --
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. -- an overhear.
24 Other than that, do you have specific

69

1 recollections of any steps that you took in the
2 course of the investigation prior to charging?
3 MS. EKL: I'm going to object to the form of 4 the question. It assumes facts not in evidence
5 unless I misheard it.
6 MR. BOWMAN: What did I do wrong?
7 MS. EKL: I believe you said other
8 investigative steps so that would be what I have 9 the quarrel with if that's what you said.
10 MR. BOWMAN: I think the question is okay.
11 I'll just restate it and maybe it's not okay.
12 But I think it's okay.
13 BY MR. BOWMAN:
14 Q. Other than your involvement with this 15 overhear application that is reflected in the 16 records, do you recall any other steps that you
17 personally took, if any, in the investigation
18 prior to charging?
19 MS. EKL: Same objection.
20 THE WITNESS: Well, I recall taking -- well,
21 I don't recall taking any steps in the 22 investigation unless your definition of 23 investigation would contemplate an eavesdrop
24 authorization.

70

1 And I do recall that particular step,
2 whether that's considered investigation or not.
3 And I don't have a specific
4 recollection of doing any other things
5 prosecutorial in connection with the police
6 conduct of the investigation.
7 BY MR. BOWMAN:
8 Q. Who made the decision to charge Beaman?
9 A. The fairest answer is I did. It didn't
10 -- the decision didn't originate with me but it
11 -- the decision ended with me.
12 Q. Who did you consult with prior to 13 making the decision?
14 A. Principally Mr. Souk. Ms. Griffin
15 would have most likely have been there in an 16 advisory capacity. I can't recall specifically
17 other than the fact that the three of us were 18 very close in terms of our assisting each other
19 in making very, very serious decisions.
20 Q. Did you consult with any law
21 enforcement personnel yourself before the 22 decision to charge Beaman was made?
23 A. Only to the extent that they were 24 furnishing us information as to what evidence

71

1 they had uncovered during their investigation.
2 Q. Well, the question is did you consult
3 with any law enforcement personnel prior to 4 making the decision? And by that I mean in 5 connection with the decisional process.
6 A. I can't specifically recall that I did.
7 If a police officer was present at the 8 time that then I would have said, okay, I think 9 we should charge, then I don't have a basis for 10 disputing that. But I don't believe I consulted
11 with a police as to what the proper decision
12 was.
13 Q. Well, make sure we understand each
14 other.
15 Do you remember that on May 16, a
16 meeting was conducted involving yourself,
17 Mr. Souk, Mr. Freesmeyer, Mr. Zayas, Mr. Taylor, 18 and --
19 A. Taylor, yes. I couldn't remember the 20 chief's name. Sorry for interrupting.
21 Q. And I think it was also Mr. Daniels if 22 I didn't state that name already.
23 Do you recall that meeting?
24 A. No.

1 A. I believe it's on the first floor.

2 Q. Normal Police Department is.

3 A. Right.

4 Q. And where is the City Hall located?

5 A. The entire building is the City Hall.

6 Q. Okay. So when you said you had that meeting, it

7 wasn't in the section reserved for the police department;

8 it was outside the police department.

9 A. That's correct.

10 Q. All right. And the Normal Police Department is 11 in a different building from the State's Attorney's

12 Office; is that correct?

13 A. That's correct.

14 Q. Okay. And you have no idea why you didn't have 15 the meeting in the Normal Police Department.

16 A. No.

17 Q. Had you ever had a meeting like that during an 18 investigation in the City Hall building in another

19 investigation?

20 A. No.

21 Q. So this is the first time?

22 A. For me.

23 Q. Was it the only time in your career?

24 A. Yes.

57

1 Q. What was discussed at that meeting?
2 A. The case.
3 Q. And what about the case?
4 A. Just the case in general, the merits of the 5 case.
6 Q. Was there any outcome to the meeting?
7 A. Yes.
8 Q. And what was that?
9 A. I believe the outcome was that Alan Beaman was 10 to be arrested.
11 Q. And who made that decision?
12 A. The final decision?
13 Q. Yes.
14 A. I don't really know who made the final decision.
15 Q. Well, who made the preliminary decision?
16 MS. BARTON: I'll object to form.
17 A. I really can't recall. I mean, are you talking 18 about one individual?
19 Q. Or several.
20 MS. BARTON: Objection to form.
21 A. I believe the consensus was that he be arrested.
22 Q. Consensus of whom?
23 A. All those in attendance.
24 Q. Who you previously listed; correct?

1           Have I got that right?

2           A.    I think that was the purpose of the 3 meeting, to see if there was anything from the 4 Normal Police Department to -- that would have 5 any impact on the decision, either, you know,
6 pro or con as to whether he should be charged.

7           Q.    So the representatives from the Normal
8 police, just to be clear, were the chief of 9 police, Mr. Taylor, the supervisor of the 10 investigation, Mr. Zayas, and Daniels and 11 Freesmeyer who at different points had been the 12 lead investigator in the case?

13          A.    I think at least those people were 14 there. I can't recall if there were others
15 also.

16          Q.    All right. And where did this meeting
17 take place?

18          A.    I don't remember.

19          Q.    As to whether it was in the state's 20 attorney's office or the Normal Police
21 Department, you don't recall?

22          A.    I don't remember.

23          Q.    How long did it last?

24          A.    I don't remember.

1 right?

2 MS. EKL: Objection. Form, foundation.

3 THE WITNESS: Well, all I can tell you, I was 4 shocked to find out that it was Brady material when that 5 ruling came down, because I didn't consider it to be
6 Brady material.

7 BY MR. BOWMAN:

8 Q. Right. But it would be inaccurate to say that
9 no reasonable person could consider it to be Brady
10 material, because seven reasonable people did, right?

11 MS. EKL: Objection. Form.

12 THE WITNESS: Yeah. I don't, I don't think I
13 phrased it that way, but.

14 MR. DiCIANNI: I don't think you did either.

15 THE WITNESS: You said maybe you misheard me.
16 Maybe you misheard me, because I don't think I phrased
17 it that way.

18 BY MR. BOWMAN:

19 Q. Okay. All right. That's fine.

20 A. This reasonable person didn't consider it to be
21 Brady material.

22 Q. All right. You were asked some questions about
23 the input that you received from the police officers
24 prior to and at the time of the decision to file charges
25 against Beaman. Would it be fair to say that that input

448

1 in effect was, in addition to their comments in the May 2 16 meeting, was the sum total of their investigative 3 efforts over the course of the period of time between 4 August and May of '94?

5 A. You want to try that again? I'm not sure I
6 understand.

7 Q. I'll try it again, sure. Their input in effect
8 was not just what they said at the May 16 meeting, their 9 input included all the things that they'd done in the 10 investigation up till that point in time, their input
11 into the charging decision; is that a fair summary?

12 A. Well, I think the totality of their 13 investigation, plus whatever might have been said at the 14 meeting was taken into account, yes.

15 Q. That's what I was asking. Were you, are you
16 aware, sir, of evidence in the record regarding Murray
17 placing a phone call to Lockmiller shortly before her
18 death and suggesting that Lockmiller come over to visit
19 him at a point when Swaine was present in Lockmiller's
20 apartment?

21 MS. EKL: Objection. Form.

22 THE WITNESS: I'm not, I'm not recalling that.

TIMOTHY JOHN FREESMEYER

having been first duly sworn, was examined upon oral interrogatories and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY MR. SOUK:

Q Detective Freesmeyer, remind you you're still under oath from your testimony earlier today in the grand jury in another case. For the record, would you state your name?

A Yes, Timothy John Freesmeyer.

Q Are you same Detective Freesmeyer who previously testified in this case, People versus Alan Beaman before the grand jury last week?

A Yes I am.

Q Now I want to first go over the crime scene that relates to the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller.

was any injury to the genitalia or the anus?

A She was not able to make that determination due to the decomposition of the body. The body had been there for approximately three days, so was unable to tell.

Q Was the state of decomposition basically consistent with what we'll get into in a minute, placing the time of death Wednesday early afternoon?

A Yes. It was consistent with our frame time.

Q Did the Doctor take samples to be sent to the crime lab, hair and blood and fingerprint samples and swabs of the vagina and anus?

A Yes she did.

Q All typical things that are done in an autopsy on a case of this type, correct?

A That's correct. To cover all bases as much as possible.

Q Those are sent, they're not analyzed by the doctor but sent to the Illinois State Police Crime Lab, is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Without going into individual details, were the other residents of the apartment building shortly after the discovery of the body, in the next few days, questioned extensively?

A Yes. Actually while the crime scene technician was in processing the scene, I waited outside for people to come home. I was able to make contact with the majority of the people who lived in that apartment. And they were subsequently asked to come to the station and statements were taken within several days.

Q Would it be a fair summary of those interviews that all of them produced no eyewitnesses to the crime and no information that turned out be particularly helpful in the investigation?

A That's correct.

Q Now in establishing what is believed to be the time of her death, I want to ask you a few questions about that. First as to Morgan Keefe, the young lady who found her, I take it that was a college friend of hers?

A Yes. She is an ISU student also.

Q Could you tell us what Miss Keefe said first about the last time that she had seen Jennifer alive?

A She stated that she went out with Jennifer Tuesday night, the night prior to her death. They went out to see a movie I believe, and then Jennifer dropped

1 Beaman?

2 A. I'm not recalling that.

3 Q. Can you rule it out that he ever said that to you?

4 A. Well, you know, I find, Mr. Urdangen, as I grow older,
5 my memory is not always what I would like it to be. I can't 6 rule it out. I think that some other people might have some 7 better memories about certain things. But we -- during the 8 course of this investigation, which went on for a number of 9 months, from August till the arrest in May and then even beyond
10 that, but leading up to the decision to arrest Mr. Beaman, there
11 was several meetings of the people involved in this 12 investigation, which included myself and a number of police
13 officers would have been in on it, and I believe Detective
14 Daniels. I do not recall anyone raising a strong objection, if 15 you will, to the arrest and charging of Mr. Beaman.

16 Q. Do you recall if Detective Daniels ever suggested that 17 other suspects should be looked at more closely before an 18 indictment is sought?

19 A. I don't remember that.

20 Q. Have you read or followed the views of Detective
21 Daniels about this case since the conviction?

22 A. Somewhat. I saw -- well, I saw something in your 23 attachments about an interview I think he had done on TV, which 24 I don't believe I saw at the time. And then there was something

1 Am I correct about that?

2 A. Yes.

3 Q. There was a colloquy with the judge, a very brief one,
4 that I just want to call your attention to from that motion in 5 limine. Bear with me for a minute. Here it is, I found it. It
6 was in the February motion in limine, pretrial hearing. And 7 there was essentially this question and answer. The court was 8 asking you: Is it your position, Mr. Souk, that there will not
9 be evidence in this record at the time of trial that Mr. Beu
10 could argue appropriately to the jury, as he suggested, that he 11 just may argue at the conclusion of the case that his suggestion
12 is that there is evidence, that there will be evidence presented 13 at trial by which a third party might be found to be responsible 14 for the acts resulting in the death of the victim. Are you
15 suggesting that the evidence does not exist?

16 Your response: As to a specific third party?

17 The Court says: Right.

18 Your response: Be it Mr. Swaine or anybody else?

19 The Court says: That's correct.

20 You say: I am suggesting that I know of no such 21 evidence that would give it the kind of connection that this 22 case law calls for.

23 Does that ring a bell?

24 A. Uh-huh. In fact, I have read it recently, yeah.

C10109

1 Q. Did you ever -- sorry to repeat this, but just so the
2 record is clear, you have looked at exhibits in our submissions
3 of the polygrapher's impressions?

4 A. I saw a typewritten report and then some graphs and
5 some handwritten notes and so forth.

6 Q. So as you sit here today, your statement is that you
7 had never seen those pretrial?

8 A. I don't have any recollection of having seen them.
9 When I reviewed the State's Attorney's Office file, I didn't see
10 any indication they were over in there. Certainly they are not 11 in discovery. If I had received them, they would have been in 12 discovery.

13 Q. Why?

14 A. Well, I provided everything in discovery. If you go
15 talk to Mrs. Dommick, my co-counsel, she will tell you that
16 those were my clear explicit instructions that we don't play
17 games with discovery. If we get something, we provide it. If
18 the police send it over, we provide it.

19 Q. That's fine. I guess the question is with reference
20 to the significance of the polygraph paperwork that you have
21 read. Had you known that, that as the examiner concluded Murray
22 had attempted to manipulate the polygraph results, would that 23 have been a significant fact for you in your consideration of 24 other suspects?

C10118

1 A. Well, if I had seen it I think I would have probably
2 asked some questions about it. I mean, if you read the report
3 it's a little different than when I first read in the pleading
4 in this matter. I thought there was either a failed or an
5 inconclusive polygraph. In reading the report, it turns out
6 there was a polygraph that was never completed. And certainly I
7 would have been interested in what the polygrapher had to say or 8 what had happened. It's a strange report. It's different than 9 any I think I have ever seen in terms of apparently didn't get 10 through the entire process. So it's not an opinion that the guy
11 was lying, it's not even an inconclusive. It's an incomplete.
12 I would have found it of interest and asked some questions I
13 think, yeah.

14 Q. Well, so I guess to cut through then, are you saying 15 that from what you have read, where the polygrapher says that he 16 was manipulating the polygraph, that would have been -- would 17 that or would that not have affected your decision on whether or 18 not John Murray as a possible suspect should be evidence in this 19 case?

20 A. Well, I think that was fairly early in the 21 investigation. I would have asked some questions and looked at 22 it more and, you know, polygraph evidence, while totally 23 inadmissible, is useful for investigative purposes. In fact, we 24 used it in this case for investigative purposes.

1 Watch your step, please.

2 MR. URDANGEN: Your Honor, I'm having some voice
3 problems. Do you mind if I drink water at the same time --

4 THE COURT: No.

5 MR. URDANGEN: -- or as I need it?

6 May I proceed?

7 THE COURT: Mr. Urdangen.

8 TIMOTHY JOHN FREESMEYER

9 having been first duly sworn, was 10 examined and testified as follows:

11 DIRECT EXAMINATION

12 BY MR. URDANGEN:

13 Q. State your name, please.

14 A. Timothy John Freesmeyer.

15 Q. Could you spell your last name.

16 A. F-r-e-e-s-m-e-y-e-r.

17 Q. And where do you reside, sir?

18 A. Macomb, Illinois.

19 Q. And what do you do there?

20 A. I'm self-employed.

21 Q. What do you do?

22 A. I run a corporation for web-based training.

23 Q. And how large is that corporation?

24 A. My wife and I are the only two full employees, and I

1 examined you, correct?

2 A. Yes, he did.

3 Q. Did you give these answers to these questions:

4 "Isn't it true that the route that you drove to make
5 that comparison is a route that you simply selected as being
6 perhaps the most direct route between the two locations?

7 Answer: Yes, sir, that is correct."

8 Did you give that answer to that question?

9 A. That would have been my answer, sir, yes.

10 Q. Was that true when you answered it?

11 A. When I answered it, yes, it would have been true.

12 Q. Is it not true today?

13 A. That answer would -- would still be true.

14 Q. Thank you. Now, staying with that, sir, when you
15 were testifying at the trial, you, as you sat on the witness
16 chair, knew that you had done several tests of driving in your 17 investigation, right?

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 Q. In fact, you'd done more than -- you'd done several 20 tests of driving between the bank and the residence, right?

21 A. There is only one listed in my report.

22 Q. I know that. I know that, sir, but I'm asking you,
23 you knew that you had done several or at least more than one
24 while you were testifying; isn't that right?

1 A. I can't -- I can't recall independently if I had
2 done more than one trip between the bank and Alan's residence.

3 Q. Well, as you sit there today, you know that to be 4 the case, don't you, that you took more than one?

5 A. Sir, I believe that I took a route around the bypass
6 from the bank, but I do not see that in my reports; and,
7 therefore, to ask me to testify to that, I don't recall if I
8 -- I don't recall that.

9 Q. Here's my question to you.

10 A. Yes, sir.

11 Q. Did you do a test of the bypass route from the bank
12 to Alan's house?

13 A. Sir, I believe I did. But when I reviewed my 14 reports for this testimony, I did not see that in my reports.

15 Q. Sir, you did testify in the grand jury prior to the 16 trial; did you not?

17 A. Yes, I did.

18 Q. You gave extensive testimony. Mr. Souk was 19 giving -- asking you questions, and you were giving answers?

20 A. Yes, sir.

21 Q. And you were under oath, as well; were you not?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. There was no defense lawyer there, was there, for 24 the questioning, was there?

1 A. I don't recall if there was, sir.

2 Q. Sir, in the grand jury, did Mr. Souk ask you this
3 question and did you give this answer under oath:

4 "Question: When you drove it the other way, did you
5 -- from Bell Federal -- if you go a couple of miles south, do
6 you get to this Route 20 going along the south side of town?

7 Answer: Yes. Bell Federal is on the corner of 8 Newburg and Alpine. If you take Alpine straight south to 20
9 and around, that would be probably the quickest route to Mr.
10 Beaman's residence. And that took me 25 minutes. So, once
11 again, 25 added to the 10:11 would put me there at 10:36. The 12 calls were at 10:37 and 10:39."

13 Did you testify that way in the grand jury?

14 A. Yes, sir.

15 Q. Isn't it true that you tested the bypass route?

16 A. Yes, sir.

17 Q. And is it also true you never prepared a report of 18 the result?

19 A. Yes, sir.

20 Q. By the way, sir, when I took your deposition you had 21 no trouble recalling that grand jury testimony, did you?

22 A. Sir, I believe you shared that with me at the 23 deposition; did you not?

24 Q. Didn't you call to my attention at an earlier

1 occasion that you had driven a second route other than just
2 through town?

3 A. I may have, sir.

4 Q. After you drove the bypass route and did your -- how 5 did you time yourself on the bypass route?

6 A. Sir, you've asked that question before.

7 Q. I'm asking you about the bypass route.

8 A. It would have been either by my watch or stopwatch,
9 and I do not recall as I sit here today which I would have 10 used.

11 Q. Now, you reported a time here. How -- and did you
12 put that -- what -- did you put that on a piece of paper or 13 record it in some way?

14 A. Yes, I did.

15 Q. Okay. When you testified in the grand jury, did you
16 review your records of the bypass route time trial?

17 A. I believe I would have.

18 Q. Okay. Where are those records?

19 A. Sir, those typically would have been --

20 Q. Not typically, sir. Sorry to interrupt.

21 A. I don't know. In answer to your question, I do not
22 know.

23 Q. Who was with you when you did the bypass route?

24 A. I may have been by myself, sir.

1 Q. And you may have been with?

2 A. I may have been with Lieutenant Brown. He did one
3 trip up with me.

4 Q. Did Mr. Souk go with you on any of these time
5 trials?

6 A. I do not recall.

7 Q. Can you rule it out?

8 A. I cannot rule it out. I know he took one trip with 9 me to Rockford, but I do not recall if we did times at that 10 point.

11 Q. Did you discuss after your time trial on the bypass
12 route the results with Mr. Souk?

13 A. Yes, I would have.

14 Q. When and where?

15 A. Probably would have been in his office.

16 Q. Not probably, sir. I'm sorry.

17 A. I don't know exactly, sir.

18 Q. Now, when you testified at the trial, did you 19 disclose to the jury through your answers that you drove the 20 bypass route?

21 A. I don't recall if I did or not, sir.

22 Q. Let me ask you if you gave these answers to these 23 questions. Again, it's by Mr. Souk -- I mean by Mr. Beu. And 24 I have to repeat a question to give it in context.

1 Question by Mr. Beu, series of questions here:

2 "Isn't it true that the route that you drove to make
3 that comparison is a route that you simply selected as being
4 perhaps the most direct route between the two locations?

5 Yes, sir, that is correct.

6 Question: This is not a route that Mr. Beaman told
7 you specifically he took to go between those points, is it?

8 Answer: I don't recall he told me what route he 9 took. He just said he went to the bank and back.

10 Question: So you chose to select a route, did you
11 not, that you took right through the heart of downtown
12 Rockford?

13 Answer: As you stated earlier, I took the most 14 direct route.

15 Question: Does that -- does not that route take you
16 directly through the heart of downtown Rockford?

17 Answer: Yes.

18 As opposed to going down Meridian Road to the 19 high-speed bypass over to Alpine Road and then up north to 20 Bell Federal?

21 Answer: Yes, that would be correct."

22 Did you give those answers to those questions?

23 A. Yes, I did, sir.

24 Q. What did you think Mr. Beu was referring to when he

1 said "as opposed to going down the Meridian Road to the 2 high-speed bypass"? What was he mean -- what did he mean?

3 A. He asked if that route was an alternative route to 4 the direct route.

5 Q. Did you -- and he said: As opposed to it, you drove 6 through town, right?

7 A. Yes.

8 Q. But, in fact, you drove through town in addition to 9 that, isn't that correct?

10 A. Yes.

11 Q. Did you indicate anywhere in your testimony that you
12 drove that route during the trial?

13 A. I don't recall, sir, if I did or not.

14 Q. Now, after you gave that testimony and you were done
15 with cross examination, did you discuss this issue with Mr.
16 Souk about the routes that you took?

17 A. I don't recall, sir.

18 Q. Do you recall whether or not Mr. Souk sat you down
19 and said we are going to have to make -- we are going to have 20 to correct that testimony?

21 A. I don't recall, sir.

22 Q. Did you ever correct it?

23 A. I do not recall, sir.

24 Q. The time trials that you prepared, that you did, the

1 and gotten into the apartment by noon, according to your
2 theory, right?

3 A. Or thereabouts.

4 Q. Left by 12:15 or thereabouts, right?

5 A. Correct. But a lot of this case depends, of course,
6 on what you ended up believing about when Mrs. Beaman got
7 home.

8 Q. That's right. And we'll get to that.

9 In fact, the jury needed to believe these two 10 things, correct me if I'm wrong, or they needed to come to 11 these two conclusions: One, Alan Beaman did not make the 12 calls; two, Carol Beaman did make the calls, correct?

13 A. I would say they would have had to conclude that to 14 return a guilty verdict in this case.

15 Q. Timothy Freesmeyer worked very closely with you on 16 this case, right?

17 A. He did, yes.

18 Q. And you knew that the time trials were crucial to 19 your theory of prosecution, correct?

20 A. Yes.

21 Q. And he conducted -- he, and he alone, conducted
22 those time trials, right?

23 A. I -- I think I was with him on one trip to Rockford.
24 But I think, as I indicated to you at deposition, I'm -- my

NATURE OF THE CASE

The wrongful conviction of Alan Wayne Beaman is a stain on the history of Illinois. This case will decide whether the men who caused that conviction through a dishonest and biased investigation face a trial. Do we, a state with a national reputation for convicting the innocent, ignore this evil, or do we allow a jury to decide whether to condemn it?

This Court is familiar with the criminal case against Mr. Beaman, which resulted in his wrongful conviction and incarceration for over a dozen years. The Court reversed the conviction unanimously in 2008, finding that the State hid evidence and underscoring “the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against [Mr. Beaman].” People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 81 (2008). The prosecution then dropped all charges, Mr. Beaman won a certificate of innocence based on DNA evidence, and the governor pardoned him, noting his innocence. Appendix (“A.”) 340-342, 2961, 3377.

Mr. Beaman brought this suit, sounding principally in malicious prosecution, and named as defendants the detectives responsible for his wrongful conviction. A.308-337. The circuit court granted summary judgment against Mr. Beaman, A.27-33, and the appellate court affirmed. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527. This Court granted Mr. Beaman’s petition for leave to appeal.

ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

The tort of malicious prosecution consists of five elements: (1) the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant; (2) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) the presence of malice; and (5) damages resulting to the plaintiff.

Swick v. Liataud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 512 (1996). The issues presented for review concern the first four of these elements:

1. Commencement or continuance prong: Is this element satisfied if police officers charged with an investigation play a significant role in commencing or continuing the prosecution of an innocent person, but claim not to have pressured, influenced, or lied to the prosecutor?

2. Indicative of innocence prong: Did the proceedings against Mr. Beaman conclude in a manner indicating his innocence, where this Court unanimously vacated his conviction, he won a certificate of innocence, and the governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence?

3. Lack of probable cause prong: Does lack of probable cause against Mr. Beaman present an issue for the jury given the paucity of evidence against him, his lack of opportunity to commit a murder 130 miles from his home, and the existence of more viable suspects?

4. Malice Prong: Does the malice of the defendants present an issue for the jury where the defendants immediately selected Mr. Beaman as the killer and then concealed evidence, manipulated evidence, and misled a grand jury in order to secure his wrongful conviction?

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Introduction and Summary

As the summer of 1993 gave way to fall, Alan Beaman was home in Rockford, where he spent the latter half of the summer catching up with childhood friends, working nights at his uncle's grocery store, singing and playing guitar at his family's church, and preparing to start his senior year at Illinois Wesleyan University. A.951-952, 2900. On August 28, Jennifer Lockmiller, Mr. Beaman's former girlfriend, was found dead in her apartment in Normal, some 130 miles away. A.38.

Defendant Timothy Freesmeyer, a detective in the Normal Police Department, immediately selected Mr. Beaman as the primary suspect. A.1576. Aided by Defendants David Warner and Frank Zayas, Freesmeyer conducted an investigation to reach a predetermined result: Beaman did it. See infra at 4-5, 10-14. The defendants lied in court, hid a polygraph report inculcating a steroid-abusing drug dealer who beat women, manipulated driving times to discredit Mr. Beaman's alibi, brushed aside exculpatory evidence, and refused to conduct a serious investigation of the viable suspects. See infra at 11-14.

It worked. Freesmeyer "solved" the murder of a college student in a small town and testified as the prosecution's star witness at trial. A.2971, 2975. He walked out of the Lockmiller case with a sergeant's chevrons and a glowing recommendation from the lead prosecutor, and he now runs a law enforcement consulting business. A.1409-10, 2971, 3207. Meanwhile, the man who killed and raped Ms. Lockmiller remains on the streets. Alan Beaman—slight, scrawny, and innocent—spent nearly 13 years in prison, while his friends completed their education, married their spouses, and raised their children.

B. The Murder

Jennifer Lockmiller was last seen alive at noon on August 25, 1993. A.46-47. Three days later, her body was found in the bedroom of her apartment. A.38. Her shirt was pulled up exposing her breasts, her shorts and underwear were pulled down, a pair of scissors protruded from her chest, and an alarm clock cord was tied around her neck. A.38, 41.

C. A Witness Makes a Guess, and Freesmeyer Targets Beaman

On Day One of the investigation, Defendant Freesmeyer, who was to become the lead investigator in the case, selected Mr. Beaman as the primary suspect. A.1576. Morgan Keefe, an acquaintance of the victim, had discovered the body and told the police Mr. Beaman might be the killer, though she had no personal knowledge of the crime. A.1374. She was “guessing.” A.1374.

On the first day of the investigation, no alibies had been investigated, there were no eyewitness accounts, no physical evidence linked Mr. Beaman to the crime, and the autopsy had not been completed. A.3213, 3305-07. The crime scene suggested a killer of considerable strength and power; Mr. Beaman was thin and small. A.1360, 3221-22.

Lockmiller lived on a busy thoroughfare in a transient college town; this produced, in the words of Defendant Zayas, the overall head of the detective division, “an open case” with “so many possibilities.” A.1353. The victim might have been killed by an intimate partner. Or a man she had recently met. A.1716-18, 1723-25, 1731, 1733. Or a would-be burglar she discovered in the apartment. A.1358-62. Zayas summed it up:

Q. So there were a lot of different factors that pointed to a potentially broad range of suspects, right?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

A.1353.

The scene pointed to a stranger because Lockmiller’s apartment, usually tidy, was in disarray. A.1359, 1372-73. Someone appeared to have rummaged through the closet, A.1359, left food and dishes out on the kitchen counter, and tossed a garbage bag on the living room couch. A.72-73, 1359-60, 1372-73, 1594-95. One of Lockmiller’s earrings was on the floor near the door, and a shoe was near the bedroom. A.1360. The scene suggested that the assailant attacked Ms. Lockmiller at the entry to her apartment, overpowered her, forced her into the bedroom, raped her, and killed her. A.1360.

Ms. Lockmiller encountered a cast of potential killers through excessive drinking, heroin use, and partying. A.1288, 1292. A new paramour had moved in with her two or three weeks before the murder. A.1727-28. She had broken up with another man who wanted her back. The two planned to see each other two days after the murder. A.1729-30.

Late at night on the first day of the investigation, Mr. Beaman agreed to a lengthy interview by two detectives, voluntarily accompanied them to a police station, agreed to have the interview taped, declared his innocence throughout the interview, and discontinued the interview only when it became highly accusatory. A.2900-2948. None of this mattered. Freesmeyer admitted that, within hours of the discovery of the body, he had already designated Alan Beaman as the primary suspect and likely killer. A.1576.

D. Alan Beaman and Jennifer Lockmiller

Alan Beaman was an unlikely murder suspect. He grew up in Rockford in a devout Methodist family. A.948-951. His father worked as an engineer. A.944. His mother taught math at the local high school. A.943. Since childhood, he was a music lover. A.948-951. He was in the high school marching band. Like his parents, Mr. Beaman was active in the local Methodist parish, where he played guitar for the youth group. A.948-951. As a student at Illinois Wesleyan University in Normal, Mr. Beaman majored in drama. A.355. He had no criminal history.

Mr. Beaman had ended his romantic relationship with Ms. Lockmiller over a month before the murder. A.2951-52. The relationship was unhappy, while it lasted. Ms.

Lockmiller was intimate with other men, including Michael Swaine, Mr. Beaman's roommate and close friend. A.1752, 3314-15. The couple fought. Mr. Beaman displayed temper more than once, raising his voice at Ms. Lockmiller and, on two occasions when Ms. Lockmiller was being unfaithful, kicking open the door to her apartment. A.1752, 3314-16. There was no indication that Mr. Beaman ever directed violence at any person, and police were informed that he was "not physical." A.2950.

A few days before her death, Ms. Lockmiller called Mr. Beaman many times, trying to restart their relationship. A.1044, 1046-48. Mr. Beaman refused. A.1046-48. He had begun seeing someone else. A.1145.

E. Suspects Ignored

The defendants decided to ignore every avenue but one—the murderer was an intimate partner. A.3242. They did not bother to find out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area, A.3243, 3246, or to interview all of the people Lockmiller had been in contact with in the days and hours prior to her death, A.1650-51, 2584. Other detectives on the case did not share this strange fixation on Mr. Beaman. A.1970, 2583, 2293-94, 1354.

The defendants also ignored other potential suspects. While they confirmed alibis for two suspects, Stacey Gates and Michael Swaine, they ignored the rest. A.3231, 3242. As one example of the many potential suspects, Ms. Lockmiller flirted with and rejected several men on August 21, four days before the murder, when she drank at various bars. At one of the bars, Spanky's, Ms. Lockmiller met a long-haired stranger. A.1716-17. Lockmiller, described by her friend as "the queen of scamming drinks off guys," flirted with the stranger, and then "kind of walked off." A.1723. This man called Ms. Lockmiller two days before the murder. He asked Ms. Lockmiller on a date and was rebuffed. A.1725, 1731. But this man kept calling her. A.1733. After Lockmiller and her friends left Spanky's and were en route to another bar, they encountered two other men, one of whom gave Lockmiller his phone number, writing it on a piece of paper with lipstick that he borrowed from Lockmiller's friend. A.1717-18, 1725. Lockmiller threw the piece of paper away. A.1725. On the day before the murder, one of Lockmiller's friends encountered these two men again. A.1718. They asked why Lockmiller had not called them, and told Lockmiller's friend to have Lockmiller call them. A.1718. Investigators did not attempt to locate these potential suspects. A.1653-54, 2867-70.

An even more likely suspect was John Murray, who had an on-again, off-again sexual relationship with Ms. Lockmiller and was seeking to rekindle the relationship when she was killed. A.1733, 1752, 1757, 1764-75. Murray bragged to police: "[S]he completely like wanted to go out with me still. Like if she was alive today she would be calling me wanting to go back out with me." A.1752.

The crime scene suggested that the murder would have required a person who, unlike Mr. Beaman, was of "considerable strength and power." A.1360. Murray was a frightening, physically imposing man. A.1773, 1775, 1777 (stating that Murray "was big. He was big and long, curly dark hair and just—I don't know how to say it more than he was kind of a scary person"; describing Murray as "someone that could be explosive in his anger"; stating that Murray was "physically large" and "scary").

Murray was a drug dealer, and he sold drugs to Ms. Lockmiller. A.1795-96. In fact, she owed him money for drugs at the time of her death. A.1795. Although Murray's story was that Lockmiller owed him approximately $20, Detective Daniels, a member of the investigative team, thought that she might have owed Murray more money for drugs. A.2348-49. This could have added to Murray's motive to kill her. A.1824, 2348-49.

The investigators learned that Murray beat women. A.1729-30. On October 7, 1994, Murray beat his girlfriend, Deborah Mackoway, pinning her to the floor and elbowing her repeatedly in the chest. A.2544. The night before, Murray had grabbed her and bruised her. A.2545. He beat her, she reported, "on a continual basis." A.2543.

Murray abused steroids both before and after the Lockmiller murder, and these drugs made him violent and erratic. A.2558, 2559, 2547. Murray had been using steroids (and cocaine) in 1993, the year Ms. Lockmiller was killed. A.2558-59.<sup>1</sup> In 1994, Murray was again experimenting with street steroid injections, making his behavior "unexplainable," as Mackoway put it. A.2547. He gave her a black eye while on the drugs. A.2547. Murray was violent toward other women as well. He slapped a different girlfriend, and may have abused yet a third. A.1773, 2561.

During the investigation, Murray lied to investigators about several matters, including his whereabouts on the day of the murder. During his first interview with police, Murray claimed that he left Normal and drove home at 3:00 p.m. on August 24, the day before the murder. A.1741. Mackoway, however, told investigators that Murray did not leave town until after 4:20 p.m. on August 25, the day of the murder. A.2563. Furthermore, no one could account for Murray's whereabouts on August 25 between when Mackoway left for work in the morning and 2 p.m. A.2563-64. Murray also lied to investigators about several other matters, including the fact that he sold Ms. Lockmiller drugs, A.1746, 1795-

<sup>1</sup> The appellate court incorrectly stated that "Murray began taking steroids in January 1994 and he had begun acting erratically." Op. ¶ 14. In fact, police reports show that Murray was also taking steroids in 1993, before the murder. A.2558-59.

96, drove over to her apartment to collect a drug debt shortly before she was killed, A.1738-40, 1791, and was having sex with her while she was dating Mr. Beaman (not just “talking,” as Murray originally claimed). A.1744, 1752, 2347-48.

Murray refused to comply with a polygrapher’s instructions during a lie detector test about whether he murdered Jennifer Lockmiller. The polygrapher reported: “After being advised several times to follow directions, the subject informed this examiner that he was not able to comply. Subsequently, the subject was dismissed from this laboratory.” A.2586. Two decades later, during his deposition in this case, John Murray refused to answer any questions about his role in the Lockmiller murder, invoking his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. A.1769-70.

F. Warner Hides Evidence

The Murray polygraph report was concealed from the prosecutor. A.3268-69 Defendant Warner received the report from the polygrapher, and was the last person to have the report before it disappeared. A.2744-45. Warner claims to have handed the Murray polygraph report to Detective Daniels, but Daniels has no recollection of it. A.2239, 2477-78, 2535, 2744-45. Warner’s story that he gave the report to Daniels (and no one else) is not consistent with the three-prong policy he was trained to follow upon receipt of such a report: (1) ensure that the head of the detective division received a copy, (2) submit the report to central records, and (3) disseminate copies to all investigators on the case. A.1354-55. Warner failed to perform all three of these mandatory steps. A.2744-45. Many years later, the suppression of evidence incriminating Murray led this Court to vacate Mr. Beaman’s conviction. See infra at 15-16.

G. Attempts To Obtain a Confession Fail

Defendants tried several times to obtain an incriminating admission from Mr. Beaman, all to no avail. A.1305-06, 1308-11, 1320, 1326, 1328-29, 1334-35. Freesmeyer spoke with Mr. Beaman many times during the nine-month investigation of the Lockmiller homicide, often while wearing a wire. A.1320, 1326, 1328-29, 1334-35. The defendants convinced Mr. Beaman's friend and roommate to wear a wire and engage Mr. Beaman in two separate conversations about the murder. A.1305-06, 1308-11, 2224-27, 3328-44, 3345-54, 3320-21, 3322-23. Mr. Beaman made no incriminating statements. He also maintained his innocence over a series of interrogations in which defendants insisted he was the killer. A. 1316, 2613-14, 2900-2948. Freesmeyer even threatened Mr. Beaman with the death penalty if he refused to confess. A.1318. None of it worked.

H. No Physical or Eyewitness Evidence

No probative physical evidence connected Mr. Beaman to the crime. Two of his fingerprints were found on the alarm clock at the crime scene, but that fact lacked evidentiary significance. A.1587, 2332-33, 2967, 2969, 3253, 3266. Mr. Beaman had repeatedly been an overnight visitor in Ms. Lockmiller's apartment and used the alarm clock. A.874-75, 953, 2332-33. Michael Swaine, whom the investigators quickly eliminated as a suspect, had also stayed overnight at Lockmiller's apartment and used the alarm clock. Four of Swaine's prints were found on the alarm clock, as well as an unidentified fingerprint. A.3324-25. Apart from the irrelevant fingerprints, there was no other physical evidence that linked Mr. Beaman to the crime. A.1356-57.

Lacking serious evidence, the defendants turned to collecting dirt about Mr. Beaman's relationship with Ms. Lockmiller. Mr. Beaman had yelled at her, been jealous, become angry over her infidelity, and called her crude names, A.1764, 3297, but no witness (and no other evidence) placed him in Normal, as opposed to Rockford, where he was home with his parents, on the day of the murder. A.3226.

I. Freesmeyer Manipulates Time Trials

Freesmeyer stuck with his Day One guess—Beaman did it—even when an alibi made that guess impossible. A.1576, 2620. A security video showed Mr. Beaman at his bank in Rockford, some 130 miles from Ms. Lockmiller’s apartment, at 10:11 a.m. on the day of the murder. A.1312. At 10:37 and 10:39 a.m., two calls were placed from the Beaman family residence to Mr. Beaman’s youth minister. A.3285. When Mr. Beaman’s mother returned home at approximately 2:15 p.m. that afternoon, Mr. Beaman was in his room asleep, with the family dog lying in the adjacent hallway. R.3271–78. It would have been impossible for Mr. Beaman to leave the family home in Rockford following the 10:39 a.m. call, drive the 130 miles to Normal, kill and rape Ms. Lockmiller, and return 130 miles to his bedroom prior to his mother’s 2:15 p.m. return. A.2955–59.

Freesmeyer therefore set out to create evidence that Mr. Beaman did not make the calls. A.1339, 3219-20. Scrupulously adhering to speed limits and using a downtown route on city streets—not the “bypass route” used by locals—Freesmeyer purported to establish that Mr. Beaman did not have time to get home from the bank in time to make the calls. A.1339, 3219-20. On the other hand, taking the bypass route—even while never exceeding the speed limit—would have given Mr. Beaman ample time to make the calls. A.2958, 3219-20. In fact, Freesmeyer did a time trial using the bypass route, which proved this very point, even while he drove the entire route at 55 miles per hour on a four-lane interstate highway. A.3219-20. But he omitted the exculpatory time trial from his detailed police report and avoided telling the jury about it at trial. A.1339, 2648–50, 3070-71. Not so for the slower time trial that suggested Mr. Beaman could not have made the calls. Freesmsyer recorded that in his report, and he let the jury know about it. A.1339, 3070-71.

No one other than Mr. Beaman could have made the calls. His father was undeniably at work. A.957. Plaintiff's mother, Carol Beaman, also stated that she did not make the calls. A.3279. And she could not have made them. Records confirm that Carol Beaman signed her elderly mother in at the convalescence facility where she was a resident at 10 a.m. that morning, after she returned from taking her mother on an outing. A.2572-73. The facility was more than ten miles from the Beaman residence. A.955. Carol Beaman spent 20 to 30 minutes settling her mother back into her room and then went to a Walmart—which was directly across the street—where she shopped for school supplies and stood in a check-out line. A.2574-75, 2577–81, 3279–80. A receipt proved that Carol Beaman checked out of Walmart at 11:10 a.m., meaning that she could not have made the crucial 10:37 a.m. call because she was at the Walmart across town. A.2577. Mr. Beaman was the only remaining person with access to the phone. A.3280.

Carol Beaman stated that she naturally went from the convalescence facility to the Walmart right across the street, but that did not fit with Freesmeyer's theory that she went home in between the facility and the Walmart to call the youth minister. A.2576. Freesmeyer decided that she must have driven 10 miles home, made a call, and then driven ten miles back to the Walmart. A.2660.

Even assuming Mr. Beaman did not make the calls, committing the murder would have been nearly impossible. That scenario would have Mr. Beaman leaving the Rockford bank around 10:11, driving 130 miles to Ms. Lockmiller's apartment in Normal, committing a rape and murder, driving 130 miles back to his family home in Rockford, and returning before his mother's arrival at 2:15. In testing this scenario, Freesmeyer first observed the speed limit, but the trip took four hours and eleven minutes—more time than the four hours and four minutes between the bank video at 10:11 and Carol Beaman's confirmation of Mr. Beaman's presence home in Rockford at 2:15. A.1339. To discredit the alibi, Freesmeyer then drove much faster, at an average speed of 75 miles per hour, 10 miles per hour over the posted speed limit. A.1345-46. Freesmeyer was able to make the trip in three hours and 45 minutes. A.1345-46. Mr. Beaman could not have coaxed his Ford Escort to travel at such a high average speed for well over 100 miles: the car frequently broke down, could sustain high speeds, and was described by one passenger as a "piece of junk." Even then, Mr. Beaman would have had a 20-minute window to commit the rape and murder. A.1345-46, 1789–90, 3284–84. Of course, this scenario also requires Mr. Beaman's mother to have placed the calls, meaning she left the convalescence facility, drove 10 miles home to make two telephone calls, drove 10 miles back to Walmart (directly across from the convalescence facility), and then drove home again.

J. Defendants Ignore a Witness who Exonerates Mr. Beaman

In addition to dismissing Mr. Beaman's alibi, the defendants ignored critical evidence that exculpated him. David Singley lived in the second floor apartment directly across the hall from Ms. Lockmiller. Singley told the investigators that, as he arrived home from class at approximately 2 p.m. on the day of the murder, he heard someone quickly slam shut the door to Ms. Lockmiller's apartment. A.3300-01, 3304. He heard the stereo on in Ms. Lockmiller's apartment. A.3300-01, 3304. About 10 minutes later, Singley heard Lockmiller's door open and shut again, followed by the sound of footsteps going down the stairs and the outside door to the building being opened. A.3300-01, 3304.

Singley's information established either that Lockmiller was alive at 2 p.m. or, if she was already dead, that her killer was still present in the apartment. In either event, it would have been impossible for Mr. Beaman to kill Ms. Lockmiller. All agree that he was in Rockford, some 130 miles away, no later than 2:15 p.m. A.87.

K. Beaman Arrested: "I Think We Needed To Work on it Some More"

Mr. Beaman was arrested in May 1994. A.1335. Five months later, Zayas admitted that that the evidence was still not sufficient for the case to be ready for prosecution:

Q. Were you certain that Alan Beaman killed Jennifer Lockmiller at any point prior to your retirement?

A. No. I don't think we had all the information needed at the time when I left. That was still in limbo.

....

A. I don't think the case was ready to be sent to the State [for prosecution] yet. I think we needed to work on it some more.

A.1356.

L. Freesmeyer Delivers the Indictment and Conviction

Following Mr. Beaman's arrest, Freesmeyer moved into the State's Attorney's Office and worked on the case full time through Mr. Beaman's trial and conviction.

A.2595. He was the principal witness before the grand jury and testified over the course of three days. A.3217, 3223. He lied about alternative suspects, particularly Murray, claiming that investigators had not "locate[d] any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller." A.3218. The grand jury indicted Mr. Beaman.

At trial, Freesmeyer, now a sergeant, testified as the star witness for the prosecution over the course of two days. A. 3217, 3223. Alan Beaman was convicted on April 1, 1995, a good day for Timothy Freesmeyer. As another investigator agreed, Freesmeyer would garner the most credit for solving the case, and would have received the most blame if it went unsolved. A.1384. The prosecutor slapped Freesmeyer on the back in a letter to the Chief of Police: “Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. Alan Beaman was sentenced to 50 years in prison. The appellate court affirmed on direct appeal, over the vigorous dissent of Justice Cook, who found the evidence insufficient to prove guilt. No. 4–95–0396 (unpublished order under Supreme Court Rule 23) (Cook, J., dissenting).

M. Alan Beaman Clears His Name

The jury that convicted Alan Beaman never heard the evidence against John Murray. For that reason, this Court unanimously vacated the conviction in 2008. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56 (2008). The case against Mr. Beaman had fallen apart when his post–conviction lawyers unearthed evidence hidden from him and his criminal defense lawyer that inculpated Murray (referred to in this Court’s previous opinion as “John Doe”). Id. at 66, 80. The Court divided the suppressed Murray evidence into four categories:

(1) John Doe failed to complete the polygraph examination; (2) Doe was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to petitioner’s trial; (3) Doe had physically abused his girlfriend on numerous prior occasions; and (4) Doe’s use of steroids had caused him to act erratically.

Id. at 74–75. The Court found that the suppressed polygraph evidence was important because it “would have bolstered a claim by petitioner that Doe was a viable suspect not only because the circumstances may be viewed as evasive, but also because the polygraph examiner indicated that Doe was specifically identified as a suspect.” Id. at 76. The Court next considered the fact that Murray beat his girlfriend and behaved erratically because he abused steroids, finding that the evidence “supported an inference of a tendency to act violently toward others.” Id. The Court also analyzed the evidence that showed Murray to be a drug dealer, to whom Ms. Lockmiller owed a drug debt at the time she was killed. Id. at 76–77. The Court noted that the evidence against Murray was especially critical given the weakness of the evidence against Mr. Beaman. Id. at 79. “It is clear,” the Court found, “that the evidence of petitioner's opportunity to commit the murder is not as strong as that against Doe.” Id. Indeed, Murray “had a clear opportunity to commit the offense. He lived approximately 1 ½ miles from Jennifer's apartment and did not have any verification of his location before 1 p.m. on the day of the murder.” Id. at 80. Moreover, Murray lied about his alibi—he “gave a false alibi stating he left town the day before the murder. That false exculpatory statement could be used as probative evidence of consciousness of guilt.” Id. at 80–81. Finally, Murray had a “motive to commit the murder”—he wanted to rekindle his sexual relationship with Lockmiller, but she was entangled with another man. Id. at 80.

The paucity of incriminating evidence and the concealment of exculpatory evidence made the conviction a nullity: “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding petitioner guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him, along with the nondisclosure of critical evidence.” Id. at 81.

After this Court’s unanimous ruling, the State’s Attorney’s Office dropped all charges against Mr. Beaman. A.2961. He then petitioned for a certificate of innocence. After DNA testing requested and directed by the State provided yet further evidence of Mr. Beaman’s innocence, A.3355-58, the State dropped its opposition to the petition, A.51. On April 29, 2013, Alan Beaman was declared innocent of the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller by the Circuit Court for the Eleventh Judicial District. A.51-52. Even after the certificate of innocence, the Governor of Illinois granted a pardon to Mr. Beaman “based upon innocence as if no conviction.”<sup>2</sup>

N. Procedural History: Federal Litigation

Mr. Beaman brought a lawsuit in federal court against a group of defendants that includes those named in the case before this Court. Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805 (C.D. Ill. 2014), aff’d sub nom. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015). Mr. Beaman’s principal claim was that the defendants withheld exculpatory evidence under Brady v. Maryland. Id. at 820. The district court held that most of the suppressed exculpatory evidence was not actionable under Brady because the defendants provided it to the prosecutor, who enjoyed absolute immunity under federal law for his failure to disclose it to the defense. Id. at 826.

The Murray polygraph was different in three respects. First, the federal court found that a reasonable jury could conclude that Warner concealed the polygraph from the prosecution. Id. at 827. Second, the court held that suppression of the polygraph report would constitute a Brady violation even if the other exculpatory evidence had been turned over to the prosecutor. Id. at 823. The polygraph itself could have changed the course of the prosecution: “Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Id. at 830 n.8.

Third, the court concluded that a reasonable jury could find the requisite intent—Warner buried the polygraph deliberately. Id. at 827. Specifically, the court found:

Plaintiff . . . has pointed to sufficient evidence to support an alternative inference that [Warner] intentionally withheld the information from Souk. The only officer that undisputedly had the polygraph report in his possession at any point is Warner. Under NPD policy, the polygraph reports would then be given to Zayas, who would give them to the records department and ensure a copy was given to the prosecutor. However, for reasons unknown, this policy was not followed with the Murray polygraph, and the parties dispute what happened to it once received by the NPD. Warner claims he gave it to Daniels instead of Zayas, but Daniels has no recollection of ever receiving the report. A jury could infer from the failure to follow policy and the conflicting testimony that there was intentional suppression of the evidence by Warner, the only Defendant shown by the record to have possessed the polygraph report.

Id. at 827.

Despite the genuine issue of material fact over Warner's deliberate suppression of the polygraph, the district court nonetheless granted summary judgment to Warner on the ground of qualified immunity, a doctrine that pertains to federal damages claims arising under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Id. at 831. Although a jury could find that Warner violated the Constitution, he enjoyed qualified immunity because the right of a criminal defendant to receive polygraph reports incriminating alternative suspects had not yet been clearly established at the time Warner suppressed the evidence. Id.

In addition to the federal law claims for Brady violations, Mr. Beaman also invoked the federal court's supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims for malicious prosecution, civil conspiracy, intentional infliction of emotional distress, respondeat superior, and indemnification. Id. at 811. Having dismissed the federal law claims, the court was divested of supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims. Id. at 831. The court dismissed the state law claims without prejudice, not reaching their merits. Id. The Seventh Circuit affirmed the dismissal of the federal law Brady claim with prejudice and the dismissal of the state law claims without prejudice. Beaman, 776 F.3d at 503.

O. Procedural History: The Instant Case

Mr. Beaman brought the current action in the Circuit Court of McLean County in April 2014, pleading the state law claims that the federal court had dismissed without prejudice. A.308–337. He requested and was granted assignment of an out-of-circuit judge (Douglas County Circuit Court Judge Richard L. Broch). Judge Broch granted the defendants’ motion for summary judgment on June 22, 2016, A.28-33.

In a malicious prosecution suit, the plaintiff must establish five elements: (1) the commencement or continuance of an original proceeding by the defendant; (2) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) the presence of malice; and (5) damages. Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. In this case, the circuit court reasoned that Mr. Beaman could not satisfy the commencement or continuance, lack of probable cause, malice, and indicative of innocence prongs. A.28. The circuit court dismissed the remaining claims as dependent on the malicious prosecution claim. Mr. Beaman appealed A.3368-70.

The appellate court affirmed the grant of summary judgment on the commencement or continuance element of malicious prosecution, and did not address the circuit court’s other grounds for dismissing that claim. Op ¶ 50. The court observed that prior malicious prosecution cases against police officers in three appellate districts and federal court had applied the “significant role” test to the commencement or continuance prong. Id. ¶¶ 51–53. Under this test, “liability extends to all persons who played a significant role in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff, provided all of the elements of the tort are present.” Id. ¶¶ 51–53. The appellate court nevertheless rejected this test and “question[ed] the propriety of limiting consideration of the commencement element to only the significance of one’s role in instituting the prosecution.” Id. ¶¶ 51–54. Instead, the court imported into police cases the “pressure, influence, or misstatement test,” a standard that had previously been applied only in malicious prosecution cases against “a civilian reporting a crime.” Id. ¶ 56. Under the new test, the court held that “the plaintiff must establish that [an] officer pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied.” Id. ¶ 58. The court concluded that Mr. Beaman could not meet this test for commencement or continuance as a matter of law, and affirmed the grant of summary judgment on the malicious prosecution claim. Id. ¶¶ 60–72. The court also affirmed dismissal of the other claims, which were dependent on the malicious prosecution claim. Id. ¶¶ 72–78. This Court granted leave to appeal.

ARGUMENT

A. Summary of Argument

The significant role test for the commencement or continuance prong of the malicious prosecution tort strikes the appropriate balance between holding police accountable for causing wrongful prosecutions and closing the door to unfounded claims. The appellate court erred by replacing this standard with the pressure, influence, or misstatement test—a rule no other Illinois court has ever applied to a malicious prosecution case against police defendants.

The court went astray because it considered the commencement or continuance prong in isolation, ignoring the other elements that cabin the malicious prosecution cause of action, including malice, lack of probable cause, and termination of the criminal proceedings in a manner indicative of innocence. Of course, a police officer should not be found liable merely for playing a significant role in causing a prosecution. But police officers should be held accountable when, motivated by malice, they have a significant role in causing an innocent person to be prosecuted without probable cause.

Illinois's disproportionate rate of wrongful convictions makes police accountability imperative, and the malicious prosecution tort is the principal civil remedy under state law for police misconduct. To weaken the cause of action, as the appellate court did, is to promote impunity. Prosecutors rely on investigations performed by detectives to indict and try the right people. Detectives can therefore set the trajectory of a wrongful prosecution not only by pressuring or lying to a prosecutor, but also by arriving at pre-determined outcomes through misconduct and biased investigations. In such cases, police should not escape liability merely because they did not pressure, influence, or lie to a prosecutor.

In any case, the actions of Freesmeyer, Warner and Zayas meet any conceivable test for commencement or continuance of a prosecution, even the appellate court's pressure, influence, or misstatement test. Faced with a high-profile murder that shook a college town, they selected a perpetrator and worked backwards from there. To achieve the desired result, they manipulated time trials, lied in court, and hid evidence—even from the prosecutor. The concealment of exculpatory evidence amounts to a knowing misstatement.

If Mr. Beaman prevails on the commencement or continuance prong, the Court should exercise its discretion to address the circuit court's alternative grounds for summary judgment and remand the malicious prosecution claim for trial, even though the appellate court did not reach these alternative grounds. Mr. Beaman was arrested and jailed in the second year of the Clinton Administration. He has waited long enough for a day in court.

The circuit court's reasoning on the other prongs is indefensible. The court found that the proceedings against Mr. Beaman did not conclude in a manner indicative of innocence, even though this Court unanimously vacated his conviction, the State dropped all charges, Mr. Beaman won a certificate of innocence, and the Governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence. The court found probable cause to arrest Mr. Beaman as a matter of law without examining the record, which presented a thicket of disputed facts and inferences. Instead, the court simply incorporated the defendants' brief, finding probable cause "as specifically stated in paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants' Memorandum of Law." A.30-31. Finally, the circuit court found no malice as a matter of law by ignoring the bias and misconduct that pervaded the investigation.

Mr. Beaman’s remaining claims (intentional infliction of emotional distress, conspiracy, respondeat superior, and indemnification) are intertwined with the malicious prosecution claim. The claims all rise or fall together and should be remanded for trial.

B. Standard of Review

“[S]ummary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation . . . .” Jackson v. TLC Associates, Inc., 185 Ill. 2d 418, 423 (1998). This Court must reverse the grant of summary judgment to the defendants unless the case is “clear and free from doubt.” Id. at 424. This means that summary judgment is impermissible unless: (1) the material facts are undisputed and (2) the only reasonable inferences one can draw from those facts preclude liability. Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432 ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25. This Court’s review is de novo. Jackson, 185 Ill.2d at 424.

C. The Malicious Prosecution Claim Should Proceed to a Trial on the Merits.

1. Commencement or Continuance Prong: The Defendants Commenced or Continued Mr. Beaman’s Wrongful Prosecution by Securing His Indictment and Conviction through a Fraudulent Investigation.

The appellate court erred in finding no genuine issue of material fact on the commencement or continuance element of the malicious prosecution tort. Not only did the appellate court select a narrow and incorrect legal standard, but the facts, properly understood, satisfy even that restrictive test.

a. The Appellate Court Applied the Wrong Standard to the Commencement or Continuance Prong.

In cases against police officers, courts in Illinois have applied three tests:

Significant role test: The predominant rule in Illinois’s lower courts is that a police officer satisfies the commencement or continuance prong if she played a “significant role in commencing or continuing the prosecution.” Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975

(4th Dist. 1988); Bianchi v. McQueen, 2016 IL App (2d) 150646, ¶ 72; Barnett v. Baker, 2017 IL App (1st) 152443-U, ¶ 40; Rodgers v. Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co., 315 Ill. App. 3d 340, 348–49 (1st Dist. 2000). Federal cases against Illinois police officers routinely employ this standard<sup>3</sup> and use it in jury instructions.<sup>4</sup>

Advice and cooperation test: Some state and federal decisions have also mentioned another test: participation of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation. E.g., Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d 635, 647 (1st Dist. 2002); Collier v. City of Chicago, 2015 WL 5081408, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 26, 2015).

Pressure, influence, or misstatement test: In this case, the Fourth District adopted a third rule, one more restrictive than the other two: “[T]he plaintiff must establish that [an]

<sup>4</sup> E.g., Final Jury Instructions, Brown v. Spain, No. 11-C-08403, 2014 WL 6813086 (N.D. Ill. officer pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecution relied.” Op. ¶ 58.

While this Court has not previously addressed the standard for commencement or continuance in a case against police defendants, the prevalence of the significant role test in police cases litigated in this State’s other courts over the past four decades suggests that the test is useful and effective. Although the significant role test is by far the majority rule, no one in this litigation has pointed to an instance in which the usual rule has produced an unfair result. In fact, we are unaware of any previous instance in which a police defendant has even complained about the significant role test. The standard has acquitted itself well over a long tenure.

The Court should hesitate to replace the tested standard—significant role—with a more narrow rule that could undermine police accountability. Whatever problems Illinois may face, too much police accountability is not among them. In 2016, Illinois stood second only to Texas in the number of wrongful convictions that ended in exoneration.<sup>5</sup> Cook County has been called “the wrongful conviction capital of the U.S.”<sup>6</sup> Illinoisans convicted of crimes and later exonerated have spent an aggregate 2,287 years behind bars for offenses they did not commit.<sup>7</sup> These lost years are an affront to justice, for “concern about the injustice that results from the conviction of an innocent person has long been at the core of our criminal justice system.” Schlup v. Delo, 513 U.S. 298, 325 (1994). Wrongful convictions also threaten public safety, as this case demonstrates. By targeting Mr. Beaman, the defendants left a dangerous rapist and murder to wander the streets.

The malicious prosecution tort provides the principal civil remedy under state law for investigative misconduct that results in wrongful convictions. Such misconduct may also give rise to claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress, failure to intervene, conspiracy, and respondeat superior, but all of these claims are contingent on the success of the malicious prosecution claim. Jimenez v. City of Chicago, 830 F. Supp. 2d 432, 451 (N.D. Ill. 2011). For practical purposes, then, the malicious prosecution cause of action is the lynchpin of state law civil accountability for investigative misconduct.

The lower court’s pressure, influence, or misstatement test would undermine police accountability. When police officers cause wrongful convictions, they generally do so through corrupt investigations driven by malice, not by lying to prosecutors. “[A] prosecutor ordinarily relies on police and other agencies for investigation of criminal acts.” People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24 (2017). To indict the right people, prosecutors rely on police officers to conduct investigations based on the facts, not based on malice and bias directed against a particular suspect. For practical reasons, this Court has noted that the prosecutor generally must accept the results of the investigation: “[T]he State’s Attorney does not possess the technical facilities nor the manpower that the police have. Consequently, it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.” Id. (emphasis in original) (citations omitted).

In cases like this one—where police target a manifestly innocent individual with a biased investigation, and thereby have a significant role in commencing or continuing the prosecution—liability is appropriate. The defendants caused Alan Beaman’s wrongful prosecution and conviction by selecting him as their man on Day One, and then conducting a biased investigation to reach the predetermined result.

The remaining standard that courts sometimes apply—participation of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation—is difficult to flesh out. Courts have used this test varyingly. Sometimes, this standard appears all by itself, e.g., Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d at 647, sometimes it appears along with the significant role test, Collier v. City of Chicago, 2015 WL 5081408, at *9, and sometimes, as in the decision below, it appears along with the pressure, influence, or misstatement test. Op. ¶ 56. The advice and cooperation test suffers from the same flaws as the pressure, influence, or misstatement test. A police officer need not advise or cooperate with a prosecutor to cause a malicious prosecution. A coerced confession or biased investigation often will suffice to convict an innocent person.

In hypothesizing that the significant role test would create liability for ordinary police work, the Appellate Court lost sight of the other elements required by this Court’s disjunctive test for malicious prosecution. Op. ¶ 54; Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. “Significant role” is the proper standard for one element of the tort; standing alone, it does not constitute malicious prosecution any more than driving a car constitutes vehicular homicide. The other elements of the tort—among them termination of the prosecution in a manner indicating innocence, lack of probable cause, and malice—ensure that only blameworthy defendants face liability. Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. Of course, ordinary officers have significant roles in commencing or continuing prosecutions, but they do not go after innocent people because of malice and arrest them without probable cause.

If, as the lower court worried, the significant role test would create liability for ordinary police work, surely there would be, among the high volume of malicious prosecution cases decided under that standard, one example where the test actually produced such a result. Op. ¶ 54. The lower court did not supply one.

Because no court of this State had ever applied the pressure, influence, or misstatement test to a malicious prosecution claim against a police officer, the lower court borrowed it from appellate decisions about malicious prosecution by private defendants, and a recent federal case that resulted in a split decision. Op. ¶¶ 56–57 (citing Denton v. Allstate Insurance Co., 152 Ill. App. 3d 578 (1st Dist.1986); Geisberger v. Vella, 62 Ill. App. 3d 941 (2d Dist. 1978); and Colbert v. City of Chicago, 851 F.3d 649 (7th Cir. 2017)). The first two cases have nothing to do with malicious prosecution by a police officer. Only Colbert involves police defendants. In that case, however, the majority purported to construe state law in adopting the pressure, influence, or misstatement test, but relied only on cases about prosecution without probable cause as a federal cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Colbert, 851 F.3d at 655 (citing Reed v. City of Chicago, 77 F.3d 1049, 1053 (7th Cir. 1996) and Snodderly v. R.U.F.F. Drug Enforcement Task Force, 239 F.3d 892, 902 (7th Cir. 2001)). Colbert did not really construe state law; it used federal law on prosecution without probable cause to supply the standard for commencement or continuance in a state law malicious prosecution suit. This Court is the arbiter of state law, and should not accept Colbert's incorrect interpretation of state law, which was based solely on federal law. This Court already cabins malicious prosecution claims with the lack of probable cause, indicative of innocence, and malice requirements; there is no reason to restrict further the state law malicious prosecution claim with a rule designed for a distinct federal cause of action.

The Fourth District also downplayed the break with its previous adoption of the significant role test in Frye v. O'Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 975. Frye did not adopt the significant role test for commencement or continuance, the court reasoned, because Frye stated that the test applies “provided all of the elements of the tort are present.” Id. ¶ 53. But Frye’s qualification hardly undermines the significant role test—it merely acknowledges that the plaintiff must also meet the other elements. See Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. There was no reason for the Fourth District to depart from its longstanding precedent.

b. The Defendants’ Misconduct in this Case Satisfies Any Conceivable Test for Commencement or Continuance of the Prosecution.

The record in this case meets any imaginable test for commencement or continuance of a prosecution by a police officer. Under any of these tests, the defendants helped to cause the commencement and the continuance of Mr. Beaman’s wrongful prosecution. If the defendants had conducted an honest investigation, someone else might have been indicted, and the murderer might have been caught. Mr. Beaman might not have been indicted if the defendants examined John Murray the way they examined Mr. Beaman—if they had bugged the conversations he had with his friends, threatened him with the death penalty if he did not confess, interrogated his friends about every time he yelled at someone or made a crude remark, or, for that matter, investigated Murray’s history of beating women, abusing steroids, and selling drugs. As the federal court concluded, the results might have been different if Warner had not concealed the Murray polygraph report: “Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 831.

Likewise, Mr. Beaman might never have been indicted if the detectives investigated the man whom Ms. Lockmiller met just before her death and who wouldn’t stop calling her, or the man who wrote his phone number for her in lipstick and continued asking about her. Mr. Beaman might never have been indicted if Freesmeyer told the prosecutor that Mr. Beaman’s alibi held up, or that it was absurd to think that Carol Beaman would drive 20 miles across town and then return to the Walmart, rather than just going across the street. Mr. Beaman might never have been indicted if the defendants had kept an open mind and took obvious steps like finding out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area—rather than deciding Beaman was good enough at the outset and working backwards from there. In short, a rational juror could find a causal link between the defendants’ misconduct and the commencement and continuance of Mr. Beaman’s prosecution. Summary judgment was therefore improper.

The appellate court also went astray by concluding that the defendants could not be responsible for commencement or continuance because “[t]he evidence shows the prosecutors, Reynard and Souk, made the decision to prosecute plaintiff.” Op. ¶ 62. Of course they did: police officers never have authority to initiate a prosecution. According to the appellate court’s logic, police who cause wrongful convictions can never be liable for malicious prosecutions simply because they are not prosecutors.

The appellate court thought it significant that the lead prosecutor decided to indict Mr. Beaman during a May 16, 1994 meeting, even though a non-defendant detective wanted to continue the investigation. Op. ¶ 62. Zeroing in on a single day ignores the nine months between the August 1993 murder and the May 1994 meeting. If the defendants had conducted an honest investigation in the many months given to them, the evidence available and the decision made at the May 1994 meeting might have been quite different. At minimum, a reasonable juror could infer as much.

The Appellate Court also misunderstood the federal court's conclusion that Warner violated the Constitution by withholding the Murray polygraph from the prosecutor. Op. ¶ 68. While this Court considered the Murray evidence cumulatively in People v. Beaman, the federal court considered the Murray polygraph by itself because the prosecutor received the other evidence from the defendants. Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 823. The federal court concluded that the Murray polygraph standing alone constituted exculpatory evidence under Brady, and the Appellate Court therefore erred in stating that the federal opinion did not find "the failed and inadmissible polygraph result, considered alone, to be material and exculpatory." Op. ¶ 68. The Appellate Court also ignored the federal court's finding that a rational juror could find that Warner deliberately concealed the Murray polygraph because Warner admits both to receiving it before it disappeared and to violating the procedures required to preserve and disseminate it among the officers. Beaman, 7 F. Supp.3d at 827. By misreading the federal decision and ignoring the evidence from which a juror could infer that Warner deliberately hid the polygraph, the appellate court reduced Warner's role in commencing or continuing Mr. Beaman's prosecution.

We turn now to each of the three tests for commencement or continuance:

Significant role test: Under the proper test, the defendants played a significant role. Freesmeyer was the lead investigator and focused on Mr. Beaman from the first day of the investigation, even as others questioned Beaman's guilt. He manipulated time trials to discredit Mr. Beaman's otherwise unassailable alibi, omitted the exculpatory time trial from his police report, and deceived the grand jury about the existence of alternative suspects. See supra at 11-14. The grand jury was deceived by Freesmeyer in the same way that this Court ultimately found the jury was misled by the prosecutor—by covering up the existence of alternative suspects. Warner hid the polygraph report, which could have changed the outcome of the case. Zayas ran the detective division during the investigation, had ultimate responsibility for the Lockmiller case, and supervised the detectives working on the case. A.1416-17, 2296-97. He participated in the May 16, 1994 meeting where the decision was made to arrest Mr. Beaman, and there is no evidence to suggest that he tried to stop the arrest. A.1334. Indeed, he allowed the arrest to occur even though he knew that the case was not ready to be charged and prosecuted. A.1356–23.

Pressure, influence, or misstatement test: Even if this Court were to adopt the pressure, influence, or misstatement test, the defendants' intentional concealment of critical evidence is the functional equivalent of a misstatement. The decision below immunizes the defendants' dishonesty by reading "misstatement" out of the pressure, influence, or misstatement test. There is a genuine issue of fact as to whether Warner intentionally buried the John Murray polygraph report. See supra at 9, 17-18. This was a critical piece of evidence because "the circumstances of the polygraph examination indicate that [Murray] intentionally avoided the test. He did not comply with the polygraph examiner's instructions during the first attempt and failed to cooperate in scheduling a second attempt." Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 76 (2008). Indeed, the federal court stated: "Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect." 7 F. Supp. 3d at 831 n.8. Freesmeyer's manipulation of the time trials and his lies to the grand jury likewise constitute significant misstatements. See supra at 11-14.

Advice and cooperation test: The appellate court mentioned this test, but did not really apply it to the facts. Op. ¶ 56. Freesmeyer moved into the prosecutor’s office to help prosecute the case. Op. ¶ 20 When Mr. Beaman was wrongfully convicted, the prosecutor declared, “[b]eyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer”— a piece of evidence the decision below ignores. A.3207. Had the lower court actually considered the facts, it would have been compelled to find participation of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation.

2. The Circuit Court’s Alternative Grounds for Dismissing the Malicious Prosecution Claim Are Incorrect.

This Court should address the remaining prongs of Mr. Beaman’s malicious prosecution claim, even though the appellate court did not. The circuit court held—as a matter of law—that no genuine issue of material fact existed on the indicative of innocence, probable cause, and malice prongs. The circuit court erred as to each of these elements: Mr. Beaman’s innocence is undeniable, and the complex facts of this case make probable cause and malice impossible to resolve as a matter of law. He deserves a prompt trial. This Court should clear the way for one by addressing the ratio decidendi of both the appellate court and the circuit court and remanding the case for trial.

a. Indicative of Innocence Prong: The Unanimous Reversal of Mr. Beaman’s Conviction, the Abandonment of Charges, the Certificate of Innocence, and the Governor’s Pardon Indicate Mr. Beaman’s Innocence.

Contrary to the circuit court decision, the criminal case against Mr. Beaman concluded in a manner indicative of his innocence. Prosecutors dropped the charges after this Court unanimously threw out the conviction, Mr. Beaman won a certificate of innocence, and the Governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence. Any one of these events would defeat summary judgment on the indicative of innocence prong all by itself. Together, they make this issue a no-brainer. Nonetheless, the Circuit Court found—as a matter of law—that the proceedings did not terminate in a manner indicative of innocence.

The pardon states that it is “Based Upon Innocence.” A.3377. A gubernatorial pardon on the basis of innocence alone establishes that the proceedings concluded in the plaintiff’s favor. Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F. Supp. 2d 660, 664, 680 (N.D. Ill. 2005). Although Walden addressed when a malicious prosecution claim accrued under state statute of limitations law, that distinction does not make a difference. Walden’s malicious prosecution claim accrued at the moment the Governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence because the pardon fulfilled the indicative of innocence prong of the malicious prosecution claim. Id. at 680. When the Governor pardoned Mr. Beaman, that likewise fulfilled the indicative of innocence prong.

Mr. Beaman also holds a certificate of innocence from the Circuit Court of McLean County. A certificate of innocence is “relevant at least to the ‘indicative of innocence’ element of plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim.” Kluppelberg v. Burge, 84 F. Supp. 3d 741, 744, 745 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (citation omitted). The instant case comes to this court on summary judgment; therefore, relevant evidence satisfies plaintiff’s burden.

Even if Mr. Beaman had not won a certificate of innocence and a pardon from the Governor on the basis of innocence, the indicative of innocence prong still would be an issue for the jury. The prosecution not only dropped all charges, but did so after this Court unanimously threw out Mr. Beaman’s conviction and declared: “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding [Mr. Beaman] guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him . . . .” 229 Ill. 2d at 81. The “dismissal of a . . . charge against the plaintiff at the instance of the prosecutor” generally suffices to show favorable termination. Rich v. Baldwin, 133 Ill. App. 3d 712, 715 (5th Dist. 1985).

The circuit court postulated that the State’s Attorney’s Office declined to reprosecute the case because it would have been difficult to reconstruct the facts after so many years, rather than because of Mr. Beaman’s innocence. A.32. There is no evidence for this conclusion. The court cited paragraph 124 of Defendants’ Statement of Material Facts (A.68), which in turn relies entirely on a deposition in which the original prosecutor speculated that staleness might have affected the decision to drop all charges. A.2962-66. But the prosecutor had long since departed the State’s Attorney’s Office and was speculating without personal knowledge about the possible reasons his successors theoretically might have had for dismissing the charges. A.2962-66.

The purpose of the indicative of innocence prong is to ensure that innocent people—and only innocent people—reap the benefit of the malicious prosecution tort. It is difficult to imagine a plaintiff with greater proof of innocence than Alan Beaman, equipped as he is with a unanimous reversal of his conviction by this Court, a certificate of innocence, and a pardon based on innocence. If the indicative of innocence prong defeats Alan Beaman’s claim, it defeats almost any malicious prosecution claim brought by a wrongfully convicted plaintiff. The circuit court’s absurd holding therefore stands the indicative of innocence prong on its head.

b. Lack of Probable Cause Prong: Defendants Lacked Probable Cause To Arrest Mr. Beaman Because They Had No Probative Evidence Against Him, Dismissed his Alibi, and Ignored the Likely Killers.

A jury should decide whether defendants had probable cause to arrest and jail Mr. Beaman because the record is beset with complex facts from which rational individuals could draw competing inferences. In a malicious prosecution case, summary judgment is impermissible unless: (1) the material facts are undisputed and (2) the only reasonable inferences that one can draw from those facts constitute probable cause. Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432 ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25; Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 972–73; Skorupa v. Guzick, 2015 IL App (1st) 133082-U, ¶¶ 17–18; Fabiano, 336 Ill. App. 3d at 642; Maxwell v. City of Indianapolis, 998 F.2d 431, 434 (7th Cir. 1993).<sup>8</sup>

Even if reasonable minds could disagree on probable cause, a rational juror could find it wanting based on the facts that obtained at the time of Mr. Beaman’s arrest:

- There was no probative physical evidence against Mr. Beaman and no one could place him in the town where the murder occurred. See supra at 10-11.

---

<sup>8</sup> The districts disagree on whether probable cause is a question of fact or a mixed question of law and fact in a civil case. Robinson v. Econ-O-Corp., Inc., 62 Ill. App. 3d 958, 961 (2d Dist. 1978) (question of fact); Salmen v. Kamberos, 206 Ill. App. 3d 686, 691 (1st Dist. 1990) (same). But see Howard v. Firmand, 880 N.E.2d 1139, 1142, 317 Ill.Dec. 147, 150, 378 Ill. App. 3d 147, 150 (1st Dist. 2007) (mixed question). That distinction is beside the point, because this case depends on the inferences to be drawn from the facts, and the inferences must be drawn in favor of the party opposing summary judgment, regardless of whether the question is characterized as factual or mixed. Seymour, 2015 IL 118432 ¶ 42; Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 973; Skorupa, 2015 IL App (1st) 133082-U ¶¶ 17–18; Fabiano, 336 Ill. App. 3d at 642; Maxwell v. City of Indianapolis, 998 F.2d at 434.

- Mr. Beaman maintained his innocence despite a barrage of accusatory interrogations, surreptitious overhears, and death penalty threats. See supra at 5, 10.
- Any number of men (known and unknown) could have committed the crime. See supra at 4-5, 6-9.
- The statement of the victim's across-the-hall neighbor indicated that the murder occurred after 2:00 pm, which eliminated any possibility for Mr. Beaman to commit the crime. See supra at 13-14.
- In the late morning on the day of the murder, Mr. Beaman was at a bank in Rockford, some 130 miles from the scene of the crime. A.1312.
- The crime scene indicated that the killer was a stranger. See supra at 4-5.
- The crime scene indicated that the killer was a much larger and more powerful man than Mr. Beaman. See supra at 4.
- The evidence against Murray was much stronger than the case against Mr. Beaman. See supra at 7-9.

The defendants may have inferred probable cause from these circumstances, but because it was not the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the circumstances, they cannot establish probable cause as a matter of law.

So far, the lower courts have avoided a meaningful consideration of the facts germane to probable cause. The appellate court did not address the circuit court's conclusion that probable cause existed as a matter of law, and the circuit court avoided a serious engagement with the facts in three ways. First, the circuit court opined that the thoroughly discredited conviction proved Mr. Beaman's "guilt beyond a reasonable doubt" and therefore established probable cause. A.31. A vacated conviction, however, is “null and void,” and therefore inadmissible. People v. Shook, 35 Ill. 2d 597, 599 (1966). Next, the court ceded its independent judgment to an attorney who prosecuted Mr. Beaman and who believed that “probable cause existed for the arrest of plaintiff.” A.31. Such opinion evidence is inadmissible as to legal questions, all the more so because probable cause is an ultimate issue in this case. Todd W. Musburger, Ltd. v. Meier, 394 Ill. App. 3d 781, 800 (1st Dist. 2009). Third, rather than analyzing the facts, the court adopted defendants’ brief, stating, “[i]n this case, grounds for probable cause to charge plaintiff with murder existed as specifically stated in paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants’ Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendants’ Motion for Summary Judgment, filed in this cause recounting the facts in defendant, Freesmeyer’s deposition.” A.30-31.

A genuine review of the record shows that different reasonable inferences could be drawn from each assertion that the circuit court copied from the defendants’ brief in support of probable cause. We address these assertions in turn.

Fingerprints (Item A incorporated into circuit court opinion): The fingerprint evidence did not support the case against Mr. Beaman. His prints were not found on the alarm clock cord used to strangle Lockmiller or the scissors lodged in her chest. The alarm clock console had seven prints—two Mr. Beaman’s, four belonging to Michael Swaine, one unidentified. A.3264-65. The prints did not inculcate Mr. Beaman: he had used the alarm clock previously, and fingerprints cannot be dated. A.3253. Freesmeyer decided to treat the prints as evidence of guilt based “solely on [his] own interpretation.” A.1587.

Garbage Bag (Item B incorporated into lower court opinion): The murder scene included a garbage bag left out on a coffee table. A.1361. If this evidence had any significance, it pointed to a burglar, not Mr. Beaman. A.1361. Burglars often seek out sacks and other receptacles in which to carry the loot. A.1361.

Letters (Item C incorporated into lower court opinion): The police found some racy letters from Mr. Beaman in Ms. Lockmiller's apartment. A.546-84. They were old, almost all from 1992. A.546-84. Mr. Beaman had terminated the relationship well before the murder. See supra at 5-6.

Unreturned calls (Item D incorporated into lower court opinion): Ms. Lockmiller called Mr. Beaman several times in the days before the murder, but the phone records show that he did not answer or return the calls. A.338-39. When the two did speak, on August 23rd, Mr. Beaman told Ms. Lockmiller he was no longer interested in dating. A.1048-49. These facts are exculpatory. As part of his biased investigation, however, Freesmeyer somehow interpreted them as a basis for probable cause. A.1593-94.

Supposed "Hole" in Mr. Beaman's Alibi (Item E incorporated into lower court opinion): As an initial matter, Freesmeyer did not even perform time trials to test the alibi prior to arresting Mr. Beaman. A.1624-27, 3239. The supposed "hole" in the alibi, then, hardly furnished probable cause for arrest. In any case, the alibi was bulletproof. At 10:11 a.m., Mr. Beaman drove from the bank (where he was captured on video making a deposit) to his family's home, where he placed calls at 10:37 a.m. and 10:39 a.m. See supra at 11-13. It would have been literally impossible for Mr. Beaman to leave the family home after the second call at 10:39, drive to Bloomington-Normal to commit the murder, and be back to the family home again by 2:15 p.m., when his mother returned. See supra at 11-13.

Breaking Down the Door (Item F incorporated into lower court opinion): The two occasions on which Mr. Beaman kicked open Ms. Lockmiller's door could be used at trial by the defendants to show that Mr. Beaman sometimes displayed a temper. These instances do not establish the capacity for murder or probable cause as a matter of law. Michael Swaine and Mr. Beaman were close friends and roommates, but Swaine began a sexual relationship with Ms. Lockmiller during her relationship with Mr. Beaman. A.3314-15. One night, Swaine borrowed Mr. Beaman's car under the pretext of driving to a party; as part of the ruse, Swaine faked a phone conversation (with no one on the other end of the line) in front of Mr. Beaman. A.3311-13. Mr. Beaman grew suspicious, biked over to Ms. Lockmiller's building, and saw his own car, which Swaine had taken, in the parking lot. A.389. As Mr. Beaman arrived at the apartment, his girlfriend and roommate had just completed oral sex and were headed to the bedroom. A.3314-15. While Mr. Beaman kicked the door open, he did not lay a finger on Lockmiller or Swaine; instead, he calmly gave Swaine a ride back to their shared apartment. A.3317, 3318-19. On the other occasion, Ms. Lockmiller was having sex with Murray. A.1752. Mr. Beaman did not touch either of them. Murray, in contrast, had a long history of beating women. See supra at 8.

Bank Video (Items H-I incorporated into lower court opinion): The bank video proved that on the day of the murder, Mr. Beaman was some 130 miles from the crime scene at 10:11. See supra at 11. But Freesmeyer decided that the discovery of the bank video was evidence of guilt. A.1578, 1584. To him, Mr. Beaman seemed dishonest and guilty because he did not bring up the bank trip when Freesmeyer asked him for proof of innocence. A.1578, 1584.

Overhears (Items J-M incorporated into lower court opinion): The defendants moved heaven and earth to get an incriminating admission by bugging Mr. Beaman's conversations with Swaine and Freesmeyer. See supra at 10. They got nothing. In fact, Mr.

Beaman told Swaine, “Dude, I don’t know shit, that’s the problem” and stated he no longer had a romantic interest in Ms. Lockmiller at the time of her death. A.3329. Freesmeyer, however, seized on the fruitless overhears as evidence of guilt. A.1579. Mr. Beaman had made a crude comment to Swaine about his relationship with Ms. Lockmiller. A.1579.

Box Fan (Item N incorporated into lower court opinion): The killer covered the victim’s face with a box fan. A.1581. Freesmeyer decided this meant that the two knew each other. A.1581. If anything, this was more probative of a home invasion: burglars often cover the heads of their victims while conducting a search. A.1360.

Manner of Stabbing (Item O incorporated into lower court opinion): The manner of stabbing with the scissors suggested that the assailant did not know the victim. A.1361. Personal and emotional stabbings tend to have more wounds, indicating a frenzy. A.1361. Freesmeyer reversed this too, imagining “an act of vengeance over someone that [Lockmiller] had hurt deeply,” rather than a random attacker. A.1581.

No Obvious Signs of Forced Entry (Item P incorporated into lower court opinion): There were not obvious signs of forced entry to the apartment, but forced entry often does not leave obvious signs. A burglar could have entered with a loid, which is a piece of plastic that can slip the lock without leaving visible damage to the wood or the metal. A.1360.

From the same facts, one might also draw inferences more favorable to the defendants. Perhaps a juror would think that the kitchen garbage bag points to Mr. Beaman rather than a burglar’s improvised sack because Mr. Beaman once checked Ms. Lockmiller’s trash for evidence of contraceptives. But why then would the kitchen trash at the crime scene be removed but the trash in the bedroom left undisturbed? A.3308, 3309.

Or perhaps a juror would reject the possibility that a stranger killed Ms. Lockmiller because her purse was not visibly disturbed and there were not obvious signs of forced entry. On the other hand, burglars can easily pick locks with loids, and the purse could have been forgotten once Ms. Lockmiller interrupted the burglar and the crime turned into rape and murder. A.1360. Moreover, if the perpetrator was not a burglar, why the signs of rummaging? A.1360. Questions like these are the reason trials exist. The defendants might advocate one set of inferences, but others are permissible. For that reason, the defendants are not entitled to summary judgment on probable cause. Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432 ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25.

c. Malice Prong: The Defendants’ Deliberate Misconduct and Fraudulent Investigation Demonstrate Their Malice.

The defendants’ dishonest investigation of the Lockmiller homicide—everything from the immediate fixation on Mr. Beaman, to the refusal to undertake a serious investigation of other viable suspects, to perjury, to manipulated time trials, to concealment of evidence—demonstrates their lack of good faith. At minimum, malice is a jury question.

The appellate court did not address the issue of malice, and the circuit court’s reasoning was nonsensical. First, the circuit court opined that malice was implausible because “in the minds of the prosecutors, there was sufficient reason ... to proceed solely against the plaintiff.” A.31. But every prosecution of a single-perpetrator crime includes a prosecutor who decides to “proceed solely” against one defendant—it is unheard of in such cases to indict two people for the same crime just to see what happens. By the circuit court’s logic, any investigation that results in a wrongful conviction in a single-perpetrator offense is malice-free as a matter of law.

To compound the error, the circuit court expressed the view that the wrongful conviction itself negated a finding of malice: “At a jury trial, the State provided the jury with proof beyond a reasonable doubt that plaintiff had both motive and opportunity to commit the murder.” A.31. The circuit court failed to acknowledge not only that this Court unanimously vacated the conviction, but also that this Court made specific findings about opportunity to commit the crime: “[T]he evidence of petitioner's opportunity to commit the murder is not as strong as that against [John Murray].” People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 79.

Freesmeyer’s Malice: A rational juror could infer that Freesmeyer acted in bad faith. Freesmeyer selected Mr. Beaman as the primary suspect on Day One despite the obvious weakness of the evidence against him. See supra at 4-5. There was little that pointed to him other than “guessing” by Morgan Keefe, Lockmiller’s friend who had discovered the body; no work had been done to check alibis, to process fingerprints, or to obtain autopsy results; there were no eyewitnesses to the crime, or even anyone who could place Mr. Beaman in the same city as the victim on the day of the murder; Mr. Beaman maintained his innocence in the face of an aggressive interrogation; there was no physical evidence implicating him; and the state of the crime scene pointed to a burglary-turned-rape and suggested a perpetrator of much larger size and physical power than Mr. Beaman. See supra at 4-5.

The case against Mr. Beaman only deteriorated from there, but Freesmeyer held on to the idea that Alan Beaman was his man. When the time-of-death evidence obtained by the victim’s neighbor made it impossible for Mr. Beaman to have committed the crime, Freesmeyer ignored it. See supra at 13-14. When the fingerprint evidence proved fruitless, Freesmeyer seized on it based “solely on [his] own interpretation.” A.1587. When the state of the crime scene pointed away from Mr. Beaman, Freesmeyer construed it as evidence of guilt. See supra 41. When Mr. Beaman denied guilt in seven surreptitiously recorded conversations, Freesmeyer fixated on a few crude comments and decided they were incriminating. See supra at 40-41.

The pattern continued as Freesmeyer labored to discredit Mr. Beaman's alibi. Freesmeyer careened at speeds Mr. Beaman never could have reached when driving to and from the crime scene because speeding during those time trials hurt the alibi. See supra at 11-13. But when a slower speed would hurt the alibi, Freesmeyer selected the slower route and crawled along between the bank and the Beaman home at the posted limit. See supra at See supra at 11-13. Freesmeyer went on to conceal the time trial that showed that Mr. Beaman easily could have made the trip from the bank to his home in time for the 10:37 and 10:39 calls by omitting it from his report and trial testimony. See supra at 11-12. When Carol Beaman said that she did not make the calls because she was with her mother at her retirement home and then across the street shopping at Walmart, Freesmeyer set out to show that she drove 20 miles home and back between seeing her mother and visiting the Walmart, rather than just crossing the street. See supra at 12. Freesmeyer threatened Mr. Beaman with the death penalty, and later arrested him, even though his supervisor, Zayas, thought the crime was unsolved, "in limbo," and not ready to be prosecuted. A.1356-23, 1318.

Plaintiff's expert in criminal investigations, a former FBI agent with 45 years of criminal investigation experience, opined:

The defendants violated the basic standards for police investigations by rushing to a judgment about the type of crime they were investigating, who was responsible for having committed it and either searching for or creating evidence that supported those conclusions while withholding exculpatory information about drive times and alternate suspects from the defense and consequently from the jury. In doing so they showed an utter disregard for the truth that not only denied justice for Mr. Beaman, but also needlessly endangered the public by leaving a murderer on the streets free to kill again.

A.3248-49. Freesmeyer disregarded every fact that did not fit the result he selected at the beginning the very beginning: Alan Beaman was the killer.

Perhaps a juror could conclude that Freesmeyer botched the case due to error rather than malice. Maybe Freesmeyer ignored the evidence exculpating Mr. Beaman out of gross incompetence rather than malice; maybe it was an innocent mistake to floor the accelerator when a fast speed would hurt Mr. Beaman's alibi and to brake when that would hurt the alibi; and maybe Freesmeyer remembered to memorialize in his report every time trial except one that exculpated Mr. Beaman due to an innocent mistake. Yes—maybe.

All of these maybes reflect what is obvious: there are competing inferences that might be drawn from the record regarding Freesmeyer's credibility and subjective state of mind. In our system of justice, we get to the truth on these issues through a trial, which is what must occur in this case.

Warner's Malice: A genuine issue of material fact also exists as to whether Defendant Warner contributed to the malicious prosecution by intentionally burying the Murray polygraph report. See supra at 9, 17-18. As the federal court found, a jury question exists as to whether Warner "intentionally withheld" evidence that could have changed the trajectory of the case. 7 F. Supp. 3d at 827. Such deliberate malfeasance would obviously constitute malice.

Zayas's Malice: Frank Zayas was in charge of the Criminal Investigations Division, making him the boss of Freesmeyer and the other detectives. A.91, 1416-17, 2296-97. He participated in the May 16, 1994 meeting where the decision was made to arrest Mr. Beaman and, despite his direct authority over Freesmeyer, acquiesced in the arrest and did nothing to stop it. A.1334, 2296-97. Since then, he has admitted that at the time of Mr. Beaman's arrest and even months later—in November of 1994—the case was not ready for charging and prosecution:

Q. When you left you felt that the case against Beaman was – was weak? Is that a fair statement?

A. At that point – I'll put it this way.

I don't think the case was ready to be sent to the State [for prosecution] yet. I think we needed to work on it some more.

Q. And that was true in November of '94 when you retired?

A. Yes, sir.

A.1356–23.

Direct admissions of malice are exceedingly rare. A defendant never breaks down at the deposition table and admits to acting maliciously. This is as close as it gets to a direct admission: Zayas knew that the case was not ready “to be sent to the State,” but he let it happen anyway. At minimum, this admission makes his malice a jury question.

D. Mr. Beaman's Remaining Claims Should Proceed to Trial.

In addition to the malicious prosecution claim, Mr. Beaman also brought claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress, civil conspiracy, respondeat superior, and indemnification. Although the circuit court granted summary judgment on these claims and the appellate court affirmed, each claim rises or falls with the malicious prosecution claim. If the Court reinstates the malicious prosecution claim, it should also reinstate these claims.

1. The Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress Claim Should Proceed to Trial.

The appellate court erred in holding that Mr. Beaman abandoned his intentional infliction of emotional distress claim on appeal. Op. ¶ 74. Section II of Mr. Beaman’s appellate brief was captioned “The Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress Claim (Count II) Must Proceed To Trial.” A. 3379. That section, which appeared after a detailed recitation of the defendants’ malfeasance in the malicious prosecution section of the brief, stated: “It goes without saying that the conduct at issue here—pursuing plaintiff’s conviction maliciously, disregarding and manipulating the evidence, and sending an innocent man to prison for a dozen years for a crime he could not have committed—is extreme and outrageous conduct.” A.3379. This argument was followed by a string cite to six cases in which courts in Illinois have allowed intentional infliction of emotional distress claims to proceed on facts that relate principally to malicious prosecution. A.3379. The section concluded by stating: “[T]he circuit court erred in granting summary judgment on the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim.” A.3379.

The defendants did not argue in their response brief that Mr. Beaman had abandoned the claim; instead, they asserted that the outcome of this claim depended on the court’s resolution of the malicious prosecution claim. A.3383-84. On reply, Mr. Beaman agreed. A.3381.

Waiver occurs if: (1) no authority is cited, (2) no argument is made, or (3) an argument is merely “listed or included in a vague allegation of error.” Vancura v. Katris, 238 Ill.2d. 352, 369-70 (2010). Nothing of the sort happened in this case. Mr. Beaman developed the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim in his opening brief, and he should not be punished for briefing an undisputed issue in a concise manner. Such an outcome would encourage litigants to waste judges' time and clients' money with elongated discussions of undisputed points, just to avoid a sua sponte finding of waiver. Finally, even if Mr. Beaman had waived the emotional distress claim, the defendants "waived the wavier" by failing to assert at any point that waiver occurred.

In numerous prior cases, courts in Illinois have held that emotional distress claims may proceed when they are attached to viable malicious prosecution claims. See Carrocia v. Anderson, 249 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1028 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Treece v. Village of Naperville, 903 F. Supp. 1251, 1259–60 (N.D. Ill. 1995), aff'd, 213 F.3d 360 (7th Cir. 2000)); Padilla v. City of Chicago, 932 F. Supp. 2d 907, 930 (N.D. Ill. 2013); Wallace v. City of Zion, No. 11 C 2859, 2011 WL 3205495, at *6 (N.D. Ill. July 28, 2011); Fox v. Tomczak, No. 04 C 7309, 2006 WL 1157466, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2006); McDonald v. Vill. of Winnetka, No. 00 C 3199, 2001 WL 477148, at *6 (N.D. Ill. May 3, 2001). To our knowledge, no case has ever allowed a malicious prosecution claim to proceed while rejecting an emotional distress claim (or vice-versa). The reasons are obvious: Robbing a person of liberty maliciously and without probable cause is the very sort of "extreme and outrageous" intentional conduct that constitutes intentional infliction of emotional distress. McGrath v. Fahey, 126 Ill.2d 78, 86 (1988). In this case, the defendants' biased investigation, lying in court, manipulating time trials, and hiding evidence constitute such outrageous conduct.

The parties have always agreed that Mr. Beaman's emotional distress and malicious prosecution claims either proceed together or fail together. There is no reason for the Court to upset that agreement.

2. The Civil Conspiracy Claim Should Proceed to Trial.

The appellate court affirmed dismissal of the civil conspiracy claim solely because that claim rested on the malicious prosecution claim: the malicious prosecution of Alan Beaman was the object of the conspiracy. Op. ¶ 75. If this Court reinstates the malicious prosecution claim, it should also reinstate the conspiracy claim.

“Since conspiracies are generally evolved under the cloak of secrecy, the courts have traditionally permitted proof of a conspiracy by indirect or circumstantial evidence . . . .” Here, the defendants collaborated closely on the case, met frequently, and shared information. A.91-92. They all read each other’s detailed reports. A.1352. From the content of those reports, they would know the state of the case and the absence of any basis for arrest or prosecution—the lack of any physical evidence, the lack of eyewitness testimony, Mr. Beaman’s alibi, the vast universe of alternative suspects, and the fact that Murray was a more likely suspect. It would have been a remarkable coincidence if they all fixated on Mr. Beaman independently despite the lack of evidence against him, and if all of their parallel actions to manipulate evidence to convict him were uncoordinated. People v. Small, 319 Ill. 437, 449 (1925) (“[W]hen taken in connection with other acts, it may appear clearly that the series of wrongful acts result from concerted and associated action.”). Freesmeyer ignored exculpatory evidence and alternative suspects, lied to the grand jury, and skewed the time trials (see supra at 6-9, 11-14); Warner buried a polygraph that helped to exculpate Mr. Beaman (see supra at 9, 17-18); and Zayas let the arrest go forward, knowing that the evidence could not justify it (see supra at 32). Based on the defendants’ close collaboration on the case and their parallel acts of malfeasance—each of which was aimed at wrongfully convicting Mr. Beaman—a reasonable juror could infer a conspiracy. See Pearce v. Thiry, No. CIV.A.08 C 4483, 2009 WL 3172148, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 1, 2009) (stating that plaintiff could establish conspiracy among defendant police officers by producing evidence that they “engaged in concerted acts sufficient to raise a reasonable inference of mutual understanding”); Newsome v. James, No. 96 C 7680, 2000 WL 528475, at *16 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2000); Rainey v. City of Chicago, No. 10 C 07506, 2013 WL 941968, at *11 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2013).

3. The Respondent Superior and Indemnification Claims Should Proceed to Trial.

The appellate court’s rationale for dismissing the respondent superior and indemnification claims was entirely dependent on its reasons for dismissing the claims discussed above. The dismissal of these claims therefore must be reversed as well.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should reverse the appellate court and remand this case for a trial on the merits.

Respectfully submitted,

ALAN BEAMAN

ORAL ARGUMENT REQUESTED

APPENDIX 003493

NATURE OF THE CASE

On April 1, 1995, a McLean County jury found plaintiff Alan Beaman guilty of the murder of Illinois State University student Jennifer Lockmiller. Plaintiff was sentenced to 50 years in the Illinois Department of Corrections. The conviction was affirmed by the appellate court (People v. Beaman, 279 Ill. App. 3d 1115 (4th Dist. 1996)), and a petition for leave to appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court was denied (168 Ill. 2d 601 (1996)). Plaintiff then pursued a post-conviction petition. After an evidentiary hearing, the circuit court denied the petition, which was affirmed by the appellate court. People v. Beaman, 368 Ill. App. 3d 759 (4th Dist. 2006).

In 2008, the Illinois Supreme Court reversed plaintiff's conviction, finding the State violated his right to due process when it failed to disclose material and exculpatory information about an alternative suspect, Larbi John Murray ("John Doe" in the Court's written opinion). People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56 (2008). In 2010, plaintiff filed a lawsuit under 42 U.S.C. §1983 in federal court against defendants Tim Freesmeyer, Dave Warner, and Frank Zayas (all former Town of Normal police officers), along with McLean County prosecutors and other police investigators, alleging they violated plaintiff's due process rights in the investigation of the murder and subsequent arrest and prosecutions. Plaintiff also added state law tort claims of malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED), and conspiracy, and indemnification and respondeat superior claims against the Town of Normal.

The federal district court granted summary judgment on plaintiff's federal claims and relinquished jurisdiction over the state claims. Beaman v. Souk, 7 F.

Supp. 3d 805 (C.D. Ill. 2014). The Seventh Circuit affirmed the district court's decision. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015).

In April, 2014, plaintiff filed his state claims against defendants in McLean County, Illinois. Defendants moved for summary judgment and on June 22, 2016, the circuit court granted summary judgment, finding no triable issues. The circuit court found that defendants were entitled to a judgment because they did not commence or continue the prosecution, there was probable cause for the arrest and prosecution of plaintiff, defendants did not act maliciously, and the dismissal of the criminal charges against plaintiff was not indicative of innocence. On August 4, 2017, the appellate court affirmed the circuit court's decision, addressing only the commencement issue. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527.

Plaintiff then filed a petition for leave to appeal before this Court, challenging only the appellate court's determination regarding the "commencement or continuation" element of a state law malicious prosecution claim. On November 22, 2017, this Court denied plaintiff's petition for leave to appeal. Plaintiff filed a motion for leave to file a motion to reconsider the denial of the petition for leave to appeal, and attached a copy of his proposed motion to reconsider to his motion for leave. On December 8, 2017, this Court reversed itself by vacating the denial of the petition for leave to appeal, and granted plaintiff's motion to reconsider.

Plaintiff now seeks review of not only the appellate court's determination that defendants were entitled to a judgment because they did not commence or continue the prosecution, but also challenges the circuit court's findings on the remaining elements of plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim. Plaintiff also challenges the dismissal of the remaining state law claims, IIED, civil conspiracy, and the derivative claims.

This Court should affirm the appellate court's decision affirming the circuit court's grant of summary judgment in favor of defendants. Neither in plaintiff's petition for leave to appeal nor in his brief does he provide a reason to justify expanding the tort of malicious prosecution to hold police to answer for decisions made by prosecutors when there is no evidence police conduct was a proximate cause of the prosecutor's allegedly wrongful decision to prosecute, a decision which otherwise would not have happened. In addition, despite plaintiff's assertion, there is no conflict in the law as to the "commencement or continuation" element. The law on the threshold element of malicious prosecution has been settled and clear for many years under Illinois precedent and the appellate court's decision was solidly in line with it. The appellate court should be affirmed, and if this Court finds reason to address the remaining elements, the circuit court's decision finding three other solid bases for summary judgment should be upheld as well.

ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Should defendants be required to stand trial for the disfavored tort of malicious prosecution and related torts where all prosecution decisions were made by the McLean County State's Attorney, there was clear probable cause for the prosecution, defendants lacked malice, and the murder charge against plaintiff was dismissed without any determination that indicated plaintiff was innocent of the murder.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Murder

On August 28, 1993, Jennifer Lockmiller's decomposed body was found in her apartment in Normal, Illinois. Lockmiller was a student at Illinois State University at the time. Lockmiller had been strangled with an electrical cord from an alarm clock in her bedroom, and had been stabbed in the chest with scissors. (C00327, ¶9).

Lockmiller's body was found by her close friend, Morgan Keefe (now Hartman). Keefe immediately told the police "I know who did it," and reported that Lockmiller was deathly afraid of her former boyfriend, plaintiff Alan Beaman. (C00327, ¶10). According to Keefe, plaintiff broke down Lockmiller's door several times and threatened suicide if she broke up with him. (C00327, ¶10; C00243, C02993, C01156, C01135, C02613, C00359).

The crime scene was a two-story frame apartment building containing four apartments. Lockmiller's body was found in apartment No. 4, which was on the west end of the second floor. The police concluded there were no signs of recent forced entry, and that all signs of damage to the apartment door frame were present prior to the date of Lockmiller's murder, actually the result of plaintiff's earlier forced entries to her apartment. (C00327, ¶11-12; C02243, C02993, C01156, C01135, C02613, C00359) (C00328, ¶13; C02243, C02993, C026313, C00359). A cabinet door under the kitchen sink was open, and a plastic garbage can was lying on its side in front of the open cabinet. A bag of garbage was found on the living room sofa filled with trash, with its contents spilling out. (C00328, ¶14-15; C02243, C02993, C02613).

Two book bags and Lockmiller's purse were on a table; all three were closed and undisturbed. Lockmiller's purse contained her driver's license and other identification, a wallet with $17.71 in cash, several credit cards and other personal effects. Officers did not detect any burglary signs because no items of value were missing, and there was new damage to the front door. The television was on and the air conditioning unit was running, both located in the living room. Lockmiller's grey Pontiac Sunbird had been parked for several days outside the front door to the building. (C00328-329, ¶16-17; C02311, C02613, C02993, C02243, C00693, C01156).

The door to Lockmiller's bedroom was open. A hole, approximately ten inches in diameter, was found on the south wall of the bedroom. NPD detectives learned plaintiff bashed the hole in the bedroom wall during an argument with Lockmiller weeks earlier. (C00329, ¶18; C02243, C02993, C02877). Several letters were located under Lockmiller's bed and placed into evidence. (C00331, ¶23; C02311, C02993, C01156).

The bedroom contained a single bed and a set of bunk beds. Lockmiller's body was found on the floor in between the beds in a supine position. Investigators could find no physical evidence of rape. A pair of scissors with red plastic handles was embedded in the center of Lockmiller's chest. The autopsy revealed Lockmiller died from strangulation and likely she was stabbed when she was already dead or her heart barely beating. Multiple other stab wounds were noted in the skin on Lockmiller's chest, apparently made with the scissors. (C00330, ¶20; C02243, C02993, C02613). A clock radio was on the floor next to Lockmiller's head, and the cord from the clock radio was wrapped around and tied in front of Lockmiller's neck. A box fan was resting on the scissors in Lockmiller's chest, covering her face. (C00330-331, ¶21-22; C02243, C02993, C02613).

No defensive wounds were found on her body, and there were no signs of forced entry into the apartment. (C00331, ¶25). The police and prosecutors believed the murder was a crime of passion, involving an act of vengeance of some type, and that Lockmiller knew her killer. (C00331, ¶26). Two of plaintiff's fingerprints were identified on the clock used to strangle Lockmiller. One of plaintiff's fingerprints was on the back of the clock near the cord and another on the bottom of the clock. (C00331, ¶24).

The Murder Investigation

At the time of the Lockmiller murder investigation, defendants Timothy Freesmeyer, Dave Warner and Frank Zayas were police officers for the Town of Normal Police Department ("NPD"), and worked in the NPD's Criminal Investigations Division ("CID"). Freesmeyer was an investigator, Warner was an evidence technician, and Zayas was a lieutenant in charge of CID at the time. (C00325-326, ¶¶2-5). Tony Daniels was also a detective in CID and was involved in the Lockmiller murder investigation. (C00326, ¶6). James Souk was the Chief of the Felony Division in the McLean County State's Attorney's Office. Souk was the lead prosecutor in plaintiff's prosecution. (C00326, ¶7). Charles Reynard was the elected State's Attorney for McLean County at the time of the murder and prosecution. (C00326, ¶8).

On the day Lockmiller's body was discovered, a meeting was held in the NPD with Police Chief James Taylor, several CID detectives, Souk, and McLean County Coroner Dan Brady to discuss the case. The group discovered that plaintiff was in Rockford, and Tony Daniels and Rob Hospelhorn, another NPD Detective, were assigned to go to Rockford to interview plaintiff that night. (C00331-332, ¶27).

Daniels and Hospelhorn conducted a short interview of plaintiff that night in Rockford, which plaintiff terminated abruptly. Daniels and Hospelhorn came away from it believing plaintiff's conduct was suspicious. They were particularly interested that while plaintiff was questioned about his relationship with Lockmiller, he never asked if something had happened to her. Daniels and Hospelhorn returned to Rockford the following day to attempt to talk to plaintiff again, but were told he was represented by counsel and would not talk to the detectives. (C00332, ¶28).

Throughout the first six weeks after the murder, every detective in CID worked on the investigation. Dozens of friends, neighbors, boyfriends, relatives and acquaintances were interviewed. Zayas, as the head of CID, assigned different parts of the investigation, and each detective worked on various facets of the case. (C00332, ¶29). The detectives in CID met periodically to discuss the investigation. At times, Souk or other attorneys from the State's Attorney's Office attended as well. (C00332, ¶30).

Morgan Keefe

Morgan Keefe (now Hartman) was Lockmiller's best friend. Immediately after discovering Lockmiller's body, Keefe called 911 and told the dispatcher that "I know who did it .... [Lockmiller] had this psycho ex-boyfriend that she broke up with. His name's Alan, he went to Wesleyan and I only met him once and he was psycho and he used to harass her all the time and he used to break down her door." (C00333, ¶32; C02785, C02613, C01135, C03010). Warner interviewed Keefe that day, and discovered that Keefe and Lockmiller went to a movie on the Tuesday night before Lockmiller was found; they left the theater around midnight and that was the last time Keefe saw or spoke with Lockmiller. Keefe said Lockmiller had been dating plaintiff, but when she tried to break away from plaintiff, he would threaten suicide. Plaintiff broke down the door to Lockmiller's apartment a few times and Lockmiller's landlord fixed the lock. One night Keefe went to Lockmiller's apartment and there was a chair and a big beam against the front door. When Keefe opened the door, Lockmiller started screaming. Keefe told her, "Jen, it's me. It's ok," and Lockmiller said, "[Alan] broke down the door awhile ago." Keefe described Lockmiller as terribly afraid of plaintiff. (C00333-334, ¶34; C01135, C02785).

Lockmiller's Neighbors

Liza Everett and Lori Solomon, who lived in the apartment directly below Lockmiller, told NPD detectives they overheard fights repeatedly between Lockmiller and a man who drove a silver Ford Escort. Plaintiff drove a silver/grey Ford Escort. (C00334, ¶35; C01156, C02311).

David Singley, who lived directly across the hall from Lockmiller, told NPD detectives that a month before Lockmiller's murder he overheard an argument between Lockmiller and plaintiff, during which plaintiff tried to break into Lockmiller's apartment by kicking and throwing himself against her apartment door. Singley told police that plaintiff ran around the apartment parking lot yelling "slut." He returned to her apartment a short time later to yell something like "I see your cherry stain on the bed;" and "you slept with him but you wouldn't sleep with me;" and "the only reason you dated me was to go to bed with my friend." (C00334-335, ¶36; C01156).

Susan Jenkins, who lived with Singley, described this same incident to NPD, telling detectives that plaintiff seemed so “absolutely crazed” that she was afraid to call the police because she thought that if she did plaintiff would beat Lockmiller in response. (C00335, ¶37; C01156). Singley also told the police that he heard certain sounds in Lockmiller’s apartment on the day of the murder that could suggest she was still alive at approximately 2:00 p.m. However, both Freesmeyer and Souk believed Singley was mistaken about the day he heard these sounds. (C00977, at 302-304; C02311, at 1998-2000).

Time of Death

Dan Brady, the McLean County Coroner, opined that Lockmiller’s body was in her apartment for 2 to 4 days before she was discovered. The coroner estimated the time of death being between 9:00 a.m. on August 25, 1993 and 9:00 a.m. on August 27, 1993. (C00335, ¶38; C02993, C02613, C03193).

Claudine Moss told NPD detectives she spoke to Lockmiller at 8:00 a.m. on August 25, 1993, about a kitten Lockmiller was advertising for sale. Moss told police she and her husband went to Lockmiller’s apartment to look at the cat around 4:20 p.m. that day, but Lockmiller did not answer her door. (C00335, ¶39; C02613, C02188).

NPD detectives obtained Lockmiller’s class schedule for August 25, 1993 and learned that she had four classes on that date: (a) 9:00-9:50 a.m.; (b) 10:00-10:50 a.m.; (c) 11:00-11:50; and (d) 2:00-2:50 p.m. Lockmiller attended her first three classes, but did not attend her fourth class, which began at 2:00 p.m., and Lockmiller did not make a work meeting she was supposed to attend at 8:00 p.m. that night. (C00335-336, ¶40; C02613, C01156). NPD detectives were unable to find any person who saw Lockmiller alive after her 11:00-11:50 a.m. class on August 25, 1993. (C00336, ¶41; C02613).

Plaintiff's Alibi

Freesmeyer interviewed plaintiff On October 11, 1993. The day before, NPD detectives learned that plaintiff made a deposit at Bell Federal Savings and Loan Bank, located at 1466 S. Alpine Road, Rockford, at approximately 10:11 a.m. on August 25. (C00336, ¶44; C01156, C02613). During the interview, plaintiff said that on August 25, he arrived home from work shortly after 9:00 a.m. and went to sleep until his parents woke him up at 3:30-4:00 p.m. when they got home. (C00336, ¶42; C01156, C02613). Plaintiff's supervisor where he worked, Dennis Clark (plaintiff's uncle), confirmed to NPD detectives that plaintiff got off work on August 25 at 9:00 a.m. (C00336, ¶43; C02613). NPD investigators discovered that plaintiff's attorney had subpoenaed information from the bank about a month earlier, and concluded then that plaintiff purposely lied about having gone to bed after work on the day of the murder.

Based on the distance between Rockford and Bloomington, NPD detectives believed it was possible for plaintiff to have left Bell Federal, traveled to Bloomington to commit the murder, and returned to Rockford by 3:00 p.m. (C00336, ¶45; C02613, C00359).

Plaintiff's Stormy Relationship with Lockmiller

The NPD detectives discovered that plaintiff and Lockmiller had broken off their stormy relationship approximately one month before her murder. During their two-year relationship, plaintiff and Lockmiller broke up and reunited about 18 times. They had many loud arguments, witnessed by their friends and neighbors. One argument resulted in plaintiff drinking a bottle of nail polish remover as a suicide attempt, real or feigned, and the police being called. (C00337, ¶46; C00359, C00977, C02613). Friends and family told NPD that Lockmiller was afraid of plaintiff and she intended to seek an order of protection. (C00338, ¶52). Investigators found in the apartment undated letters plaintiff wrote to Lockmiller about his passion for her. Plaintiff wrote that he loved Lockmiller, “more passionately than Romeo did Juliet, more hopelessly than Ophelia did Hamlet, more vengefully than Medea, Jason” and added, “Don’t worry, I won’t kill anybody, I don’t believe in that. I do unto others as I would have them unto me (from now on).” Plaintiff said, “I really just want you to be with me and only me,” and other expressions of his passion that he felt for her. (C00337, ¶47; C01156, C02311).

The detectives discovered that during one of the instances in which plaintiff broke down Lockmiller’s apartment door, she was with her friend and sometimes lover, Larbi John Murray (“John Doe”). Todd Barth, Lockmiller’s friend, told NPD detectives that around 3 a.m., in the morning during the July before the murder, Lockmiller called him to say she had moved a dresser in front of the door because plaintiff was trying to break in. (C00337-338, ¶48; C00977, C01224, C03199).

On July 25, 1993, plaintiff suspected that Lockmiller was seeing and possibly sleeping with plaintiff’s roommate, Michael Swaine, and again knocked down Lockmiller’s apartment door. Swaine asked plaintiff around 2:00 a.m. that night to borrow his car to go to a party. Thinking Swaine was lying (he was), plaintiff followed Swaine on his bicycle to Lockmiller’s apartment. Plaintiff banged on the door yelling, “I knew it! I know you are in there,” and kicked in the door, looking for Swaine, who was hiding in the closet. (C00338, ¶49; C00359, C03193, C02877, C03143). On another occasion, plaintiff pushed his way into Lockmiller's apartment and rummaged through her trash can looking for Swaine's used condoms as evidence of their affair. (C00338, ¶50; C00359).

Kris Perry, a close friend of both Lockmiller and plaintiff, told NPD Detective Hospelhorn that Lockmiller told Perry plaintiff once said he would kill her then kill himself. Hospelhorn interviewed Perry a second time a few days later and Perry changed his story to say that plaintiff only threatened to kill himself, not Lockmiller. (C00338, ¶51; C00481). Heidi Steinman, a close friend of Lockmiller's, told NPD detectives that plaintiff treated Lockmiller like she was his property. Lockmiller told Steinman that plaintiff once threw a glass at Lockmiller, and had also thrown and broken a lamp in her apartment. (C00339, ¶53; C03017, C03038).

Plaintiff's good friend, Mike Mackey, told police that Lockmiller would "fuck with his [plaintiff's] head so much that he would just go crazy . . . he would be irrational and mood swings . . . it just made him suicidal . . . she just drove him crazy." (C00339, ¶55; C03102). NPD detectives learned that in the summer of 1993, plaintiff was seeing a psychiatrist, was not eating or sleeping, and was "a mess" and "a mental wreck" because of what he was "going through with Jen." (C00339, ¶56; C02877). Another witness, Jennifer Seig, told NPD detectives she believed plaintiff threatened to kill Lockmiller and Swaine if he ever caught them in bed together. (C00339, ¶57; C03121).

Katy Corbett, another of plaintiff's friends, told NPD detectives that at one time Lockmiller was ready to end it with plaintiff but did not because he "went through these times when he would be violent and he punched a huge hole in her wall at her apartment," and "he would get really upset." Lockmiller told Corbett she was going to wait until the end of the summer to break it off because she did not want to make plaintiff upset while he was still in town working. Corbett stated that if “Alan was in the right frame of mind, he could be violent.” Corbett said every time she saw plaintiff “in these violent rages he would usually take it out on something else, like there is holes in the apartment walls everywhere at our complex . . . he would bash things.” (C00339-340, ¶58; C03038).

Swaine also confirmed to NPD detectives that plaintiff became violent and punched a large hole in Lockmiller’s bedroom wall. (C00340, ¶59; C02877). Michael Bowen, Lockmiller’s friend, informed NPD detectives that Lockmiller told him plaintiff “pushed her before.” (C00340, ¶60; C01218). Meredith Haynes, another friend of Lockmiller’s, said that Lockmiller told her that plaintiff broke into Lockmiller’s apartment or broke down the door several times, pushed her around and knocked things over. (C00340, ¶61; C03134).

Swaine’s Relationship with Lockmiller

During the summer of 1993, Michael Swaine and plaintiff were roommates and worked together. Swaine began a sexual relationship with Lockmiller in June 1993, while she and plaintiff were still dating. (C00340-341, ¶62).

On July 25, 1993, plaintiff searched Swaine’s bedroom while he was at work for evidence that Lockmiller and Swaine were having a relationship. During the search, plaintiff found two letters from Lockmiller to Swaine, which plaintiff felt confirmed his suspicions about them. Plaintiff also found an open box of condoms in his and Swaine’s apartment and believed some condoms were missing from the box. Plaintiff thought the missing condoms meant Swaine was having sex with Lockmiller. (C00341, ¶64; C02613, C02877, C03121, C03048).

Plaintiff took the letters he found to the theater where he and Swaine worked together, and angrily confronted Swaine about his relationship with Lockmiller, accusing Swaine of “fucking my girlfriend.” (C0034-3421, ¶65; C02877, C03038). Plaintiff then went immediately to Lockmiller’s apartment, and pounded on her locked door. (C00342, ¶66; C03017). Steinman, who was with Lockmiller in her apartment at the time, told NPD detectives that plaintiff said, “Don’t do this to me Jen. I’m going to kill myself” and kept threatening suicide until Lockmiller let him in. Once inside, plaintiff angrily confronted Lockmiller with the letters. He went through Lockmiller’s bathroom garbage can and found a tampon applicator, and said “See this is prophylactic. I know it, I know it. You had sex with him.” (C00342, ¶67; C03017).

Plaintiff Leaves for Ohio

Plaintiff left Bloomington on July 25 after confronting Swaine and Lockmiller and went to Ohio, where he stayed with a friend until August 4. (C00342, ¶68; C02877). Before leaving Bloomington, plaintiff gave his theater professor, Dr. Brown, a note stating “. . . But the things that I’ve found out and witnessed about my aforementioned roommate and my ex-fiancé have crushed any spirit. I had to get out of the slump, and it’s really just time for me to leave. I’m just afraid I’d cause even more hell to break loose.” plaintiff attached the two letters he found in Swaine’s room to the note he left for Dr. Brown. (C00342-343, ¶69; C02613). While he was in Ohio, plaintiff called Lockmiller eight times. (C00343, ¶70; C03057, C02188).

Plaintiff Returns to Bloomington

On August 4, plaintiff returned to Bloomington to get his car. He went to the apartment he shared with Swaine and saw him driving Lockmiller's car. (C00343, ¶71; C02877). That same day, plaintiff went to Lockmiller's apartment for about 30-45 minutes "to talk to her because we had broken up." Plaintiff then drove Lockmiller to class, and when he dropped her off, she kissed him goodbye, and he told her "that might be the last time we ever kissed" because he did not think he could ever trust her again. (C00343, ¶72; C03143). Plaintiff told NPD detectives that August 4, 1993 was the last time he saw Lockmiller and that he had "no idea" if she was dating anyone "and didn't want to know." Plaintiff returned to Rockford on August 4, 1993. (C00343, ¶73-74; C03143, C02613).

Plaintiff's Contact with Lockmiller from Rockford

Heidi Steinman told NPD detectives that plaintiff called Lockmiller from Rockford to tell her that he loved her and missed her. (C00344, ¶78; C03017, C02613). Lockmiller's phone records show she made 28 calls to plaintiff's Rockford home on August 22, 1993. The next day, August 23, plaintiff and Lockmiller spoke on the telephone for 13 minutes. (C00344, ¶79; C02613, C02188). Plaintiff later told Freesmeyer that Lockmiller was asking to get back together with him during the August 23 call, but plaintiff said "No, I don't want to talk to you. You fucked my fucking roommate and I don't want to talk to you," then hung up. (C00344, ¶80; C03060).

The Other Suspects

In addition to plaintiff and Swaine, Stacey "Bubba" Gates, John Murray ("John Doe") and Rob Curtis were investigated as possible suspects early in the investigation. Like Swaine, Gates was ruled out as a suspect due to his alibi. (C00345, ¶82).

Tony Daniels was in charge of investigating Murray. Daniels and Hospelhorn interrogated Murray twice, and tape recorded the statements. A September 2, 1993 interview with Murray revealed that he sometimes dated Lockmiller. Murray said he visited Lockmiller's apartment sometime between August 19 and 23, and believed he left Bloomington to go home to Byron, Illinois on August 24 at 3 p.m., and was in Byron until September 1. Murray reported that one time when plaintiff and Lockmiller were dating, plaintiff "freaked out" and kicked in Lockmiller's door when Murray was there, and grabbed Lockmiller's arm. Lockmiller told Murray she was scared to break up with plaintiff because she "did not know what he was going to do" and that plaintiff was a "psycho." (C00345, ¶83; C00693, C00481, C01218, C01224, C01252).

In a follow-up interview on September 8, 1993, after talking to his live-in girlfriend, Debbie Mackoway, Murray corrected several facts he got wrong in his first statement. Murray corrected that he last saw Lockmiller on August 21, which he recalled after reviewing Mackoway's work schedule. He corrected that Mackoway left their apartment for work at 6:30 a.m. on August 25, and he was at their apartment that day from the time she left for work until she returned at 1 p.m. Murray corrected that he did not leave Bloomington for Byron until 4 p.m. that day. He returned to Bloomington on September 2, 1993. Murray admitted he sold Lockmiller marijuana, and she owed him $20. Murray offered to take a polygraph and to provide his telephone records to the NPD. When Murray learned of Lockmiller's death, he and Mackoway moved to a hotel because they believed plaintiff killed Lockmiller and were afraid of him. (C00345-346, ¶84; C01252, C00481).

On September 30, 1993, Daniels took Murray to the Morton Crime Lab for a polygraph. Terrance McCann was the polygraph examiner who administered the test to Murray. McCann was unable to obtain a result because Murray could not follow McCann's directions, although McCann did not conclude at that time that Murray intentionally prevented a result to avoid the examination. (C00347, ¶86).

A week later, defendant Warner received the polygraph report about Murray, which was sent to Warner because he made the original appointment with the lab for the polygraph. When Warner received the report he gave it to Daniels. Warner did not know what Daniels did with the report. (C00347, ¶87; C00548). Warner believed the State Police Lab also sent Murray's report directly to the State's Attorney's Office, but the State's Attorney never did receive that report. (C00347-348, ¶88).

Daniels could not deny receiving Murray's polygraph report from Warner, only that he had no memory of it. Daniels testified that he believed Warner did not and would not have intentionally suppressed the Murray polygraph report. (C00348, ¶89-90; C00693). Daniels gave several possible explanations for the Murray polygraph report not getting to the State's Attorney file: Warner may have given it to Daniels and he misplaced it; an NPD intern who made copies for the file could have misplaced it; Daniels could have accidentally put the report in a different file; or the report could have otherwise fallen through the cracks somewhere in the NPD. (C00348, ¶91; C00693).

Freesmeyer's entire knowledge regarding Murray was documented in a comprehensive report Freesmeyer completed. Freesmeyer organized three polygraph examinations at the NPD on October 12, 1993, with Kenneth Frankenberry, a state polygraph examiner from Rockford. Frankenberry was to administer polygraphs for plaintiff's friend, Chris Carbone; for Murray; and for plaintiff. Murray did not show up for his examination, and plaintiff refused. Freesmeyer had no other involvement with Murray. Freesmeyer did not interview Murray, and believed he never met with him. (C00348-349, ¶92; C00359, C01156).

In February, 1994, several NPD investigators met with Chicago Police Department homicide detectives to discuss the investigation. According to Daniels, alternative suspects, including Murray, were discussed at that meeting. The Chicago detectives recommended that the NPD investigators continue to focus on plaintiff as the prime suspect. (C00349, ¶93; C00693).

The Decision to Charge Plaintiff

On May 16, 1994, a meeting was held to decide if plaintiff should be arrested for Lockmiller's murder. NPD Chief James Taylor, Zayas, Daniels, Freesmeyer, State's Attorney Reynard, and Assistant State's Attorney Souk attended the meeting. (C00349, ¶94; C00977). The investigators provided input about what the nine month investigation had produced. As a result of that discussion, State's Attorney Reynard decided that plaintiff should be charged with Lockmiller's murder. NPD investigators did not lobby or urge the State's Attorney to charge plaintiff. The decision was solely made by Reynard, and Souk strongly agreed with the decision. According to Souk, no one at the meeting expressed any opposition to the decision to charge plaintiff. (C00349-350, ¶95; C00977).

Tony Daniels testified that he suggested that additional work on the case be done before plaintiff's arrest, but Souk responded "I think we've got our guy," and that "we went as far as we can with this case. We are going to go ahead and issue a warrant for [plaintiff's] arrest." (C00350, ¶97).

Freesmeyer agreed with the decision to proceed against plaintiff. Freesmeyer concluded there was probable cause for the arrest and prosecution of plaintiff based on the following information developed during the murder investigation.

- Plaintiff's fingerprints were on the murder weapon, an alarm clock used to strangle Lockmiller.
- NPD investigators discovered that one time plaintiff pulled a garbage bag out of a garbage can in Lockmiller's apartment to search for evidence of condoms deposited by Swaine or some other Lockmiller lover. At the crime scene police found a garbage bag had been pulled out of the can and was sitting on the living room couch.
- The police found voluminous letters plaintiff had written Lockmiller, which showed an intense passion for her. Telephone records showed 28 phone calls from Lockmiller to plaintiff's home residence within the days before the murder.
- There was a hole in plaintiff's alibi.
- Plaintiff had broken down Lockmiller's apartment door to get into her apartment twice before.
- Freesmeyer had asked plaintiff several times in interviews whether he had any evidence or information that could clear him. Plaintiff's response was that he had nothing.
- Freesmeyer asked plaintiff several times whether he had gone anywhere after he got off work the morning of the murder. Plaintiff said he did not. In reality, plaintiff had gone to a bank in Rockford that morning. A video from the bank showed plaintiff in the bank at 10:11 a.m., when plaintiff had told the police he got off work at 9:00 a.m., and went straight to bed.
- Freesmeyer knew that plaintiff's attorney had requested and received information from the Rockford bank in September, 1993, so Freesmeyer concluded plaintiff knew he had not gone straight to bed after work that morning and was lying.
- Plaintiff made several suspicious statements on an overhear with Swaine. Plaintiff said Lockmiller had "dug into him with every ounce of sharp silver she had." Freesmeyer concluded that the statement was not a normal expression and matched that Lockmiller was stabbed in the chest with a silver scissors, which had not been publicly reported when the statement was made.

- Plaintiff told Swaine on the overheard that he knew Swaine was sleeping with Lockmiller because “that pussy never tasted the same,” which seemed to be a crude reference immediately after her death about somebody he supposedly once loved.
- Plaintiff told Swaine that Lockmiller was never going to be happy. In Freesmeyer’s homicide investigation training, a killer will often say something like that to rationalize his action in his own mind.
- Plaintiff told Swaine that “she (Lockmiller) trained me good and she would have trained you just the same.” Freesmeyer saw the statement as plaintiff offering another justification for his actions.
- A fan covered Lockmiller’s face, which Freesmeyer saw as fitting a pattern where a person murders someone he knows then cannot face it.
- Lockmiller was stabbed multiple times after she was already dead, or close to dead. According to the coroner’s report Lockmiller died of strangulation. There was no blood spatter at the crime scene, which indicated Lockmiller’s heart was not pumping when stabbed. It was inconsistent with the act of a random person, and indicated the killer had vengeance as a goal. Lockmiller had hurt plaintiff very deeply, and no one else was known to have any passionate feelings about Lockmiller.
- There was no forced entry into Lockmiller’s apartment. Valuables were lying around the apartment, including her purse. Freesmeyer thought a burglar would have taken things and there would have been a forced entry of some type.

(C00350-352, ¶98; C00359, C00156).

Souk and Reynard were aware of the evidence developed during the murder investigation. Souk considered it very significant that plaintiff’s fingerprints were only found on the clock radio -- the murder weapon -- and not anywhere else in the apartment. (C00352, ¶99). He believed the motive evidence against plaintiff was the strongest he had ever seen; that there was sufficient evidence to establish probable cause, and a reasonable chance of prevailing at trial. (C00352, ¶99; C00977).

Todd Heyse, the owner of 412 Main Street where Lockmiller lived and the murder occurred, told police after plaintiff was charged that he saw two people fitting the descriptions of plaintiff and Lockmiller around the time of the murder, possibly on the exact day. Heyse contacted the NPD after he saw a picture of plaintiff in the paper following his arrest in May 1994. Seeing plaintiff's photograph jarred Heyse's memory of seeing the two people and prompted him to call the police. (C00353-354, ¶106; C00977, C02845).

The Prosecution

Souk was the lead prosecutor in plaintiff's case and presented the case to the grand jury. A true bill was returned on July 14, 1994. In January, 1995, Freesmeyer moved into the State's Attorney's Office as they began to prepare for plaintiff's trial. (C00354, ¶111-112).

In Souk's mind, plaintiff was the only real suspect. Souk concluded after reviewing the information he had about John Murray that he was not a person of interest. At the time of plaintiff's prosecution, Souk did not believe there was any evidence to suggest that Murray killed Lockmiller. Souk did not believe Murray had any motive to kill Lockmiller, even though Souk was aware of their prior sexual relationship. Souk also knew that Murray gave narcotics and marijuana to Lockmiller, and that there were conflicting statements about whether Lockmiller owed Murray money for drugs. (C00354-355, ¶113; C00977). Souk also knew that Murray made differing statements regarding his alibi in his two interviews with Daniels and Hospelhorn. Souk did not consider the inconsistency suspicious. (C00355, ¶114; C00977). Souk was also aware of three criminal charges filed against Murray, two felony drug charges and a misdemeanor domestic battery case brought by Mackoway. (C00355, ¶116; C00977).

Souk was aware at the time of plaintiff's trial that Mackoway reported that Murray started taking steroids in January, 1994, and that he then began acting erratically, which she attributed to the steroid use. (C00355-C00356, ¶117, 199; C00977; C0289). According to Mackoway, Murray was never physically violent toward her until January, 1994 when he started using steroids. (C00356, ¶118; C02829). Mackoway never believed Murray killed Lockmiller. (C00356, ¶120; C02829).

The State subpoenaed Murray for plaintiff's trial, and he was on Souk's witness list. Souk flagged information in the State's Attorney's files about Murray's pending cases so the Assistant State's Attorney handling those cases, Robert Freitag, would not offer Murray a plea in case they wanted to call Murray in plaintiff's trial. Souk was concerned a plea in Murray's pending cases could have been used to impeach him if the State called him as a witness, so Souk noted that Freitag should see Souk before any deals were made with Murray. (C00356, ¶122; C00977, C01752). Souk ultimately decided not to call Murray at trial.

On April 1, 1995, a McLean County jury found plaintiff guilty of Lockmiller's murder. After plaintiff's conviction was reversed, Souk was not surprised that the McLean County State's Attorney chose not to re prosecute him. After 13 years it would take a monumental effort by the police and prosecutors to regather the witnesses and evidence again. (C00357, ¶124; C00977).

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Summary judgment is proper where "the pleadings, depositions, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. 735 ILCS 5/2-1005(c). A grant of summary judgment is reviewed de novo. Majca v. Beekil, 183 Ill. 2d 407, 416 (1998). Summary judgment for the defendant is proper if the plaintiff cannot establish any element of the cause of action. Governmental Interinsurance Exchange v. Judge, 221 Ill. 2d 195, 215 (2006).

ARGUMENT

I. The Appellate Court Properly Affirmed the Granting of Summary Judgment on Plaintiff's Malicious Prosecution Claim Where the Evidence Showed the State's Attorney Initiated the Prosecution, There Was Clear Probable Cause for the Prosecution, There Was No Evidence of Malice, and The Murder Prosecution Was Never Terminated in a Manner Indicative of Innocence.

The appellate court properly affirmed summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim. Under Illinois law, malicious prosecution requires proof of: 1) commencement or continuation of a criminal proceeding by the defendant; 2) absence of probable cause for the proceeding; 3) malice; 4) termination of the proceeding in a manner indicative of the plaintiff's innocence; and 5) damages. Swick v. Liataud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 513 (1996).<sup>1</sup> If one of the required elements is missing, the malicious prosecution claim fails. Id. at 512. The appellate court addressed only the "commencement" element and correctly concluded there was no evidence that any defendant influenced in any way the State's Attorney's independent judgment to initiate the prosecution. The court's decision on the commencement element was enough to affirm the circuit court, so it went no further.

A. The Appellate Court Applied the Right Standard

Plaintiff argues the appellate court applied a wrong standard for determining when a police officer commences a prosecution. Plaintiff believes three different approaches have developed to analyze the “commencement or continuance” element involving a police officer. Plaintiff describes these approaches as follows:

---

<sup>1</sup> The requirements of malice and lack of probable cause are also codified as an immunity from liability in Section 2-208 of the Illinois Local Governmental and Governmental Employees Tort Immunity Act, 745 ILCS 10/2-208.

- The “significant role test,” which allows a plaintiff to proceed against a police officer when the officer played a “significant role” in commencing or continuing the prosecution. Plaintiff cites Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975 (4th Dist. 1988), as representative of this test.
- The “advice and cooperation test,” which requires “participation of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation,” which plaintiff sees applied in Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d 635, 647 (1st Dist. 2002).
- The “pressure, influence, or misstatement test,” applied by the appellate court here, in which the plaintiff must establish that an “officer pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecution relied.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527 ¶58 (hereinafter referred to as “Op.¶58”).

Plaintiff then lobbies for the Court to adopt his significant role test, which would appear to be the easiest for a plaintiff to establish to expose police to malicious prosecution litigation. These supposedly different approaches however, are actually quite consistent with each other, even if some of the language used by the courts differs, and in the end all find exactly what the appellate court found here, a need to prove causation.

The cases using what plaintiff considers different “approaches” all look for some action by the police that affects the prosecutors’ independent judgment, in other words, actions which are the proximate cause of the prosecution. Courts have recognized that liability for malicious prosecution is not confined to situations where the defendant officer made the prosecutorial decision and signed a complaint against the plaintiff, but more must be proven than mere involvement, even significant involvement, in the investigation. Plaintiff's "significant role" approach has never been accepted as a determinative test, or defined with any precision as a way to measure whether a police officer commenced a prosecution. Whenever it has been used the court using it has looked for a direct causal connection between police conduct and the prosecutorial decision.

Plaintiff gets the significant role language chiefly from Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 975. Frye, however, dealt mainly with malice and probable cause, not commencement. The "significant role" language described a class of police officers who could potentially face malicious prosecution, but only if "all of the elements of the tort are present," including commencement. Frye, at 975. The Frye court never equated the significant role a police officer may play in a case with the commencement of its prosecution. In fact, regarding the defendant Williams in that case, who worked with the defendant O'Neil on the investigation leading to the plaintiff's arrest and prosecution, the appellate court ruled he should be cut from the case because he "did not, as a matter of law, instigate a common law malicious prosecution of Frye . . ." Frye at 975. A "significant role" analysis never entered into that conclusion.

Certainly other cases also utilize that language, but at the core of these cases is the same causation analysis the appellate court used here. For example, in Bianchi v. McQueen, 2016 IL App (2d) 150646, ¶¶72-73, the court used the "significant role" language, but to describe allegations that private investigators hired by the prosecutor provided evidence they knew was false which caused the prosecutor to bring charges against the plaintiff. Similarly, in Rodgers v. People's Gas Light & Coke Co., 315 Ill. App. 3d 340, 348 (1st Dist. 2000), the court used the “significant role” language referring to an employer who, working with a private security agency, entrapped the plaintiff in a drug transaction to fabricate grounds to terminate him from employment. The “significant role,” however, was entrapping the plaintiff into delivering drugs, a crime he never would have been charged with but for the set-up by the defendants.

In Collier v. City of Chicago, 2015 WL 5081408, *9 (N.D.Ill. 2015), the court repeated the Frye language, that “liability extends to all persons who played a significant role in the prosecution of the plaintiff, provided all of the elements of the tort are present.” The “significant role” in the prosecution there, however, was that the defendant officers fabricated evidence and knowingly included false statements in their reports, which in turn caused the plaintiff’s prosecution.

The “significant role” language has never been applied to mean what plaintiff argues it means, or to support his ability to establish the commencement element here. The “significant role” observation may have achieved Westlaw Headnote status, but it has not supplanted the causation standard the appellate court applied here.

Plaintiff is not in actuality asking this Court to clarify differing standards, he is asking the Court to jettison any test in favor of a loose, diluted approach that has no real meaning in the real world of investigation of serious crime. He reveals his true intent in arguing that “Of course, ordinary officers have significant roles in commencing or continuing prosecution, but they do not go after innocent people because of malice and arrest without probable cause.” (Pltf. Brief, p. 28). Plaintiff wants the commencement element eliminated so the case goes straight to probable cause and malice. But nothing could be more unfair than to expose hard-working dedicated police officers to the rigors of protracted litigation for decisions ultimately made by prosecutors with absolute immunity for those decisions.

Plaintiff seeks a substantial expansion of the scope of the malicious prosecution tort -- exposing police to malicious prosecution claims in every major investigation, with the focus on the elements of whether they acted “maliciously” or “without probable cause,” but without regard to whether the police actually played a prosecutorial role. Malicious prosecution claims are not favored under Illinois law. Cult Awareness Network v. Church of Scientology International, 177 Ill. 2d 267, 286, (1997); Joiner v. Benton Ctmy. Bank, 82 Ill. 2d 40, 44 (1980); Shedd v. Patterson, 302 Ill. 355, 359 (1922). Public policy favors the exposure of crime. Expanding the tort to mere “involvement” in a prosecution is contrary to many years of this Court’s clear policy expressed in precedent, and by the General Assembly in Section 2-208 of the Illinois Tort Immunity Act (745 ILCS 10/2-208.)

The Seventh Circuit in Reed v. City of Chicago, 77 F.3d 1049, 1053 (7th Cir. 1996), accurately characterized a malicious prosecution action against a police officer as an anomaly, stating “This is because the State’s Attorney, not the police, prosecutes a criminal action . . . and the chain of causation is broken [following an arrest] by an indictment, absent an allegation of pressure or influence exerted by the police officers, or knowing misstatements made by the officers to the prosecutors.” See also, Colbert v. City of Chicago, 851 F.3d 649, 655 (7th Cir. 2017). In Rehberg v. Paulk, 566 U.S. 356 (2012), discussing testimonial immunity, the United States Supreme Court aptly explained why this anomaly should not be expanded, an observation equally applicable here: “It would thus be anomalous to permit a police officer who testified before a grand jury to be sued for maliciously procuring an unjust prosecution when it is the prosecutor, who is shielded by absolute immunity, who is actually responsible for the decision to prosecute.” The analysis of the tort of malicious prosecution, used by the appellate court here, is the proper one.

Plaintiff asks this Court to create an unfair, untenable rule of law, where police face liability for the decisions of prosecutors, only because they were significantly involved in the investigation that produced the evidence against the plaintiff. Police would face liability for a prosecutor’s bad prosecutorial decision, for a botched prosecution, or even when the prosecutors got it all right but the jury or judge found for the accused anyway. The unimmunized police could face liability for decisions and actions completely out of their control.

Plaintiff and his amici say much about police accountability for reversed convictions, and certainly defendants offer no quarrel with holding police accountable for true wrongful conduct. But no support is offered for a conclusion that as a matter of policy opening the floodgates for malicious prosecution claims against police will have any impact on the reliability of criminal convictions. On the contrary, holding police accountable for merely playing a “significant role” in a case could completely and negatively change how police officers investigate crimes. Plaintiff suggests on page 21 of his brief that police officers should be held liable for “misconduct or biased” investigations, even when it does not pressure, influence or purposely mislead a prosecutor. What plaintiff is suggesting is a new cause of action for a negligent (or willful and wanton) investigation, a claim to hold police liable for investigative mistakes, oversights, miscalculations, or such nebulous concepts as “tunnel vision.” This Court has never endorsed such a cause of action, and the Illinois legislature has expressly precluded it in Section 4-102 of the Tort Immunity Act (745 ILCS 10/4-102).

The appellate court’s approach achieves the right policy in that it requires a plaintiff to show police “pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied,” and “protects officers in their performance of their police work while allowing plaintiffs to seek redress from officers who use fabrications or exert pressure on the prosecutor to secure prosecution of the innocent.” (Op. ¶58.) This is a standard that has been consistently applied by Illinois courts, even if different words are sometimes used to describe it. The United States Supreme Court, again in Rehberg, saw that if the floodgates plaintiff wants this Court to open were opened, police “energy and attention would be diverted from the pressing duty of enforcing the criminal law.” Rehberg, 566 U.S. at 369.

B. The Appellate Court Properly Found that Defendants Did Not Commence or Continue the Prosecution

Plaintiff goes on to argue that the appellate court erred even applying the proximate cause analysis it applied, but his argument pays only lip service to the causation standard. His argument waters down causation to police actions having no impact on the prosecutorial decision.

Here, using a proximate cause analysis, the appellate court properly found no evidence that any defendant urged or lobbied for the prosecution, misled the prosecutors, or exerted any undue influence on their decision. Plaintiff challenges the probative value of the evidence the prosecutors received, but he cannot dispute that the prosecutors had that evidence or contend that they were purposely deprived of other evidence that would have changed their decision. The prosecutors, not the defendant police officers, had the decision-making capacity about who would be charged with Lockmiller's murder. The appellate court looked for and could not find the evidence all courts have looked for in cases like this – evidence that the prosecution would not have occurred absent some malicious conduct by police.

The testimony of the prosecutors and non-party NPD Investigator Tony Daniels showed conclusively that defendants did not initiate or continue the prosecution. The decision to prosecute plaintiff was made by the prosecutors after a nine month investigation, at a meeting on May 16, 1994. (C00349, ¶94). Attending the meeting were NPD investigators Tony Daniels, Freesmeyer, Zayas, and NPD Police Chief James Taylor, along with McLean County State's Attorney Charles Reynard and Assistant State's Attorney James Souk. (C00349, ¶94).

The appellate court properly recognized that the evidence showed that only the prosecutors, Reynard and Souk, made the decision to prosecute plaintiff, and no evidence contradicts this conclusion. Op. ¶62. Reynard and Souk were clear and unequivocal in their testimony that they made the decision to prosecute plaintiff uninfluenced by any defendant. (C02197, p. 71-72; C00977, p. 139-140). Defendants' input was only to discuss the evidence produced during the investigation, an investigation the prosecutors were close to from the beginning.

The appellate court also properly recognized that the deposition testimony of Tony Daniels "supported this conclusion by showing Souk shut down any effort to leave the case open." Op. ¶61. At his deposition, Daniels described wanting to discuss additional investigation he thought should be pursued, which he learned about at a cold-case conference he had recently attended in Florida. When describing the meeting where the decision was made to arrest plaintiff, Daniels testified that Souk stopped Daniels when he began to discuss ideas he brought back from the conference, and instead stated that “he [Souk] thought that they went far enough in the investigation, they were going to go ahead and issue a warrant for Mr. Beaman’s arrest.” (C00350, ¶97; C00693).

Souk drew his own conclusions regarding the evidence that was uncovered during the investigation. Souk was influenced by plaintiff’s obsession with Lockmiller; his breaking down her door on two occasions; his extreme jealousy toward her; his fingerprint on the murder weapon; and so on. (C00352-354, ¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Souk reviewed the information gathered in the investigation, and drew the conclusion that grounds existed to prosecute plaintiff. The decision was made by State’s Attorney Reynard, with Souk’s support. Souk was the only person at the May, 1994 meeting who advocated for or urged plaintiff’s arrest. (C00349-350, ¶95; C00977).

The appellate court properly rejected plaintiff’s position that defendant Freesmeyer pressured or exerted influence on Souk’s decision to prosecute plaintiff. Op. ¶62. Plaintiff argues Freesmeyer initiated the prosecution because he was the “lead investigator” for the NPD, at least for part of the investigation; he arrested plaintiff; testified at the Grand Jury proceeding and trial; tested plaintiff’s alibi; and during the months just prior to the trial, moved into the State’s Attorney’s Office to work with the prosecutors in preparing the case. These are actions that a homicide investigator might perform in any homicide investigation. It is precisely how plaintiff wants this Court to fashion the commencement analysis, to evaluate the “significant role” Freesmeyer played in the case with initiation of the prosecution. None of those actions Freesmeyer performed in his significant role, however, influenced in any way the prosecutors' independent judgment.

Someone serves as a lead investigator in virtually every investigation. There is no support in this Court's precedent or any case law for an argument that the prosecutor's decision is attributed to a lead investigator simply because of that officer's prominent role in the investigation. That Freesmeyer arrested plaintiff is completely irrelevant to the commencement determination. Plaintiff does not allege false arrest. Freesmeyer, in fact, arrested plaintiff on a warrant the State's Attorney caused to be issued. No case has held (or should hold) that arresting a person at a prosecutor's direction can constitute commencement.

Neither could Freesmeyer's testimony before the grand jury and at the trial constitute commencement. Police testify at legal proceedings involving persons charged with crimes. That role carries out the prosecutor's decision, it does not cause it. If Freesmeyer could be found liable for his grand jury testimony, testimonial immunity that protects witnesses from liability and assumes the continued vitality of our legal justice system would be abrogated. Rehberg v. Paulk, 132 S. Ct. 1497, 1508 (2012); Jurgensen v. Haslinger, 295 Ill. App. 3d 139, 141-42 (3d Dist. 1998). The Supreme Court in Rehburg recognized explicitly that police could not be held accountable for a prosecutorial decision by testifying in the prosecution's legal proceedings. 132 S. Ct. at 1508.

That Freesmeyer worked within the prosecutor's office during the three months prior to the trial also means nothing. Freesmeyer moving into the prosecutor's office to assist with trial preparation could not cause or even continue a prosecution that had already begun.

There can be no doubt, based on an independent review of the evidence, that the State's Attorney and his Assistants were convinced of plaintiff's guilt, as Souk explained in significant detail during his deposition. (C00352-354, ¶¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Because Souk has absolute immunity for the prosecution, as plaintiff has conceded, his testimony cannot be attacked for bias or interest. Souk had no motive except to present his honest view of the evidence. Certainly, plaintiff disagrees with Souk's view of the evidence, but that has no impact on the question of initiation of the prosecution.

Plaintiff argues that Freesmeyer lied to the grand jury, and doctored time trials. The appellate court and the Seventh Circuit in the federal appeal both properly found Freesmeyer did not lie or doctor time trials. Op. ¶63. While defendants dispute any misconduct, as a matter of law, none of these claims of misconduct could establish that Freesmeyer initiated the prosecution anyway. Even apart from the witness immunity that protects Freesmeyer for testifying, his testimony at the grand jury and trial could not proximately cause the State's Attorney's decision to prosecute that preceded the testimony. The so-called "doctored" time trials, which did nothing more than test, at the prosecutor's request, plaintiff's alibi, also occurred after the prosecution decision, so they could not have caused it either.

Regarding defendant Warner, the appellate court properly found that "no evidence shows Warner encouraged or exerted pressure on Souk to prosecute." ¶69. Plaintiff argues defendant Warner "hid" the Murray polygraph report. Certainly, Warner did not bury or hide the polygraph or any other evidence, which plaintiff's advocate Tony Daniels himself conceded. (C00348, ¶90; C00693). Nevertheless, allegations of a failure to produce even exculpatory evidence does not itself constitute initiation of a prosecution for a malicious prosecution claim. Szczesniak v. CJC Auto Parts, Inc., 2014 IL App (2d) 130636, ¶13-14; Denton v. Allstate Ins. Co., 152 Ill. App. 3d 578, 584 (1st Dist. 1987); Geisberger v. Vella, 62 Ill. App. 3d 941, 944 (2d Dist. 1978); Logan v. Caterpillar, Inc., 246 F.3d 912, 922 (7th Cir. 2001).

This Court held the Murray polygraph, along with the other unproduced Murray information, could have had an impact on the criminal trial, but the question for malicious prosecution is not whether the polygraph could have had an impact on the trial, the issue for the Supreme Court analyzing a Brady violation, but whether the polygraph could have had an impact on the prosecutor's decision to prosecute. Souk testified it would not have had any impact on the State's Attorney's decision to prosecute. (C00357, ¶123; C00977). Souk was aware of all of the other information about Murray: his charges of domestic abuse and drug transactions, and the report about his steroid use. (C00354-355, ¶113, 116; C00977). Souk never considered Murray a viable suspect because Souk believed Murray had no motive. In fact, Souk intended to call Murray as a witness at the trial to prove plaintiff's violent entry into Lockmiller's apartment while Murray was present, but decided not to because Murray could be impeached by his arrest record. (C00356, ¶121-122; C00977, C01752).

No reasonable jury could conclude that Souk would have abandoned the prosecution of plaintiff and proceeded against Murray without believing Murray had some motive. Souk knew the worst about Murray, and even knew he did not show up for one scheduled polygraph session. It is beyond question that the inconclusive polygraph would have had no impact on the State's Attorney's prosecution decision.

Further, despite plaintiff's assertion to the contrary, the federal court did not find that Warner deliberately hid the polygraph report. The Seventh Circuit merely recognized that the report was not turned over and, if had been, might have been "used to persuade the trial judge to admit evidence indicating that Murray committed the murder." Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500, 508 (7th Cir. 2015).

Finally, the appellate court properly found "no evidence shows Zayas pressured or exerted influence over Reynard and Souk's decision to prosecute, and there is no evidence of any false statements by Zayas to the prosecutor." Op. ¶72. Plaintiff argues Zayas commenced the prosecution because he was in charge of CID. Under plaintiff's significant role construct, then, the head of any law enforcement unit involved in investigating crime would be subject to malicious prosecution. There is no support for such a conclusion. Illinois does not recognize a supervisor's liability for the tortious acts of an underling without direct participation in the act. Reiter v. Illinois Nat. Casualty Co., 397 Ill. 141 (1947); DeCorrevant v. Lohman, 84 Ill. App. 2d 221, 227 (1st Dist. 1967). That Zayas participated in the May, 1994 meeting means nothing. Souk, Reynard and Daniels clearly testified the prosecutors made the decision at the meeting, not the investigators. No police officer lobbied, pressured or advocated for going forward with the prosecution or otherwise influenced the decision made solely by Souk and Reynard.

Finally, plaintiff argues that Zayas allowed the prosecution to go forward, even though he had questions about whether it was ready. Zayas had no control over whether the prosecution would go forward. The decision was made by the prosecutors in May.

That Zayas may have thought the case needed more work before it could go to trial shows he had no role in the prosecution decision. And more work was done in the four months between Zayas' retirement in November, 1994, and the trial itself several months later. Zayas never questioned whether there was probable cause to go forward with the prosecution.

In sum, the appellate court properly applied tort law proximate cause principles which Illinois courts, contrary to plaintiff's view, have long enforced, and concluded defendants did nothing to prevent the prosecutors from exercising their independent judgment and discretion to proceed with the charges. Plaintiff did not establish the first element of his malicious prosecution claim, and the appellate court properly affirmed summary judgment for defendants.

C. Probable Cause Existed for Beaman's Prosecution.

Significantly, there are three other meritorious bases for summary judgment here. Although the appellate court did not address the other elements in its decision because plaintiff could not establish the first one, the circuit court properly found probable cause existed for the prosecution, a lack of malice, and insufficient evidence of a disposition of the criminal case to establish the tort.

The circuit court properly found probable cause existed for plaintiff's arrest based on the detailed evidence recounted by Freesmeyer and Souk, and that the evidence supporting probable cause was sufficient to prove plaintiff's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt at trial. (C12497). Under Illinois law, probable cause is a complete defense to a malicious prosecution lawsuit. Johnson v. Saville, 575 F.3d 656, 659 (7th Cir. 2009). Probable cause is "a state of facts that would lead a person of ordinary caution and prudence to believe, or to entertain an honest and strong suspicion, that the person arrested committed the offense charged.” Reynolds v. Menard, Inc., 365 Ill. App. 3d 812, 820 (1st Dist. 2006); Sang Ken Kim v. City of Chicago, 368 Ill. App. 3d 648, 654 (1st Dist. 2006). The existence of probable cause depends on the “totality of the circumstances” at the time of the arrest. Gauger v. Hendle, 2011 IL App (2d) 100316 ¶112. Probable cause may be based on the “collective knowledge” of the officers involved in the investigation. People v. Long, 369 Ill. App. 3d 860, 867 (2d Dist. 2007).

Despite plaintiff’s assertion to the contrary, probable cause is not a jury question if the facts on which probable cause is based are undisputed. Cervantes v. Jones, 188 F.3d 805, 811 (7th Cir. 1999) (“when facts sufficient to create probable cause are undisputed, probable cause is a question of law”). While plaintiff may dispute that he committed the crime, and dispute that the facts submitted to the jury proved he committed the crime, he cannot dispute the facts supporting a probable cause finding.

Plaintiff’s probable cause quarrel is a paradigm of denial. He trumpets that the family values he grew up in made him an unlikely suspect, even though he used drugs with Lockmiller, terrorized her for months, then spoke of her in vile terms after her death. His characterization that police interest in him as a suspect was “strange” is strange itself. He characterizes the accounts Lockmiller’s friends offered the police about his obsession with her, his extreme emotional reactions to their relationship and her intense fear of him, as “collecting dirt.” He misses the point that these were not figments of the officers’ imaginations, they were first-hand accounts from Lockmiller’s closest friends and neighbors, and of Lockmiller herself through her friends’ accounts.

Plaintiff cannot realistically dispute that there was strong evidence of his obsession with Lockmiller; his violent behavior toward her prior to the murder; that he bashed her door in on at least two prior occasions; his fingerprints on what the State considered the murder weapon; the inspection of Lockmiller's garbage which the State considered a signature; or the post-murder statements he made which the State considered suspicious. He may dispute his opportunity to commit the murder, but only that opportunity was improbable, not impossible. Indeed, opportunity was the focus of the criminal trial and the appeal from the conviction. The facts the State relied on in deciding to go forward with the prosecution clearly established probable cause. Souk's view that the evidence established the reasonable possibility of proving plaintiff's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt hardly can be disputed, given the outcome.

Plaintiff argues that because his conviction was vacated, and that he received a certificate of innocence and a pardon, there could not have been probable cause for his arrest and prosecution. The certificate and pardon, however, do not erase the evidence supporting probable cause. A trial here could only ask a jury to make a legal determination, whether the undisputed evidence established probable cause. Plaintiff would want the jury to decide whether the evidence was sufficient to prove guilt – but in a malicious prosecution trial the jury would only decide whether evidence of guilt existed, not whether that evidence was sufficient to prove plaintiff guilty of the crime.

Plaintiff attempts to pick apart evidence supporting probable cause by arguing that it was not indicative of plaintiff's guilt, and there was stronger evidence of innocence. However, the overwhelming evidence established probable cause for plaintiff's arrest. Defendants knew Lockmiller and plaintiff were involved in a volatile relationship that began in July of 1992 and ended just before her murder; plaintiff threatened to kill her and himself; plaintiff's jealousy led him to act out violently; plaintiff broke down Lockmiller's door twice and punched a hole in her wall; Lockmiller was afraid of plaintiff; plaintiff suspected Lockmiller's involvement with Swaine; and the killer would have seen Swaine's belongings at the time of the murder. The nature of the crime scene and the personal manner in which Lockmiller was murdered further supported a reasonable belief that plaintiff was involved in her death. (C00327-00344, ¶9-80).

Evidence also linked plaintiff to the scene. Two of his fingerprints were found on the clock radio attached to the cord used to strangle Lockmiller. One of his prints was on the back of the clock, near the cord, and the other was on the bottom of the clock. (C00330, ¶24). A plastic garbage bag was lying on the couch in the living room with its contents spilling out, which was similar to plaintiff's past behavior, when he rummaged through Lockmiller's garbage looking for evidence that she was having sex with Swaine. (C00328, C00338, C00342, ¶15, 50, 67). Finally, due to the estimated date and time of death, defendants believed plaintiff had sufficient time to drive to Normal to commit the murder and return to Rockford by 3:30 p.m. (C00335-336, ¶38-45).<sup>2</sup>

At his deposition, Freesmeyer succinctly and convincingly recounted the facts which convinced him that probable cause existed. Souk agreed with Freesmeyer's analysis. There are no facts for a jury to arbitrate. The circuit court's reliance on the undisputed facts establishing probable cause was proper.

<sup>2</sup> By the time of trial plaintiff's defense team began producing evidence, through the testimony of plaintiff's mother, to narrow the window. However, probable cause is determined at the time of arrest. People v. Wear, 229 Ill. 2d 545, 564 (2008). When plaintiff was charged and the case turned over to the prosecutors the window of opportunity for plaintiff to have committed the murder was longer. Moreover, neither the prosecution nor the jury were required to credit plaintiff's mother's alibi time line, and even if credited, there was still a window of opportunity, if a narrow one, for plaintiff to have committed the murder.

The circuit court's reliance on Assistant State's Attorney Souk's conclusion that there was probable cause for the arrest and prosecution was also proper. (C00352, ¶¶99; C00977). Importantly, at his deposition, Souk recounted the evidence that he believed not only established probable cause, but in his view provided the State with a reasonable chance of proving plaintiff guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. (C00352-354, ¶¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Indeed, in deciding to go forward with plaintiff's arrest and prosecution, Souk applied a higher standard than the reasonable grounds to believe plaintiff committed the murder needed to establish probable cause.

Finally, there was nothing improper about the circuit court's recognition that the evidence presented at plaintiff's jury trial was sufficient to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. (C12498). Whether the evidence presented at plaintiff's trial was sufficient to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt has been fully litigated. Although plaintiff argues the circuit court should not have even acknowledged a verdict that was later vacated, there remains a certain absurdity to an argument that the evidence did not even indicate probable cause, where a State's Attorney and his Assistants, a Grand Jury, a trial court jury, a trial court judge, and an appellate court, all determined that the evidence was sufficient to prove plaintiff guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, and this court refused to review whether the evidence was sufficient. Then, in vacating plaintiff's conviction, this Court was careful to express no view impugning the sufficiency of the evidence.

Plaintiff argues post-conviction DNA tests showed his innocence, but Illinois courts disfavor consideration of post-prosecution evidence in malicious prosecution cases. Courts have held evidence that a third-party was later convicted of the crime for which the accused was prosecuted was inadmissible. See Porter v. City of Chicago, 393

Ill. App. 3d 855, 863 (1st Dist. 2009); Gauger, 2011 IL App (2d) at ¶137 (evidence of how real killer was later apprehended not admissible to show that police acted with malice); Sang Ken Kim, 368 Ill.App.3d at 660 (witness' later recantation did not affect probable cause inquiry because probable cause is measured at the time of the prosecution decision); Manzanares v. Higdon, 575 F.3d 1135, 1144 (10th Cir. 2009) (“[i]nformation gleaned post-hoc does not bear on the probable cause inquiry.”)

Notwithstanding disagreements about guilt, no reasonable jury could conclude there was lack of probable cause to prosecute plaintiff. The evidence of it was overwhelming. An office of seasoned prosecutors and a grand jury thought so, which is prima facie proof of probable cause. Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg., Co., 33 Ill. 2d 291, 296 (1965). Even Tony Daniels believed there was probable cause. (C00802, p. 341). That plaintiff had the means, motive and opportunity to murder Lockmiller cannot be disputed. These factors alone can carry the day in establishing probable cause. See e.g., People v. Kidd, 175 Ill. 2d 1, 22-23 (1996); United States v. McMullin, 568 F.3d 1, 7-8 (1st Cir. 2009); People v. Yost, 468 Mich. 122, 133 (2003); Nugent v. Hayes, 88 F. Supp. 2d 862, 869 (N.D. Ill. 2000); Schertz v. Waupaca Cty., 683 F. Supp. 1551, 1565 (E.D. Wis. 1988), aff'd 875 F.2d 578 (7th Cir. 1989). Coupled with the other evidence implicating plaintiff, probable cause is overwhelmingly established, and no reasonable jury could decide otherwise. As such, the circuit court properly granted summary judgment in favor of defendants, and the appellate court properly affirmed that decision, though on another element of the claim.

D. Plaintiff Cannot Prove Defendants Acted With Malice.

The circuit court also properly found no malice by defendants. In the context of malicious prosecution, “malice” is “the initiation of a prosecution for any reason other than to bring a party to justice.” Szczesniak v. CJC Auto Parts, Inc., 2014 IL App (2d) 130636, ¶19. Absence of malice can be decided on summary judgment where the record is devoid of any affirmative evidence of malice, an element on which the plaintiff bears the ultimate burden of proof. Turner v. City of Chicago, 91 Ill. App. 3d 931, 937 (1st Dist. 1980).

As the circuit court explained, there is no evidence to allow a jury to conclude that defendants harbored any malice toward plaintiff. Rather, the evidence showed that defendants clearly acted on their honest beliefs that plaintiff killed Lockmiller, and therefore, the circuit court could not find that “sufficient facts exist to show that the defendants’ involvement in this case was motivated by any other reason than to bring a party to justice.” (C12498). Further, that defendants acted on advice of the State’s Attorney, either directly or through his Assistants, itself vitiates any claim of malice. Salmen v. Kamberos, 206 Ill. App. 3d 686, 692 (1st Dist. 1990).

Plaintiff sees malice in defendants construing evidence as inculpatory, rather than exculpatory, and in defendants not agreeing with plaintiff’s assessment of the evidence. None of the action which plaintiff identifies as proof of malice, however, can constitute malice, at least as defined for purposes of malicious prosecution. Malice found for prosecutions, for example, have been proxies for collecting a debt (Szczesniak, 2014 IL App (2d) at ¶14); to force an employee’s termination (Rodgers v. People’s Gas Light & Coke Co., 315 Ill. App. 3d 340, 350 (1st Dist. 2000)); to discover why the plaintiff was on the defendant’s property (D.N. Vasquez v. Jacobs, 23 Ill. App. 2d 457, 464 (2d Dist. 1960)). Plaintiff complains of what at worst might be construed as zealous police work, but nevertheless its only purpose was to bring Lockmiller’s killer to justice. Plaintiff offers no evidence that can support a conclusion that defendants' actions were for any other purpose than to bring the person they thought killed Lockmiller to justice.

Plaintiff argues that, at a minimum, the jury could construe malice from a lack of probable cause. That inference, however, is only allowable when lack of probable cause is clear. Szczesniak, 2014 IL App (2d) at ¶19. Even plaintiff cannot argue that a lack of probable cause here was "clear." The circuit court properly found no malice because "the evidence has shown that more than probable cause existed for the prosecution to bring plaintiff to trial." (C12498). The circuit court explained that it rested its decision, in part, on Freesmeyer's detailed account of the facts leading to his belief that probable cause existed.

Further, plaintiff misstates the evidence regarding Warner and the polygraph report. As explained above, the Seventh Circuit did not find Warner intentionally hid the polygraph report. In addition, as explained above, that Zayas was in charge of the investigation, was present at the May, 1994 meeting, and believed that the case needed some work, does not show malice. The prosecutors, not Zayas, decided to charge plaintiff with murder and nothing about Zayas' belief that more on the case might be needed could possibly result in an inference of malice.

As explained above, the circuit court's finding was not based on irrelevant considerations – despite plaintiff's argument that because his conviction was vacated, there could not have been probable cause. Plaintiff's conviction was vacated for reasons unrelated to probable cause. In sum, the circuit court properly granted summary judgment in favor of defendants, and the appellate court properly affirmed that decision, although on another element of the claim.

E. Plaintiff Cannot Prove The Termination Of His Prosecution Was Indicative Of His Innocence.

Finally, the circuit court properly found plaintiff cannot prove the termination of his prosecution was indicative of his innocence. Plaintiff bears the burden of proving that termination of the prosecution in his favor occurred for reasons consistent with his innocence. Swick v. Liataud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 513 (1996). To make that determination, the circumstances under which the dismissal is obtained must be examined, not the form or title given to it. Id.

Plaintiff's conviction was reversed, but the case was remanded for retrial. As the circuit court recognized, the Court specifically held that no part of its decision would suggest insufficient evidence or preclude a retrial. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 82 (2008). The circuit court also recognized that, on remand, the McLean County State's Attorney decided not to re prosecute plaintiff, but nothing about that decision suggested plaintiff's innocence. Rather, relying on the deposition testimony of Souk (an experienced prosecutor and judge), the circuit court properly found the decision not to re prosecute plaintiff "was a matter of impracticability of reconstructing the evidence and relocating witnesses after so many years had passed." (C12499).

Plaintiff also relies on the Certificate of Innocence and governor's pardon to establish a termination indicative of innocence. The Certificate and pardon, however, have no impact in this case. A Petition for Certificate of Innocence proceeding is established under §2-702 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, 735 ILCS 5/2-702. The purpose of the proceeding is to allow a person who has been incarcerated to seek certain relief from the State in the Illinois Court of Claims. It is essentially a non-adversarial proceeding, although the statute allows the Illinois Attorney General or the State's Attorney to intervene as parties in the action. The statute provides no ability of a municipal police agency or police officers to participate.

The State did not oppose plaintiff's Petition, quite likely as part of a settlement agreement in which plaintiff agreed to drop all claims against the McLean County defendants. Regardless, in order for that Certificate of Innocence to have any impact against these defendants, they needed a meaningful opportunity to oppose plaintiff's Petition in that litigation. Kremer v. Chemical Const. Corp., 456 U.S. 461 (1982). They did not, and therefore, the Certificate can have no preclusive effect here.

Further, by the express language of the statute, the issuance of the Certificate of Innocence can have no impact in this case. 735 ILCS 5/2-702(j). The termination in favor of plaintiff was the nolle prosequi of the criminal charge against him after remand from the Supreme Court, which occurred long before the Certificate was issued. The Certificate, not issued until years later, played no role in the termination decision. Similarly, the governor's pardon, not issued until years later, played no role.

The cases plaintiff cites do not support his conclusion that the Certificate of Innocence can satisfy that element of his claim. In Kluppelerg v. Burge, 84 F. Supp. 3d 741, 745 (N.D. Ill. 2015), the district court found the certificate could be relevant to whether the defendants there withheld material evidence, and possibly for damages, but never actually decided whether the certificate could prove a termination indicative of innocence. In Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F. Supp. 2d 660, 673 (N.D. Ill. 2005), the district court merely recognized that if a governor's pardon uses certain language, that pardon may indicate a conviction was terminated in the plaintiff's favor for purposes of a Heck analysis only. Nevertheless, a district court decision is not precedential here, and in any event a case stands only for the issues it decides. Sanner v. Champaign County, 88 Ill. App. 3d 491 (4th Dist. 1980).

Plaintiff also argues the evidence showed he is innocent, but the termination element of his claim turns on why the case was terminated, not what the civil court hearing the malicious prosecution tort case thinks of the strength of the evidence against the plaintiff. Plaintiff has presented no other evidence to satisfy his burden, and therefore the circuit court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim.

II. The Appellate Court Properly Found Plaintiff Forfeited his Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress Claim.

The appellate court properly found plaintiff forfeited his IIED claim because he did not develop his argument in support of the claim on appeal. Op. ¶74. Plaintiff attempts to argue that because he at least brought it up in his appellate court brief, he should be allowed to pursue it. However, as the appellate court properly recognized, "mere contentions, without argument or citation of authority, do no merit consideration on appeal." Op. ¶74.

In the alternative, even if this Court was to consider it, the circuit court properly recognized that plaintiff's IIED claim is based on the alleged malicious prosecution and, therefore, fails because plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim fails. Jiminez v. City of Chicago, 830 F. Supp. 2d 432, 451 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (success of the IIED claim was contingent on the success of malicious prosecution claim); Walden v. City of Chicago, 755 F. Supp. 2d 942, 962 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (IIED claim was "intertwined" with the malicious prosecution claim). Here, because plaintiff bases his IIED claim on the alleged malicious prosecution, his IIED claim also fails. Moreover, absent proof sufficient to establish common law malicious prosecution, defendants are immune from liability for a prosecution, regardless of how plaintiff styles his cause of action. 745 ILCS 10/2-208.

III. The Appellate Court Properly Affirmed Summary Judgment On Plaintiff's State Law Civil Conspiracy Claim.

The Appellate Court properly affirmed summary judgment on plaintiff's conspiracy claim. Op. ¶76. On appeal, plaintiff confines his conspiracy claim to defendants conspiring among themselves to maliciously prosecute him, abandoning his claim that defendants conspired with the McLean County State's Attorney. To prove a civil conspiracy, a plaintiff must show an agreement to accomplish either an unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose by unlawful means. Mosley v. City of Chicago, 614 F.3d 391, 399 (7th Cir. 2010); Buchner v. Atlantic Plant Maint., Inc., 182 Ill. 2d 12, 23 (1998). Most significantly, a plaintiff must prove a meeting of the minds between the defendants. A conspiracy claim cannot be based on speculation or conjecture. The plaintiff must show the defendants acted in concert. Fritz v. Johnson, 209 Ill. 2d 302, 317-18 (2004).

The appellate court properly found that "because we have found defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas are entitled to summary judgment to plaintiff's malicious-prosecution claim, plaintiff cannot establish the third element of this civil-conspiracy claim." Op. ¶76. Plaintiff argues that a conspiracy is shown by the following: (1) defendants collaborated closely on the case and shared information and therefore must have known there was no probable cause to arrest and prosecute Beaman; (2) Freesmeyer ignored exculpatory evidence and alternative suspects, lied to the grand jury and skewed time trials; (3) Warner "buried" the Murray polygraph; and (4) Zayas allowed the arrest to go forward, knowing the evidence could not justify it. Plaintiff's claims of misconduct aside, his argument flags nothing more than defendants all working on the same investigation. If sufficient, such a conspiracy claim would be in every police investigation involving more than one officer.

In Mosley, the plaintiff alleged that investigating officers conspired to prosecute him by withholding evidence of an exculpatory statement made by a key eyewitness during a line-up (614 F.3d at 39). The officers failed to make a line-up report for fifteen months to hide the witness's statement. The court found the absent report and officers working together did not amount to evidence of a conspiracy. Id. at 400. In Vodak v. City of Chicago, 2009 WL 500678 (N.D. Ill. 2009), the plaintiff's evidence of various discussions between command personnel regarding the decisions to make arrests and charge the arrestees did not support a conspiracy finding.

Here, summary judgment was also properly granted on the conspiracy claim because, as the circuit court recognized, to prevail "plaintiff would need to show that the defendants conspired with themselves and with the prosecution to maliciously prosecute him." (C12499). Because plaintiff is no longer claiming a conspiracy with the prosecutors, summary judgment was properly granted pursuant to the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine. Wright v. Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Svcs., 40 F.3d 1492, 1508 (7th Cir. 1994); Buchner, 182 Ill. 2d 12 at 24.

The intracorporate conspiracy doctrine precludes conspiracy claims against members of the same entity. Payton v. Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Med. Ctr., 184 F.3d 623, 632 (7th Cir. 1999). See Piphus v. City of Chicago, 2013 WL 3975209, at 8 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (conspiracy claim was barred by the intracorporate doctrine because it was only directed at the police officers, employees of the same government entity); Ghiles v. City of Chicago Hts., 2016 WL 561897, at 3 (N.D.Ill. 2016) (conspiracy claim was barred under the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine because all defendants were City officials); Mlaska v. Schicker, 2015 WL 6098733 (S.D.Ill. 2015) (same with regard to the Illinois Department of Corrections). Similarly, here, the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine bars plaintiff's conspiracy claims. In sum, the Appellate Court properly affirmed summary judgment in favor of defendants on plaintiff's conspiracy claim.

IV. The Appellate Court Properly Affirmed Summary Judgment On Counts IV And V.

Finally, the Appellate Court properly found the respondeat superior and indemnification claims are derivative claims against the Town of Normal based on the substantive claims against the individual defendants. Op. ¶78. As such, the Appellate Court properly affirmed summary judgment on these claims as well.

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, the defendants respectfully request this Court affirm the judgment in this case.

Respectfully submitted,

III. The Remaining Claims Must Proceed to Trial.....	20
IV. Conclusion .....	20

Defendants and their amici spill a lot of ink arguing that the malicious prosecution tort requires causation, but no one disputes that obvious point.<sup>1</sup> In fact, the “significant role” test includes a causation requirement—a defendant must have a significant role not merely in an investigation, but in “in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff.” Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975 (4th Dist. 1988). In this case, the defendants caused the wrongful prosecution by concealing evidence, conducting a biased and dishonest investigation, manipulating time trials, and committing perjury. The prosecutor himself declared that Alan Beaman could not have been convicted “without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. A reasonable juror could find causation on these facts.

A reasonable juror could also find for Mr. Beaman on the remaining elements of the malicious prosecution claim. On probable cause and malice, a thicket of disputed facts and inferences point in opposite directions and preclude summary judgment. Mr. Beaman clearly must prevail on the indicative of innocence prong, equipped as he is with this Court’s unanimous vacatur of his conviction, a certificate of innocence, and a gubernatorial pardon on the basis of innocence. And because the remaining claims rise or fall with the malicious prosecution claim, the entire case should be remanded for trial.

I. The Malicious Prosecution Claim Should Proceed to Trial.

A. The Defendants Caused the Malicious Prosecution of Alan Beaman.

The basis for causation in this case is simple: The defendants caused the malicious prosecution and wrongful conviction of Alan Beaman by selecting him as their man on

<sup>1</sup> E.g., Plaintiff’s Brief (Pl. Br.) 27 (“The defendants caused Alan Beaman’s wrongful prosecution and conviction by selecting him as their man on Day One, and then conducting a biased investigation to reach the predetermined result.”) (emphasis added), 30 (“In short, a rational juror could find a causal link between the defendants’ misconduct and the commencement and continuance of Mr. Beaman’s prosecution.”) (emphasis added).

Day One, and then conducting a biased investigation and concealing evidence to reach the predetermined result. The prosecution of the wrong man was the natural and foreseeable result of the defendants' biased, dishonest investigation and their concealment of evidence. But for their misconduct, the malicious prosecution would not have occurred.

“[P]roximate cause consists of two distinct elements: cause in fact and legal cause.” Evans v. Shannon, 201 Ill.2d 424, 434 (2002). Both are “factual matters for the jury to decide.” Lee v. Chicago Transit Authority, 152 Ill.2d 432, 454 (1992); see also French v. City of Springfield, 65 Ill.2d 74, 79 (1976); Ney v. Yellow Cab Co., 2 Ill.2d 74, 84 (1954).

In this case, causation is an issue for trial because a rational juror could find that the biased investigation and concealment of evidence caused the prosecution in the following ways, individually or in combination: First, defendants caused the prosecution by hiding the Murray polygraph from the prosecutors. As the federal district court stated, “[p]erhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, 831 n.8 (C.D. Ill. 2014). Defendants’ assertion that the lead prosecutor “testified [that the Murray polygraph] would not have had any impact on the State’s Attorney’s decision to prosecute,” Defendants’ Brief (Def. Br.) 34, is flatly untrue and unsupported by the proffered citation. In fact, the prosecutor testified that polygraph evidence is “useful for investigative purposes,” and that if he had known about the Murray polygraph, he would have “asked some questions and looked at it more.” R.10109. Second, a rational juror could find that Mr. Beaman never would have been charged if defendants had investigated information inculcating other possible suspects, including: (1) identifying similar burglaries or sexual assaults in the area, (2) attempting to locate the stranger who would not stop calling Lockmiller, (3) looking for the other stranger who gave Lockmiller his phone number in lipstick just before her death, and (4) subjecting John Murray to the same scrutiny, wiretapping, bias, and browbeating as plaintiff. Pl. Br. 6-7. Third, Freesmeyer caused the continuation of the prosecution through grand jury perjury, lying about the existence of other viable suspects with motives to kill Ms. Lockmiller. Id. 13-14. If the grand jury knew about this evidence, it might not have returned a true bill. Although grand jury perjury does not create a malicious prosecution claim all by itself, it may be “used, along with other allegations, to support [a] malicious prosecution claim.” White v. City of Chicago, 2012 WL 2525654, at *34 (N.D. Ill. 2012); see also Brooks v. City of Chicago, 564 F.3d 830, 833 (7th Cir. 2009) (stating that a claim for prosecution based on “false evidence or testimony . . . is, in essence, one for malicious prosecution”) (citations omitted). Fourth, Freesmeyer furthered the prosecution by manipulating the time trials. Pl. Br. 11-13. If Freesmeyer had conducted honest, consistent time trials—rather than driving as fast as possible when that would hurt plaintiff’s alibi and driving as slow as possible when that would hurt plaintiff’s alibi—the investigation would have confirmed the alibi, likely averting prosecution. Id. The basis to prosecute also relied on the notion that Carol Beaman drove 20 miles round-trip for no reason. Freesmeyer furthered the prosecution by performing time trials to support this ridiculous scenario. Id. at 12. Fifth, the prosecutor himself declared that Freesmeyer was a “but for” cause of the conviction: “Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207.

The prosecutors made the final charging decision at the May 16, 1994 meeting, but that decision was the inevitable result of the defendants’ biased and dishonest investigation. After all, “it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.” People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24; see also Amicus Brief of Former Prosecutors 4-5 (stating that wrongful prosecutions may occur “when police provide biased or unreliable information”). Defendants pretend that the final meeting occurred in a vacuum, as if it were unaffected by the investigation that produced the decision to charge Mr. Beaman. Contrary to defendants’ claim that the prosecutors “made the decision to prosecute plaintiff uninfluenced by any defendant,” Def. Br. 30 (emphasis added), the charging decision reflected the “investigator’s input,” R.1011 (Souk), and was based on the “evidence [the detectives] had uncovered during their investigation,” R.2214 (Reynard). After all, Freesmeyer had decided on the outcome at least seven months before, when he told plaintiff he was “going to be arrested for Jennifer’s death at one point or another.” A.1318. On these facts, causation cannot be resolved as a matter of law.

Contrary to the defendants’ argument that only pre-charge misconduct is relevant to causation, the test is “commencement or continuance” of the prosecution. Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg. Co., 33 Ill.2d 291, 295 (emphasis added). “The only logical conclusion to be drawn from this language [‘continuation’] is that malicious prosecution may be established . . . by evidence of continuing the proceedings in the proscribed manner.” Peterson v. Littlejohn, 56 Wash. App. 1, 12 (Wash Ct. App. 1989). Thus, a court properly considers evidence “concerning the post-charge investigation of [a] suspect.” Id.; see also Howard v. City of Chicago, No. 03 C 8481, 2004 WL 2397281, at *15 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 24, 2004) (police defendants who suppressed and altered evidence post-arrest “were responsible for continuing the malicious prosecution”); Gelband v. Hondo, 671 F. Supp. 2d 175, 176 (D. Me. 2009); Smithfield Packing Co., Inc. v. Evely, 905 A.2d 845, 858 (Md. Ct. App. 2006).

1. Cause in Fact

The defendants were a “but for” cause of the prosecution and conviction of Alan Beaman. The prosecutor said so—the conviction could not have been obtained “without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. Without the defendants conducting a dishonest and biased investigation, hiding evidence, lying to the grand jury, and ignoring exculpatory facts, the prosecution would not have been brought and continued, and Mr. Beaman would not have gone to prison. See Price v. Philip Morris, Inc., 219 Ill.2d 182, 269 (2005) (“[T]he relevant inquiry is whether the harm would have occurred absent the defendant’s conduct.”); Thacker v. UNR Industries, Inc., 151 Ill.2d 343, 354–55 (1992).

Even if the prosecutor were an additional “but for” cause of the prosecution, the actions of two or more individuals can be necessary to inflict an injury. See Turner v. Roesner, 193 Ill. App. 3d 482, 490 (2d Dist. 1990). A “but for” cause need not be “the sole cause” of an injury. Id.; see also Espinoza v. Elgin, Joliet and E. Ry., 165 Ill.2d 107, 118 (1995). At minimum, the defendants’ malfeasance was a cause in fact because it was “a material element and a substantial factor” in causing the injury. Thacker, 151 Ill. 2d at 354 (1992); Krywin v. Chicago Transit Authority, 238 Ill.2d 215, 226 (2010); Abrams v. City of Chi., 211 Ill.2d 251, 258 (2004). A reasonable juror therefore could find causation in fact.

2. Legal Cause

Legal causation, “is essentially a question of foreseeability.” First Springfield Bank & Trust v. Galman, 188 Ill. 2d 252, 258 (1999). The inquiry is “whether the injury is of a type that a reasonable person would see as a likely result of his conduct.” City of Chicago v. Beretta U.S.A. Corp., 213 Ill.2d 351, 395 (2004). Legal causation is easily satisfied here because the malicious prosecution and wrongful conviction of Alan Beaman were the natural and foreseeable results of defendants’ malicious fixation on him, their dishonest investigation, their grand jury perjury, and their suppression of evidence. See supra at 2-3. It is hardly a surprise that investigative misconduct like this can lead to wrongful prosecutions. The prosecutor’s charging decision might be viewed as an intervening cause of the injury, but a foreseeable intervening cause does not defeat legal causation. Bentley v. Saunemin Tp., 83 Ill.2d 10, 16 (1980); Merlo v. Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois, 381 Ill. 300, 316-17 (1943); First Springfield Bank, 188 Ill.2d at 257. The charging decision therefore does not negate legal causation or the defendants’ liability.

B. The Court Should Adopt the “Significant Role” Test for the “Commencement or Continuance” Prong.

1. The “Significant Role” Test Incorporates Ordinary Rules of Causation.

The “significant role” test requires causation: The defendant must have a “significant role in causing the prosecution of the plaintiff.” Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975 (4th Dist. 1988); Pl. Br. 23-24 (citing cases). Defendants and their amici conclude that the “significant role” test dispenses with causation only because they mischaracterize the standard, claiming that the test renders investigators liable merely for “playing significant roles in criminal investigations.” Amicus Brief of the City of Chicago, et al. (Am. Br.) 47; Def. Br. 25, 28, 32. Not true. The standard is not significant role in an investigation, but significant role in commencing or continuing a prosecution. Therein lies causation—and that causation requirement makes the “significant role” test fully consistent with the history of the “commencement or continuance” prong described in the amicus brief. Am. Br. 4-32.

Defendants imagine dire consequences flowing from the “significant role” test—including the notion that detectives will refuse to investigate crimes so as not to have a significant role in investigations—but this parade of horrors is based on the false premise that the “significant role” test would unmoor malicious prosecution claims from ordinary causation principles. See Def. Br. 26-27; Am. Br. 33-42. That assumption is simply wrong. Of course, an officer who plays a significant role in an investigation should not be held liable if the suspect just happens to be prosecuted for reasons unrelated to the officer’s actions. That is precisely why the law extends liability only to those officers who have a significant role in the commencement or continuation of a prosecution. And the law further narrows liability through the other disjunctive elements of the tort—malice, prosecution without probable cause, and favorable termination of the false charges. See Pl. Br. 27-28.

2. The “Pressure, Influence, or Misstatement” Test Contradicts Ordinary Causation Rules and this Court’s Jurisprudence.

The “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test would stand ordinary causation on its head by excluding many of the principal causes of malicious prosecutions and wrongful convictions. Police can cause malicious prosecutions by extracting false confessions through physical and psychological coercion, refusing to investigate more likely alternative suspects, intimidating witnesses, maliciously fixating on a single individual as the culprit and working backwards to frame him or her, hiding evidence, or using deliberately suggestive lineups or photo arrays. None of these situations necessarily involve pressure, influence, or misstatement to a prosecutor, but liability should attach where investigative misconduct of this nature causes the malicious prosecution of an innocent person.

At bottom, defendants’ “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test is not about causation at all. Rather, it is about immunizing some of the most dangerous and repugnant police misconduct that causes wrongful convictions just because the misconduct does not fit into a narrow, defendant-friendly box. No principle of causation or logic creates a distinction between, on the one hand, lying to a prosecutor and, on the other, hiding evidence, leading a deliberately biased investigation, or coercing a confession. If such conduct results in a malicious prosecution, causation is present. The “significant role” test follows that logic; the defendants’ test illogically demands more than ordinary causation.

Not only has this Court never mentioned the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test in any case, but prior to this case, no court of this State had ever applied that test to a law enforcement defendant. In fact, the defense amici and plaintiff agree that the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test originated in cases in the lower courts of this State against private citizens, i.e., complaining witnesses. Am. Br. 11-13. That context is significant. The “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test perhaps serves as a rough shorthand for most or all of the ways that a complaining witness can cause a wrongful prosecution. After all, it is difficult to think of how a private citizen could cause a criminal charge except by lying to or unduly influencing the authorities. But “pressure, influence, or misstatement” is badly underinclusive as a proxy for causation by police investigators because they can cause malicious prosecutions by abusing investigative powers that ordinary citizens lack. Private citizens cannot hold people in custody against their will, search homes and cars, bug phones and plant wires to record private conversations without consent, or threaten people with the death penalty. They cannot cause malicious prosecutions by abusing investigatory prerogatives. But police officers can and sometimes do. As a result, applying the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test to police investigators would contravene ordinary causation rules and also immunize abuses of official power and public trust.

3. The Remaining Test—“Participation of So Active and Positive a Character as to Amount to Advice and Cooperation”—Is Too Narrow.

The final test for the first prong of the malicious prosecution tort is “participation of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and cooperation.” Pl. Br. 27. A century and a half ago, this Court applied that test to a private citizen in Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143, 147, (1866), but it has never applied the test to a police officer (or to any defendant since Gilbert).

This test resembles the “significant role” test more than the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test because it focuses on the scope of the defendant’s role—it requires a role that is “active and positive,” id., without requiring anything so narrow as deceit or undue influence. Nonetheless, the test is still too narrow as a proxy for causation of malicious prosecution by police defendants. A police officer need not advise or cooperate with a prosecutor to cause a malicious prosecution. A coerced confession or biased investigation alone can achieve that result.

C. Regardless of the Test Applied, the Defendants Commenced or Continued the Prosecution of Alan Beaman.

Regardless of which test the Court adopts for “commencement or continuance,” whether this case meets that standard is a question of fact that cannot be resolved as a matter of law and requires a trial. “[S]ummary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation,” and is not proper unless the case is “clear and free from doubt.” Jackson v. TLC Associates, Inc., 185 Ill. 2d 418, 423-24 (1998). Under any standard, the causal relationship between the defendants’ misconduct and the false charges is one for a jury to decide.

The discussion of causation in Section I makes it clear that the defendants meet the “significant role” test because they had a significant role in causing the commencement or continuation of the prosecution. As for the “advice and cooperation” test, Freesmeyer and the prosecutor worked closely together on the investigation and prosecution, to the point that Freesmeyer moved into the prosecutor’s office. Op. ¶ 20. When Mr. Beaman was wrongfully convicted, the prosecutor declared, “[b]eyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. Finally, Freesmeyer and Warner’s misconduct meets even the narrow “pressure, influence or misstatement” test. The federal district court found that a jury question exists as to whether Warner “intentionally withheld” evidence that could have changed the trajectory of the case. Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 827. Concealing the Murray polygraph was a deceitful act tantamount to misstatement. The same is true of Freesmeyer’s distorting the case and obtaining a false charge through his refusal to undertake a serious investigation of other suspects, manipulation of time trials, and perjury. Pl. Br. 4-9, 11-14. Even under the “pressure, influence, or misstatement” test, it would be wrong to deprive Mr. Beaman of his right to a jury trial.

D. The Court Should Reach the Issues of Probable Cause, Malice, and Conclusion of the Proceedings in a Manner Indicative of Innocence.

If this Court reverses the appellate court on the “commencement or continuance” prong, it would be useful to proceed to the remaining bases for the circuit court’s grant of summary judgment, as opposed to remanding the case to the appellate court to consider those issues in the first instance.<sup>2</sup> A decade has passed since this Court vacated Mr. Beaman’s wrongful conviction. This case calls for resolution.

<sup>2</sup> Defendants’ statement that the petition for leave to appeal did not challenge the circuit court’s holdings on the other elements, Def. Br. 2, is incorrect, see Petition at 21-23.

E. A Rational Juror Could Find that Defendants Lacked Probable Cause.

A jury must decide whether defendants had probable cause to arrest and jail Mr. Beaman because the record is beset with complex facts from which competing inferences could be drawn. Defendants want the Court not only to take some of the facts as undisputed but to adopt their inferences about whether those facts inculcate Mr. Beaman and help to establish probable cause. A court may grant summary judgment if (1) the material facts are undisputed and (2) the only rational inferences that one can draw from those facts amount to probable cause. Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432, ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25; see also Pl. Br. 36 & n.8 (citing additional cases). True, under the first part of this analysis, plaintiff and defendants agree on some of the facts. The Court, however, cannot resolve the second part—the proper inferences to draw from those facts—on summary judgment in this case.

For example, police found Mr. Beaman’s fingerprints on the alarm clock console (not the cord used to strangle the victim) along with both Michael Swaine’s prints and additional prints that could not be identified. Pl. Br. 38. This fact is not disputed, but the inferences are the rub. A rational juror considering the fingerprints could easily say, “Of course Alan Beaman’s prints were on the alarm clock. He had spent the night there and used the alarm clock, but they don’t mean anything because no one can date fingerprints, and Swaine’s prints were on the clock too. Plus, the unidentified prints probably belonged to the killer! At best the fingerprint evidence is irrelevant to probable cause; if anything, the unidentified prints are exculpatory.”

The circuit court failed to perceive the competing inferences surrounding each piece of evidence and usurped the role of the jury when it adopted, wholesale and without elaboration, the inferences defendants set forth in “paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants' Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment." A.30-31. Defendants reiterate the (a) through (p) list in their facts section, Def. Br. 19-20, and rely on it for their probable cause argument, but like the fingerprint evidence discussed above, every other item on the list could be considered irrelevant, if not exculpatory. Plaintiff's opening brief detailed this analysis item-by-item on pages 38-41, and we will not repeat it here. At best, each item of evidence cuts both ways. That means a court must stay its hand and let the jury decide. One rational juror might agree with defendants that some of these facts support probable cause; another might consider them irrelevant, if not exculpatory. The complex summary judgment record in this case (comprising 91 pages of briefs, 272 pages of statements of material facts and responses thereto, and 11,066 pages of exhibits) presents a thicket of competing inferences that only a factfinder can resolve.

Wherever a rational juror came down on items (a) through (p), that juror would also have to assess the evidence known to defendants that excluded Alan Beaman as a viable suspect. After Mr. Beaman made the bank deposit and placed the 10:37 and 10:39 calls, it would have been impossible—literally—for him to travel to Normal, commit the murder, and return home by 2:15, when Carol Beaman confirmed he was at the family residence. Pl. Br. 11. Singley's evidence, which established the time of death as 2 p.m. or later, made the scenario doubly impossible. Id. 13-14. Defendants even acknowledge a disputed issue on whether "opportunity was improbable." Def. Br. 38. It strains logic to say that cause is probable as a matter of law while conceding that opportunity is improbable.

A rational juror would also consider that no witness could place Mr. Beaman in Bloomington-Normal (much less at the victim's apartment), that he maintained his innocence both under vigorous interrogation and in conversations with a friend that police recorded in secret, and that no physical evidence connected him to the crime. Pl. Br. 10-11. Surely a rational juror would consider the many potential killers (some known, others not) who floated in and out of the victim's high-risk life. Id. 4-9. No potential juror could ignore John Murray, the steroid-abusing drug dealer known to beat women. He had sex with the victim and sold her drugs, could not complete a polygraph about the killing, and lied about his alibi. Id. 7-9. At the end of it all, some rational jurors would reject probable cause to arrest Alan Beaman; perhaps others would find it. The solution to this problem is a trial.

Defendants also rely on their and the prosecutor's personal opinion that probable cause existed, but "[an] official's subjective belief as to the legal basis of the prosecution is irrelevant; the test for probable cause is an objective one." Penn v. Chicago State University, 162 F. Supp. 2d 968, 976 (N.D. Ill. 2001). On the other hand, if a defendant's personal views of probable cause ought to be considered, then Defendant Zayas's own opinion, well after Mr. Beaman had been arrested and jailed, that the case was "in limbo" and not "ready to be sent to the State" for prosecution would cut against any finding of probable cause as a matter of law. A.1356.

While the disputed inferences alone preclude summary judgment, disputed issues of fact make the circuit court's error all the more manifest. Defendants' inaccurate and one-sided recitation of the facts—some of which are pure fiction with no grounding in the record—makes it clear that important issues of fact cannot be resolved as a matter of law. A few examples follow. Defendants think that "Jennifer Seig told NPD detectives she believed Beaman threatened to kill Lockmiller and Swaine if he ever caught them in bed together,” Def. Br. 12, but they don’t mention that Seig admitted she might have heard this “in a dream or something.” R.3126. “[T]his will sound really weird to you,” said Seig, “I don’t know if that was, it’s hard to explain, but I don’t know if he said that or if that’s the, or if I had it in a dream or something.” Id. Defendants assert that plaintiff’s “fingerprint [was] on the murder weapon,” Def. Br. 31, but omit that police found no prints on the cord and no prints on the scissors lodged in the victim’s chest—only on the console, where they also found prints from Swaine and an unidentified stranger. Pl. Br. 38; A.3256-3257, A.3264-3265. Defendants claim that “Daniels and Hospelhorn came away from [the Beaman interview] believing plaintiff’s conduct was suspicious,” Def. Br. 7, but Hospelhorn in fact testified that after the interview, he had “[n]o suspicions at all” that Beaman committed the murder, A.2583, R.8043-44. According to defendants, Singley told police that plaintiff yelled derogatory comments at Ms. Lockmiller, Def. Br. 8, but this appears only in Freesmeyer’s own report, and no interview transcript confirms it. Defendants think that Kris Perry told police that Lockmiller said that plaintiff stated that he would kill her, Def. Br. 12, but that is a misrepresentation based solely on Officer Hospelhorn’s report. In an interview transcript, Perry denied ever saying such a thing to Hospelhorn. R.11337. Plaintiff himself also made it clear he never made the supposed statement. A.3342. Defendants claim that plaintiff threw a lamp, Def. Br. 12, but Mr. Beaman stated it was Ms. Lockmiller who threw things at him, not the other way around. A.2918. In fact, while defendants falsely claim that plaintiff was “violent” toward Ms. Lockmiller prior to the murder, Def. Br. 37, 38, defendants did not know of any evidence that plaintiff had ever been physically violent to the victim’s person. A.1592; A.2879, and were told that plaintiff was “not physical.” A.2950. Defendants suggest that after Murray told the police that he left town the day before the murder, he “corrected” his statement. Def. Br. 16. In fact, Murray lied in his first interview and changed his story only after his girlfriend told the police that he was in town on the day of the murder. A.77-78. While defendants’ brief claims that Mr. Beaman forced open the door “several times,” Def. Br. 4, it happened but twice. (Both times, Ms. Lockmiller was having sex with other men while dating plaintiff.). A.86. Defendants emphasize strife that occurred when Mr. Beaman and Ms. Lockmiller had been dating but ignore witness accounts that plaintiff had gotten past the relationship and moved on with his life by the time of the murder A.85-86. By then, acquaintances told police that plaintiff was dating someone new, appeared calm, and was not angry about anything. A.85-86. Defendants claim that Mr. Beaman called Ms. Lockmiller shortly before the murder to “tell her that he loved her and missed her,” Def. Br. 15, but the phone records say otherwise. A.339 (phone records showing that in August of 1993, Ms. Lockmiller called Mr. Beaman repeatedly, he called her only once, and that call lasted 13.8 seconds). Defendants claim there were “no signs” of forced entry, Def. Br. 6, but ignore other evidence of burglary, including the disarray of the usually tidy apartment. Pl. Br. 4-5. Defendants claim that Todd Heyse saw “two people fitting the description of Beaman and Lockmiller around the time of the murder, possibly on the same day,” Def. Br. 20-21, but Heyse did not see these people in the week of the murder, nor did his description match plaintiff. R.3439. These are but a few examples of the factual disputes that permeate the record. A jury should weigh these complex and disputed questions.

F. A Rational Juror Could Find that the Defendants Acted With Malice.

“The question of malice is one of fact for the jury.” Lindquist v. Friedman’s, Inc., 366 Ill. 232, 237 (1937); see also Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg. Co., 33 Ill.2d 291, 297 (1965)

(“The issues of ‘probable cause’ and malice were for the jury.”). Here, the defendants respond to the evidence of malice by ignoring most of it. They assume that their bias in the investigation—the twisting of irrelevant or exculpatory facts into evidence of guilt—is the only evidence of malice. Wrong. To be sure, defendants’ biased interpretation of the facts certainly helps to support a finding of malice, Pl. Br. 32, 36; see also Cage v. City of Chicago, 979 F. Supp. 2d 787, 807 (N.D. Ill. 2013), but the defendants’ biased view of the facts is where the evidence of malice begins, not where it ends. Freesmeyer lied under oath in the grand jury proceedings about other suspects with a motive for the murder. Pl. Br. 14. He doctored time trials, flooring it when speed would hurt Mr. Beaman in court, then braking when delay would make him easier to convict. Id. at 11-13. When a time trial showed that Mr. Beaman had plenty of time to make the 10:37 and 10:39 calls, Freesmeyer kept it out of his report and hid it from the jury. Id. at 11-12. When the evidence showed that Carol Beaman could not have made the calls because she was helping her mother and then shopping at the Wal-Mart across the street, Freesmeyer set out to prove the ludicrous notion that Mrs. Beaman took a 20-mile detour to drive across town before returning, immediately, to where she was before. Id. at 12.

All of this makes malice a jury question: A rational juror could infer malice from investigative misconduct. Aguirre v. City of Chicago, 382 Ill. App. 3d 89, 97-100 (1st Dist. 2008) (orchestrated confessions demonstrated malice); Jimenez v. City of Chicago, 830 F. Supp. 2d 432, 451 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (incomplete investigation demonstrated malice); Grayson v. City of Aurora, 157 F. Supp. 3d 725, 746-47 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (incomplete investigation demonstrated malice); Cage, 979 F. Supp. 2d at 807 (misconduct relevant to malice); Chagolla v. City of Chicago, No. 07 C 4557, 2012 WL 403920, at *8 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 2012) (false charges demonstrated malice).

As for Warner, Judge McDade found in the federal litigation that a genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether Warner intentionally suppressed the Murray polygraph report. Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 827. Judge McDade determined that this document, when it came to light, undermined confidence in the conviction under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963). Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 823; see also People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 58-59 (2008). Warner received the report and violated the policy that dictated how to handle it. Pl. Br. 9. He claims he gave the report to Daniels instead of following the policy, but Daniels does not remember receiving the report and was not responsible for concealing it. Id. The trail goes cold at Warner. A juror, as the federal court found, could conclude that Warner buried the report on purpose because it helped Mr. Beaman. Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 827. That screams malice.

Freesmeyer and Warner's boss, Zayas, let Mr. Beaman get arrested even though he knew that the case was not "ready to be sent to the State [for prosecution]" and that his investigators "didn't have all the information needed." R.1356. A juror could find malice because Zayas knew full well that the case was half-baked and let Mr. Beaman get arrested and jailed for murder anyway by failing to intervene. Pl. Br. 14, 45-46, R.1356-1357.<sup>3</sup>

G. A Rational Juror Could Find that the Criminal Proceedings Against Mr. Beaman Concluded in a Manner Indicative of Innocence.

Prosecutors dropped the charges against Mr. Beaman after this Court threw out the conviction, then Mr. Beaman won a certificate of innocence through litigation in the Circuit Court of McLean County, and then the Governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence. Any one of these events would defeat summary judgment on the “indicative of innocence” prong all by itself. Together, they make this issue a no-brainer.

<sup>3</sup> Defendants argue that advice of state's attorneys defeats a claim of malicious prosecution, Def. Br. 42, but do not make any showing that a state's attorney advised them to suppress evidence or otherwise engage in misconduct.

A gubernatorial pardon on the basis of innocence alone establishes that the proceedings concluded in the plaintiff’s favor. Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F. Supp. 2d 660, 664, 680 (N.D. Ill. 2005). A certificate of innocence is “relevant at least to the ‘indicative of innocence’ element of plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim.” Kluppelberg v. Burge, 84 F. Supp. 3d 741, 744 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (citation omitted). The instant case comes to this Court on summary judgment; therefore, relevant evidence satisfies plaintiff’s burden. The mere fact that the certificate is not preclusive in this proceeding “does not bar evidentiary use of the certificate.” Id. at 745.<sup>4</sup>

Even if Mr. Beaman did not come to court with a certificate of innocence and a pardon from the Governor, the “indicative of innocence” prong still would be a jury question. The “dismissal of a . . . charge against the plaintiff at the instance of the prosecutor” generally suffices to show favorable termination. Rich v. Baldwin, 133 Ill. App. 3d 712, 715 (5th Dist. 1985). The State’s Attorney’s Office not only dropped the charges, but it did so after this Court unanimously declared, “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding [plaintiff] guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him . . .” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81.

<sup>4</sup> The certificate of innocence resulted from an adversarial judicial proceeding in which the State opposed the petition. R.3472. DNA testing initiated by the State then proved that plaintiff did not kill Ms. Lockmiller. Id. Only then did the State drop its opposition to the certificate of innocence. Id. It did so because the DNA evidence established plaintiff’s innocence, A.3355-3366, not because of some “settlement agreement,” Def. Br. 45, between plaintiff and the State. R.121.

Defendants fail to come forward with admissible evidence to refute the ordinary presumption that proceedings conclude in a manner indicative of innocence if a court throws out a conviction and a prosecutor drops the case. The testimony of Mr. Souk about why the State’s Attorney might have dropped the charges after this Court’s ruling is inadmissible because Mr. Souk was speculating and lacked personal knowledge. A.2962-2966. He had long since departed the State’s Attorney’s Office to assume a judicial role and was not consulted about dropping the charges. Id.

II. The Civil Conspiracy Claim Must Proceed to Trial.

The defendants’ parallel malfeasance provides the strongest evidence of conspiracy. Freesmeyer lied to the grand jury, manipulated time trials, and concealed exculpatory evidence. Zayas let Mr. Beaman get arrested even though he knew the case was shoddy and incomplete. Whether Warner hid the Murray polygraph presents a genuine issue of fact, as the federal district court recognized. Taking these facts as true, it would be an extraordinary coincidence if the defendants all decided in solitude to cook the evidence in a way that would nail Alan Beaman, a college student with an alibi that placed him 125 miles from the scene. This claim, too, must go to a jury.

The intra-corporate conspiracy doctrine does not bar this claim. “Courts have recognized two exceptions to the Illinois intracorporate conspiracy doctrine: (1) a conspirator acts out of self-interest rather than in the interest of the principal; and (2) when the scope of the conspirators act beyond the scope of their official duties.” Whitley v. Taylor Bean & Whitacker Mortg. Corp., 607 F. Supp. 2d 885, 897 n.5 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (citation omitted). Relying on these exceptions, courts routinely refuse to apply the doctrine to police misconduct<sup>5</sup> This Court should do the same. Misconduct and evidence suppression neither benefit a police department nor fall within a detective's legitimate duties.

III. The Remaining Claims Must Proceed to Trial.

Plaintiff did not waive his intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, as his appellate brief addressed it with argument and citation. A.3379. Defendants contend that this claim must rise or fall with the malicious prosecution claim, Def. Br. 46-47, and plaintiff agrees. The same holds for the respondeat superior and indemnification claims—they should be reinstated with the malicious prosecution claim.

IV. Conclusion

The Court should reverse the appellate court and remand this case for trial.

Respectfully submitted,

ALAN BEAMAN

NATURE OF THE CASE

The wrongful conviction of Alan Wayne Beaman is a stain on the history of Illinois. In the wake of unanimous Supreme Court decisions in Beaman's favor, these proceedings will decide whether the men who caused that conviction through a dishonest and biased investigation face a trial.

This Court is familiar with the criminal case against Beaman, which resulted in his wrongful conviction and incarceration for over a dozen years. The Supreme Court reversed the conviction unanimously in 2008, finding that the State hid evidence and underscoring "the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against [Beaman]." People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 81 (2008). The prosecution then dropped all charges, Beaman won a certificate of innocence based on DNA evidence, and the governor pardoned him, noting his innocence. Appendix ("A.") 340-42, 2961, 3377.

Beaman brought this suit, sounding principally in malicious prosecution, and named as defendants the detectives responsible for his wrongful conviction. A.308-37. The tort consists of five elements: (1) commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant; (2) termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) malice; and (5) damages resulting to the plaintiff. Swick v. Liautaud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 512 (1996).

The circuit court granted summary judgment against Beaman under the first four elements. A.27-33. This Court affirmed under the commencement or continuance element, applying the pressure, influence, or misstatement test to this prong. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 58. This Court found as a matter of law that the defendants did not pressure, influence, or mislead the prosecutors. Id. ¶¶ 60-72.

The Supreme Court unanimously reversed and remanded, holding that this Court erred in applying the pressure, influence, or misstatement test and instructing that on remand, “the appellate court must examine whether the defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in Beaman’s prosecution.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47.

ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

The issues presented for review concern the first four elements of the malicious prosecution tort:

1. Commencement or continuance: Could a reasonable juror find that “defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding” by “play[ing] a significant role in Beaman’s prosecution[?]” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47.

2. Absence of probable cause: Does probable cause against Beaman present an issue for the jury given the lack of evidence against him, his lack of opportunity to commit a murder 130 miles from his home, and the existence of more viable suspects?

3. Malice: Does the malice of the defendants present an issue for the jury where they immediately selected Beaman as the killer, hid evidence, and conducted a biased investigation?

4. Favorable termination: Did the proceedings against Beaman conclude in his favor, where the Supreme Court unanimously vacated his conviction, he won a certificate of innocence, and the governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence?

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Introduction and Summary

As the summer of 1993 gave way to fall, Alan Beaman was home in Rockford, where he spent the final weeks of the summer catching up with childhood friends, working nights at his uncle's grocery store, singing and playing guitar at his family's church, and preparing to start his senior year at Illinois Wesleyan University. A.951-52, 2900. On August 28, Jennifer Lockmiller, Beaman's former girlfriend, was found dead in her apartment in Normal, some 130 miles away. A.38.

Defendant Timothy Freesmeyer, a detective in the Normal Police Department, immediately selected Beaman as the primary suspect. A.1576. Aided by Defendants David Warner and Frank Zayas, Freesmeyer conducted an investigation to reach a predetermined result: Beaman did it. See infra at 4-5, 10-14. The defendants misled the grand jury, hid a polygraph report inculcating a steroid-abusing drug dealer who beat women, manipulated driving trials to discredit Beaman's alibi, brushed aside exculpatory evidence, and refused to conduct a serious investigation of the viable suspects. See infra at 6-11,17-18.

It worked. Freesmeyer "solved" the murder of a college student in a small town and testified as the prosecution's star witness at trial. A.2971, 2975. He walked out of the Lockmiller case with a sergeant's chevrons and a glowing recommendation from the lead prosecutor, and he now runs a law enforcement consulting business. A.1409-10, 2971, 3207. Meanwhile, the man who killed and raped Ms. Lockmiller remains on the streets. Alan Beaman—slight, scrawny, and innocent—spent nearly 13 years in prison, while his friends completed their education, married their spouses, and raised their children.

B. The Murder

Jennifer Lockmiller was last seen alive at noon on August 25, 1993. A.46-47. Three days later, her body was found in the bedroom of her apartment. A.38. Her shirt was pulled up exposing her breasts, her shorts and underwear were pulled down, a pair of scissors protruded from her chest, and an alarm clock cord was tied around her neck. A.38, 41.

C. A Witness Makes a Guess, and Freesmeyer Targets Beaman

On Day One of the investigation, Defendant Freesmeyer, who was to become the lead investigator in the case, selected Beaman as the primary suspect. A.1576. Morgan Keefe, an acquaintance of the victim, had discovered the body and told the police Beaman might be the killer, though she had no personal knowledge of the crime. A.1374. She was, in her words, “guessing.” A.1374.

On the first day of the investigation, no alibi had been investigated, there were no eyewitness accounts, no physical evidence linked Beaman to the crime, and the autopsy had not been completed. A.3213, 3305-07. The crime scene suggested a killer of considerable strength and power; Beaman was thin and small. A.1360, 3221-22.

Lockmiller lived on a busy thoroughfare in a transient college town; this produced, in the words of Defendant Zayas, the overall head of the detective division, “an open case” with “so many possibilities.” A.1353. The victim might have been killed by an intimate partner. Or a man she had recently met. A.1716-18, 1723-25, 1731, 1733. Or a would-be burglar she discovered in the apartment. A.1358-62. Zayas summed it up:

Q. So there were a lot of different factors that pointed to a potentially broad range of suspects, right?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

A.1353.

The scene suggested a stranger because Lockmiller's apartment, usually tidy, was in disarray. A.1359, 1372-73. Someone appeared to have rummaged through the closet, A.1359, left food and dishes out on the kitchen counter, and tossed a garbage bag on the living room couch. A.72-73, 1359-60, 1372-73, 1594-95. One of Lockmiller's earrings was on the floor near the door, and a shoe was near the bedroom. A.1360. The scene suggested that the assailant attacked Lockmiller at the entry to her apartment, overpowered her, forced her into the bedroom, raped her, and killed her. A.1360.

Lockmiller encountered a cast of potential killers through excessive drinking and heroin use. A.1288, 1292. A new paramour had moved in with her two or three weeks before the murder. A.1727-28. She had broken up with another man who wanted her back. The two planned to see each other two days after the murder. A.1729-30.

Late at night on the first day of the investigation, Beaman agreed to a lengthy interview by two detectives, voluntarily accompanied them to a police station, agreed to have the interview taped, declared his innocence throughout the interview, and discontinued the interview only when it became highly accusatory. A.2900-48.

None of this mattered. Freesmeyer admitted that, within hours of the discovery of the body, he had already designated Alan Beaman as the primary suspect and likely killer. A.1576.

D. Alan Beaman and Jennifer Lockmiller

Alan Beaman grew up in Rockford in a devout Methodist family. A.948-51. His father worked as an engineer. A.944. His mother taught math at the local high school. A.943. He was in the high school marching band. A. 978. Like his parents, Beaman was active in the local Methodist parish, where he played guitar for the youth group. A.948-

51. A student at Illinois Wesleyan University in Normal, A.355, he had no criminal history.

Beaman had ended his romantic relationship with Lockmiller over a month before the murder. A.2951-52. The relationship was unhappy, while it lasted. Lockmiller was intimate with other men, including Michael Swaine, Beaman's roommate and close friend. A.1752, 3314-15. The couple fought. Beaman displayed temper more than once, raising his voice at Lockmiller and, on two occasions when she was being unfaithful, kicking open the door to her apartment. A.1752, 3314-16. There was no indication that Beaman ever directed violence at any person, and police were informed that he was "not physical." A.2950; Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 78–79 (noting that "the State established that petitioner had been violent toward objects, but not people").

A few days before her death, Lockmiller called Beaman many times, trying to restart their relationship. A.1044, 1046-48. Beaman refused. A.1046-48. He had begun seeing someone else. A.1145.

E. Suspects Ignored

The defendants decided to ignore every avenue but one—the murderer was an intimate partner. A.3242. They did not bother to find out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area, A.3243, 3246, or to interview all of the people Lockmiller had been in contact with in the days and hours prior to her death, A.1650-51, 2584.

The defendants disregarded other potential suspects. While they confirmed alibis for two suspects, Stacey Gates and Michael Swaine, they ignored the rest. A.3231, 3242. As one example of the many potential suspects, Lockmiller flirted with and rejected several men on August 21, four days before the murder, when she drank at various bars. At one of the bars, Spanky's, Lockmiller met a long-haired stranger. A.1716-17. Lockmiller, described by her friend as "the queen of scamming drinks off guys," flirted with the stranger, and then "kind of walked off." A.1723. This man called Lockmiller two days before the murder. He asked Lockmiller on a date and was rebuffed. A.1725, 1731. But this man kept calling her. A.1733. After Lockmiller and her friends left Spanky's and were en route to another bar, they encountered two other men, one of whom gave Lockmiller his phone number, writing it on a piece of paper with lipstick that he borrowed from Lockmiller's friend. A.1717-18, 1725. Lockmiller threw the piece of paper away. A.1725. On the day before the murder, one of Lockmiller's friends encountered these two men again. A.1718. They asked why Lockmiller had not called them, and told Lockmiller's friend to have Lockmiller call them. A.1718. Investigators did not attempt to locate these potential suspects. A.1653-54, 2867-70.

An even more likely suspect was John Murray, who had an on-again, off-again sexual relationship with Lockmiller and was seeking to rekindle the relationship when she was killed. A.1733, 1752, 1757, 1764-75. Murray bragged to police: "[S]he completely like wanted to go out with me still. Like if she was alive today she would be calling me wanting to go back out with me." A.1752.

The crime scene suggested that the murder would have required a person who, unlike Beaman, was of "considerable strength and power." A.1360. Murray was a frightening, physically imposing man. A.1773, 1775, 1777 (stating that Murray "was big. He was big and long, curly dark hair and just—I don't know how to say it more than he was kind of a scary person”; describing Murray as “someone that could be explosive in his anger”; stating that Murray was “physically large” and “scary”).

Murray was a drug dealer, and he sold drugs to Lockmiller. A.1795-96. In fact, she owed him money for drugs at the time of her death. A.1795. Although Murray’s story was that Lockmiller owed him approximately $20, Detective Daniels, a member of the investigative team, thought that she might have owed Murray more money for drugs. A.2348-49. This could have added to Murray’s motive to kill her. A.1824, 2348-49.

The investigators learned that Murray beat women. A.1729-30. On October 7, 1994, Murray beat his girlfriend, Deborah Mackoway, pinning her to the floor and elbowing her repeatedly in the chest. A.2544. The night before, Murray had grabbed her and bruised her. A.2545. He beat her, she reported, “on a continual basis.” A.2543. Murray abused steroids both before and after the Lockmiller murder, and these drugs made him violent and erratic. A.2558, 2559, 2547. Murray had been using steroids (and cocaine) in 1993, the year Lockmiller was killed. A.2558-59.<sup>1</sup> In 1994, Murray was again experimenting with street steroid injections, making his behavior “unexplainable,” as Mackoway put it. A.2547. He gave her a black eye while on the drugs. A.2547. Murray was violent toward other women as well. He slapped a different girlfriend, and may have abused yet a third. A.1773, 2561.

During the investigation, Murray lied to detectives about several matters, including his whereabouts on the day of the murder. During his first interview with police, Murray claimed that he left Normal and drove home at 3:00 p.m. on August 24, the day before the murder. A.1741. Mackoway, however, told investigators that Murray did not leave town until after 4:20 p.m. on August 25, the day of the murder. A.2563. Furthermore, no one could account for Murray's whereabouts on August 25 between when Mackoway left for work in the morning and 2 p.m. A.2563-64. Murray also lied to investigators about several other matters, including the fact that he sold Lockmiller drugs, A.1746, 1795-96, drove over to her apartment to collect a drug debt shortly before she was killed, A.1738-40, 1791, and was having sex with her while she was dating Beaman (not just "talking," as Murray originally claimed). A.1744, 1752, 2347-48.

<sup>1</sup> This Court’s prior opinion incorrectly states: “Murray began taking steroids in January 1994 and he had begun acting erratically.” Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 14. In fact, police reports show that Murray was also taking steroids in 1993, before the murder. A.2558-59.

Murray refused to comply with a polygrapher's instructions during a lie detector test about whether he murdered Jennifer Lockmiller. The polygrapher reported: "After being advised several times to follow directions, the subject informed this examiner that he was not able to comply. Subsequently, the subject was dismissed from this laboratory." A.2586. During his deposition in this case, Murray refused to answer any questions about his role in the Lockmiller murder, invoking the Fifth Amendment. A.1769-70.

F. Warner Hides Evidence

The Murray polygraph report was concealed from the lead prosecutor, James Souk. A.3268-69. Defendant Warner received the report from the polygrapher, and was the last person to have the report before it disappeared. A.2744-45. Warner claims to have handed the Murray polygraph report to Detective Daniels, but Daniels has no recollection of it. A.2239, 2477-78, 2535, 2744-45. Warner's story that he gave the report to Daniels (and no one else) violates the three-prong policy he was trained to follow upon receipt of such a report: (1) ensure that the head of the detective division received a copy, (2) submit the report to central records, and (3) disseminate copies to all investigators on the case. A.1354-55. Warner failed to perform all three of these mandatory steps. A.2744-45.

Zayas testified that the polygraph report would have been a “red flag” to the prosecutors or defense attorneys had it not been concealed from them. A.3402-03. Daniels agreed that “Murray’s noncooperation in the polygraph and failure to schedule a repeat polygraph, that as well would be important information for anybody who was evaluating Murray as a possible suspect.” A.2360. Souk himself testified:

And certainly I would have been interested in what the polygrapher had to say or what had happened. It’s a strange report. It’s different than any I think I have ever seen in terms of apparently didn’t get through the entire process. So it’s not an opinion that the guy was lying, it’s not even inconclusive. It’s an incomplete. I would have found it of interest and asked some questions I think, yeah.

A: . . . I would have asked some questions and looked at it more, and, you know, polygraph evidence, while totally inadmissible, is useful for investigative purposes. In fact, we used [other polygraph evidence] in this case for investigative purposes.

A.3422-23 (emphasis added).

G. Attempts To Obtain a Confession Fail

Defendants tried several times to obtain an incriminating admission from Beaman, all to no avail. A.1305-06, 1308-11, 1320, 1326, 1328-29, 1334-35. Freesmeyer spoke with Beaman many times during the nine-month investigation of the Lockmiller homicide, often while wearing a wire. A.1320, 1326, 1328-29, 1334-35. The defendants convinced Beaman’s friend and roommate to wear a wire and engage Beaman in two separate conversations about the murder. A.1305-06, 1308-11, 2224-27, 3328-44, 3345-54, 3320-21, 3322-23. Beaman made no incriminating statements. He also maintained his innocence over a series of interrogations in which defendants insisted he was the killer.

A.1316, 2613-14, 2900-48. Freesmeyer even threatened Beaman with the death penalty if he refused to confess. A.1318. None of it caused Beaman to waiver.

H. No Physical or Eyewitness Evidence

No probative physical evidence connected Beaman to the crime. A.1356-57. Two of his fingerprints were found on the alarm clock at the crime scene, but that fact lacked evidentiary significance. A.1587, 2332-33, 2967, 2969, 3253, 3266. Beaman had repeatedly been an overnight visitor in Lockmiller's apartment and used the alarm clock. A.874-75, 953, 2332-33. Michael Swaine had also stayed overnight at Lockmiller's apartment and used the alarm clock. Four of Swaine's prints were found on the alarm clock, as well as an unidentified fingerprint. A.3324-25. No other physical evidence conceivably linked Beaman to the crime.<sup>2</sup>

Lacking serious evidence, the defendants turned to collecting stories from college students about Beaman's sometimes tumultuous relationship with Lockmiller. Beaman had yelled at her, been jealous, become angry over her infidelity, and called her crude names, A.1764, 3297, but no witness (and no other evidence) placed him in Normal, as opposed to Rockford, where he was home with his parents, on the day of the murder. A.3226.

I. Freesmeyer Manipulates Time Trials

Freesmeyer stuck with his Day One guess—Beaman did it—even when an alibi made that guess impossible. A.1576, 2620. A security video showed Beaman at his bank in Rockford, some 130 miles from Lockmiller's apartment, at 10:11 a.m. on the day of the murder. A.1312. At 10:37 and 10:39 a.m., two calls were placed from the Beaman family residence to Beaman's youth minister. A.3285. When Beaman's mother returned home at approximately 2:15 p.m. that afternoon, Beaman was in his room asleep, with the family dog lying in the adjacent hallway. A.3271-78. It would have been impossible for Beaman to leave the family home in Rockford following the 10:39 a.m. call, drive the 130 miles to Normal, kill and rape Lockmiller, and return 130 miles to his bedroom prior to his mother's 2:15 p.m. return. A.2955-59.

<sup>2</sup> Two unidentified fingerprints were also discovered on the alarm clock. They were never run through a matching database, such as the FBI's Automated Fingerprint Identification System (AFIS)—not during the investigation, not to this day. See A.3176.

Freesmeyer therefore set out to support a fanciful scenario in which Beaman did not make the calls. A.1339, 3219-20. Scrupulously adhering to speed limits and using a downtown route on city streets—not the “bypass route” used by locals—Freesmeyer purported to establish that Beaman did not have time to get home from the bank to make the calls. A.1339, 3219-20. On the other hand, taking the bypass route—even while never exceeding the speed limit—would have given Beaman ample time to make the calls. A.2958, 3219-20. In fact, Freesmeyer did a time trial using the bypass route, which proved this very point, even while he drove the entire route at 55 miles per hour on a four-lane interstate highway. A.3219-20. But he omitted the exculpatory time trial from his detailed police report and avoided telling the jury about it at trial. A.1339, 2648-50, 3070-71, 3427-28, 3430-32. Not so for the other time trial that suggested Beaman could not have made the calls. Freesmsyer recorded that in his report, and he let the jury know about it. A.1339, 3070-71. All told, Freesmeyer recorded at least 14 time trials but omitted only the exculpatory one. A. 1339, 1345-46.

No one other than Beaman could have made the calls. His father was undeniably at work. A.957. Plaintiff's mother, Carol Beaman, also stated that she did not make the calls. A.3279. And she could not have made them. Records confirm that Carol Beaman signed her elderly mother in at the convalescence facility where she was a resident at 10 a.m. that morning, after taking her mother on an outing. A.2572-73. The facility was more than ten miles from the Beaman residence. A.955. Carol Beaman spent 20 to 30 minutes settling her mother back into her room and then went to a Walmart—which was directly across the street—where she shopped for school supplies and stood in a check-out line. A.2574-75, 2577-81, 3279-80. A receipt proved that Carol Beaman checked out of Walmart at 11:10 a.m., meaning that she could not have made the crucial 10:37 a.m. call because she was at the Walmart across town. A.2577. Beaman was the only remaining person with access to the phone. A.3280. Carol Beaman stated that she naturally went from the convalescence facility to the Walmart right across the street, but that did not fit with Freesmeyer’s theory that she went home in between the facility and the Walmart to call the youth minister. A.2576. Freesmeyer decided that she must have driven 10 miles home, made a call, and then driven ten miles back to the Walmart. A.2660.

Even assuming Beaman did not make the calls, committing the murder would have been nearly impossible. That scenario would have Beaman leaving the Rockford bank around 10:11, driving 130 miles to Lockmiller’s apartment in Normal, committing a rape and murder, driving 130 miles back to his family home in Rockford, and returning before his mother’s arrival at 2:15. In testing this scenario, Freesmeyer first observed the speed limit, but the trip took four hours and eleven minutes—more time than the four hours and four minutes between the bank video at 10:11 and Carol Beaman’s confirmation of Beaman’s presence home in Rockford at 2:15. A.1339. To discredit the alibi, Freesmeyer then drove much faster, at an average speed of 75 miles per hour, 10 miles per hour over the posted speed limit. A.1345-46. Freesmeyer was able to make the trip in three hours and 45 minutes. A.1345-46. Beaman could not have coaxed his Ford Escort to travel at such a high average speed for well over 100 miles: the car frequently broke down, could not sustain high speeds, and was described by one passenger as a “piece of junk.” Even then, Beaman would have had but a 20-minute window to commit the rape and murder. A.1345-46, 1789-90, 3284-84. This scenario also requires Beaman’s mother to have placed the calls, meaning she left the convalescence facility, drove 10 miles home to make two telephone calls, drove 10 miles back to Walmart (directly across from the convalescence facility), and then drove home again.

J. Defendants Ignore a Witness who Exonerates Beaman

In addition to dismissing Beaman’s alibi, the defendants ignored critical evidence that exculpated him. David Singley lived in the second-floor apartment directly across the hall from Lockmiller. Singley told the investigators that, as he arrived home from class at approximately 2 p.m. on the day of the murder, he heard someone quickly slam shut the door to Lockmiller’s apartment. A.3300-01, 3304. He also heard the stereo on in Lockmiller’s apartment. A.3300-01, 3304. About 10 minutes later, Singley heard Lockmiller’s door open and shut again, followed by the sound of footsteps going down the stairs and the outside door to the building being opened. A.3300-01, 3304. Singley’s information established either that Lockmiller was alive at 2 p.m. or, if she was already dead, that her killer was still present in the apartment. In either event, it would have been impossible for Beaman to kill Lockmiller. All agree that he was in Rockford, some 130 miles away, no later than 2:15 p.m. A.87.

K. The Decision To Arrest Beaman

The defendants' investigation resulted in the arrest and indictment of Beaman. The prosecutors did not direct the defendants' handling of the investigation. A.1702-03. Freesmeyer does not recall whether Souk even made recommendations for the investigation prior to the charge. A.1442-43. Rather, it was the investigation that set the course of the prosecution. The State's Attorney, Charles Reynard, testified that the investigators "were furnishing us information as to what evidence they had uncovered during their investigation." A.3408. Reynard's opinions as to Beaman's guilt were "formed on the apprehension of evidence as it was reported to me back during the course of the investigation." A.3407. Souk testified that "there [were] several meetings of the people involved in this investigation, which included myself and a number of police officers would have been in on it." A.3420. Freesmeyer testified that he and Souk may have had as many as 50 contacts about the case before the decision to charge Beaman was made. A.1441.

The investigators and prosecutors held one of these meetings on May 16, 1994, and decided to charge Beaman. Souk testified the "purpose of the meeting" with the investigators was "to see if there was anything from the Normal Police Department to – that would have any impact on the decision, either, you know, pro or con as to whether he should be charged." A.3413. As one investigator put it, the focus of the meeting was "the case in general, the merits of the case." A.3411. According to Souk, the decision to charge Beaman reflected not only what was discussed at the meeting but the totality of the defendants' investigation:

Q: [The investigators'] input in effect was not just what they said at the May 16 meeting, their input included all the things that they'd done in the investigation up till that point in time, their input into the charging decision; is that a fair summary?

A: Well, I think the totality of their investigation, plus whatever might have been said at the meeting was taken into account, yes.

A.3415.

There are conflicting accounts about whether everyone in attendance supported the decision to make the arrest. As this Court noted in its previous decision, Daniels's recollection is that "he suggested a list of investigative avenues to pursue before arresting [Beaman]," but that "Souk responded, 'I think we've got our guy' and stated, 'we went as far as we can with this case.'" Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 13. But the other attendees recall that the investigators voiced support at the meeting to arrest Beaman for murder. One investigator testified:

A: I believe the consensus was that he be arrested.

Q: Consensus of whom?

A: All those in attendance.

A.3411. Similarly, Freesmeyer was adamant that none of the investigators expressed any doubt at the meeting that Beaman should be arrested:

Q. Did anyone express doubts about arresting Mr. Beaman?

A. That I do remember. And, no, there was no hesitation in effecting the arrest of Mr. Beaman at that meeting.

Q. No one expressed any doubt whatsoever about arresting Mr. Beaman?

A. That is my recollection, sir.

...

A. That is my recollection. There was no doubt expressed in arresting Mr. Beaman.

A.1458-59. In particular, Freesmeyer denied that Daniels spoke up to oppose the arrest, stating that Daniels kept any doubts to himself: "My statement that there may have been doubts based on – this is based on subsequent statements that [Daniels] has made throughout this entire process that he may have had doubts at that meeting; however, there was nothing raised at that meeting that said we should not arrest Alan Beaman for the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller.” A1462-63 (emphasis added). See also A.1461 (“I’m saying [Daniels] may have had doubt; but there was nothing expressed in that meeting that said we should not arrest Alan Beaman for the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller.”).

L. Beaman Arrested: “I Think We Needed To Work on it Some More”

Beaman was arrested in May 1994. A.1335. Five months later, Zayas admitted that that the evidence was still not sufficient for the case to be ready for prosecution:

Q. Were you certain that Alan Beaman killed Jennifer Lockmiller at any point prior to your retirement?

A. No. I don’t think we had all the information needed at the time when I left.
That was still in limbo.

....

A. I don’t think the case was ready to be sent to the State [for prosecution] yet. I think we needed to work on it some more.

A.1356.

M. Freesmeyer Delivers the Indictment and Conviction

Following Beaman’s arrest, Freesmeyer moved into the State’s Attorney’s Office and worked on the case full time through Beaman’s trial and conviction. A.2595. He was the principal witness before the grand jury and testified over the course of three days. A.3217, 3223. He lied about alternative suspects, particularly Murray, claiming that investigators had not “locate[d] any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller.” A.3218. The grand jury indicted Beaman.

At trial, Freesmeyer, now a sergeant, testified as the star witness for the prosecution over the course of two days. A.3217, 3223. Alan Beaman was convicted on April 1, 1995, a good day for Timothy Freesmeyer. As another investigator agreed, Freesmeyer would garner the most credit for solving the case, and would have received the most blame if it went unsolved. A.1384. The prosecutor slapped Freesmeyer on the back in a letter to the Chief of Police: “Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. Beaman was sentenced to 50 years in prison. This Court affirmed on direct appeal, over the vigorous dissent of Justice Cook, who found the evidence insufficient to prove guilt. No. 4–95–0396 (unpublished order under Supreme Court Rule 23) (Cook, J., dissenting).

N. Alan Beaman Clears His Name

The jury that convicted Beaman never heard the evidence against Murray. For that reason, the Supreme Court unanimously vacated the conviction in 2008. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56 (2008). The case against Beaman had fallen apart when his post-conviction lawyers unearthed evidence hidden from the defense that inculpated Murray. Id. at 66, 80. The Court divided the suppressed Murray evidence into four categories:

(1) John Doe [i.e., Murray] failed to complete the polygraph examination; (2) Doe was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to petitioner’s trial; (3) Doe had physically abused his girlfriend on numerous prior occasions; and (4) Doe’s use of steroids had caused him to act erratically.

Id. at 74-75. The Court found that the suppressed polygraph evidence was important because it “would have bolstered a claim by petitioner that [Murray] was a viable suspect not only because the circumstances may be viewed as evasive, but also because the polygraph examiner indicated that Doe was specifically identified as a suspect.” Id. at 76. The Court noted that the evidence against Murray was especially critical given the weakness of the evidence against Beaman. Id. at 79. “It is clear,” the Court found, “that the evidence of petitioner’s opportunity to commit the murder is not as strong as that against Doe.” Id. Indeed, Murray “had a clear opportunity to commit the offense. He lived approximately 1 ½ miles from Jennifer’s apartment and did not have any verification of his location before 1 p.m. on the day of the murder.” Id. at 80. Moreover, Murray lied about his alibi—he “gave a false alibi stating he left town the day before the murder. That false exculpatory statement could be used as probative evidence of consciousness of guilt.” Id. at 80–81. Finally, Murray had a “motive to commit the murder”—he wanted to rekindle his sexual relationship with Lockmiller, but she was entangled with another man. Id. at 80.

The paucity of incriminating evidence and the concealment of exculpatory evidence made the conviction a nullity: “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding petitioner guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him, along with the nondisclosure of critical evidence.” Id. at 81.

After the Court’s unanimous ruling, the State’s Attorney’s Office dropped all charges against Beaman. A.2961. He then petitioned for a certificate of innocence. After DNA testing requested and directed by the State provided yet further evidence of Beaman’s innocence, A.3355-58, the State dropped its opposition to the petition, A.51. On April 29, 2013, Alan Beaman was declared innocent of the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller by the Circuit Court for the Eleventh Judicial District. A.51-52. Even after the certificate of innocence, the Governor of Illinois granted a pardon to Beaman “based upon innocence as if no conviction.”<sup>3</sup>

O. Procedural History: Federal Litigation

Beaman brought a federal lawsuit against a group of defendants that includes those named in this case. Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805 (C.D. Ill. 2014), aff'd sub nom. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015). Beaman's principal claim was that the defendants withheld exculpatory evidence under Brady v. Maryland. Id. at 820. The district court held that most of the suppressed exculpatory evidence was not actionable because the defendants provided it to the prosecutor, who enjoyed absolute immunity under federal law for his failure to disclose the Brady material. Id. at 826.

The Murray polygraph was different in three respects. First, the federal court found that a reasonable jury could conclude that Warner concealed the polygraph from the prosecution. Id. at 827. Second, the court held that suppression of the polygraph report would constitute a Brady violation even if the other exculpatory evidence had been turned over to the prosecutor. Id. at 830. The polygraph itself could have changed the course of the prosecution: "Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect." Id. at 830 n.8. Third, the court concluded that a reasonable jury could find the requisite intent—Warner buried the polygraph deliberately. Id. at 827. Specifically, the court found "sufficient evidence to support an . . . inference that [Warner] intentionally withheld the [polygraph report] from Souk." Id. The court noted that Warner, for "reasons unknown," violated department policy that required him to give a copy of the report to Zayas. Id. "A jury could infer from the failure to follow policy and the conflicting testimony that there was intentional suppression of the evidence by Warner, the only Defendant shown by the record to have possessed the polygraph report." Id.

Despite the genuine issue of material fact over Warner's deliberate suppression of the polygraph, the district court nonetheless granted summary judgment to Warner on the ground of qualified immunity, a doctrine that pertains to federal damages claims arising under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Id. at 831. Although a jury could find that Warner violated the Constitution, he enjoyed qualified immunity because the right of a criminal defendant to receive polygraph reports incriminating alternative suspects had not yet been clearly established at the time Warner suppressed the evidence. Id.

In addition to the federal law claims for Brady violations, Beaman asserted state law claims for malicious prosecution, civil conspiracy, intentional infliction of emotional distress, respondeat superior, and indemnification. Id. at 811. Having dismissed the federal law claims, the court was divested of supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims and dismissed them without prejudice, not reaching their merits. Id. at 831. The Seventh Circuit affirmed. Beaman, 776 F.3d at 503.

P. Procedural History: The Instant Case

Beaman brought the current action in the Circuit Court of McLean County in April 2014, pleading the state law claims that the federal court had dismissed without prejudice. A.308-37. He requested and was granted assignment of an out-of-circuit judge. The circuit court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, concluding that Beaman could not satisfy the commencement or continuance, lack of probable cause, malice, and favorable termination prongs. A.28-33. The circuit court dismissed the remaining claims as dependent on the malicious prosecution claim. Id.

Beaman appealed. This Court affirmed summary judgment on the commencement or continuance element of malicious prosecution, and did not address the circuit court's other grounds for dismissing that claim. Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 50. This Court applied the pressure, influence, or misstatement test to the commencement or continuance prong, concluding that the defendants did not misrepresent the investigation to the prosecution or pressure or influence the State’s Attorneys. Id. ¶ 58.

The Supreme Court unanimously reversed and remanded, holding that this Court erred in applying the pressure, influence, or misstatement test. The Court instructed that on remand, “the appellate court must examine whether the defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in Beaman’s prosecution.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47. Building on its prior decision in Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143 (1866), the Supreme Court stated that “[i]f [a] defendant took some affirmative action to ‘advise and encourage the arrest’ that led to the prosecution, then the defendant could be liable.” Id. ¶ 36 (quoting Gilbert, 42 Ill. at 147). The Supreme Court recognized that investigators can cause malicious prosecutions because prosecutors necessarily rely on them: “This court has recognized that prosecutors ordinarily rely on police and other agencies to investigate criminal acts. Significantly, ‘it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.’” Id. ¶ 43 (quoting People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24).

ARGUMENT

A. Summary of Argument

The Supreme Court’s opinion underscores that “[s]ummary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22. It was not warranted here. Applying the significant role test, a rational juror could find that the defendants were a cause in fact and legal cause of Beaman's prosecution in at least three ways, individually or in combination. First, a rational juror could find that the defendants caused the prosecution by arbitrarily selecting Beaman as the killer on Day One and working backwards from there. Second, a rational juror could find that the defendants caused the prosecution by hiding the Murray polygraph from the State's Attorneys. Third, a rational juror could find that the Defendants caused the prosecution through other bad-faith misconduct, including misleading grand jury testimony and manipulated time trials.

It does not matter that the State's Attorneys made the ultimate decision to indict. The Supreme Court has now said so. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 43. Moreover, a rational juror could find that the prosecutors' decision to indict would not have occurred without the conduct and input of the defendants, who were responsible for the biased investigation. Because an injury often has more than one cause in fact, it is a false choice to suggest that either the prosecutors caused the charges or the investigators did. They both did. And legal cause is a question of foreseeability. A wrongful prosecution is an entirely foreseeable result of hiding evidence and conducting a biased investigation.

Turning to the other prongs of the malicious prosecution tort, the circuit court's reasoning is indefensible and its decision should be reversed. The court found probable cause to arrest Beaman as a matter of law without examining the record, which presented a thicket of disputed facts and inferences. Instead, the court simply incorporated the defendants' brief, finding probable cause "as specifically stated in paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants' Memorandum of Law." A.30-31. Next, the circuit court found no malice as a matter of law by ignoring the bias and misconduct that pervaded the investigation. Finally, the circuit court arrived at the remarkable conclusion that the proceedings against Beaman did not terminate in his favor, even though the Supreme Court unanimously vacated his conviction, the State dropped all charges, Beaman won a certificate of innocence, and the Governor pardoned him on the basis of innocence.

Mr. Beaman's remaining claims (intentional infliction of emotional distress, conspiracy, respondeat superior, and indemnification) are intertwined with the malicious prosecution claim. The claims all rise or fall together and should be remanded for trial.

B. Standard of Review

The Supreme Court's decision in this case underscores the drastic nature of a grant of summary judgment and the rigorous showing required of the movant: "Summary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation and 'should be allowed only when the right of the moving party is clear and free from doubt.'" Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22 (emphasis added). Summary judgment must not be granted "where reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or where there is a dispute as to a material fact." Id. Courts must construe the record "strictly against the movant and liberally in favor of the opponent." Id. Appellate review is de novo. Jackson v. TLC Assocs., Inc., 185 Ill. 2d 418, 424 (1998).

C. The Malicious Prosecution Claim Should Proceed to a Trial on the Merits.

1. Commencement or Continuance Prong: A Reasonable Juror Could Find That The Defendants Caused the Malicious Prosecution of Alan Beaman.

The Supreme Court instructed this Court to "examine whether the defendants' conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in Beaman's prosecution." Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47. The basis for causation in this case is simple: The defendants caused the malicious prosecution and wrongful conviction of Alan Beaman by selecting him as their man on Day One, and then conducting a biased investigation and concealing evidence to reach the predetermined result. The prosecution of the wrong person was the natural and foreseeable result of the defendants' biased investigation and their concealment of evidence. But for their misconduct, the malicious prosecution would not have occurred.

It is well-settled that proximate cause is ordinarily a question of fact for the jury. “[P]roximate cause consists of two distinct elements: cause in fact and legal cause.” Evans v. Shannon, 201 Ill. 2d 424, 434 (2002). Both are “factual matters for the jury to decide.” Lee v. Chicago Transit Auth., 152 Ill. 2d 432, 454 (1992).<sup>4</sup> In this case, causation is a jury issue because a rational juror could find that the biased investigation and concealment of evidence caused the prosecution in three ways described below, individually or in combination. At minimum, the “drastic remedy” of summary judgment was not permissible because “reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences” on the question of causation. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22.

a. A Rational Juror Could Find That The Investigation Ended with Charges Against Alan Beaman Because Defendants Selected Him As The Killer On Day One And Worked Backwards From There.

As the Supreme Court recognized in this case, prosecutorial decisions about whom to charge with a crime are heavily influenced by the manner in which the police conduct the investigation: “This court has recognized that prosecutors ordinarily rely on police and other agencies to investigate criminal acts. Significantly, ‘it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.’” Beaman, <sup>4</sup> See also French v. City of Springfield, 65 Ill. 2d 74, 79 (1976); Ney v. Yellow Cab Co., 2 Ill. 2d 74, 84 (1954); Davis v. Marathon Oil Co., 64 Ill. 2d 380, 395 (1976) (“What is the proximate cause of an injury is ordinarily a question of fact to be determined by a jury from a consideration of all of the evidence.”); Neering v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 383 Ill. 366, 381, (1943) (same); Jefferson v. City of Chicago, 269 Ill. App. 3d 672, 675 (1995).

2019 IL 122654, ¶ 43 (quoting People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24). In this case, a rational juror could find that Beaman never would have been charged if the defendants had conducted a fair investigation. If there had been such an investigation, someone else could have been indicted, and the murderer could have been caught. For example, a reasonable juror could find that Beaman would not have been charged if the defendants examined Murray the way they examined Beaman—if they had bugged his conversations with friends, threatened him with the death penalty if he did not confess, interrogated his friends about every time he yelled at someone or made a crude remark, or, for that matter, investigated Murray’s history of beating women, abusing steroids, and selling drugs. “[L]iability for malicious prosecution ‘calls for a commonsense assessment’ of those persons who played a significant role in the criminal case.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45 (quoting Amicus Brief of Former State and Federal Prosecutors in Support of Appellant Alan Beaman). It is a matter of common sense that a skewed and malicious investigation may result in charging an innocent person.

The prosecutors made the final charging decision at the May 16, 1994 meeting with defendants, but their final control over the decision does not matter: “Contrary to the appellate court’s standard . . . this court established long ago . . . that a person can be liable for commencing or continuing a malicious prosecution even if that person does not ultimately wield prosecutorial power . . . .” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 43.

The decision to charge was the foreseeable result of the defendants’ biased investigation. The final meeting did not occur in a vacuum, as if unaffected by and unconnected to the investigation that preceded it. Freesmeyer had decided that Beaman would be arrested seven months before the meeting, when he told plaintiff he was “going to be arrested for Jennifer’s death at one point or another.” A.1318. Souk and Freesmeyer discussed the investigation on as many as 50 occasions before the decision to charge Beaman was made at the May 16 meeting. A.1441. The charging decision reflected the “investigator’s input,” A.3405, and was based on the “evidence [the detectives] had uncovered during their investigation.” A.3408. The investigators’ input included “the totality of their investigation, plus whatever might have been said at the meeting.” A.3414. And the very “purpose of the meeting” was “to see if there was anything from the Normal Police Department to – that would have any impact on the decision, either, you know, pro or con as to whether he should be charged.” A.3413.

The decision at the meeting reflected a “consensus” of “[a]ll those in attendance,” not unilateral action by the prosecutors. A.3411. “There was no doubt expressed in arresting Mr. Beaman,” and “[n]o one raised objection to the arrest.” A.1459. Taking these accounts as true, a juror could find that the defendants’ role was “of so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and co-operation.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 36. Daniels claims he challenged the decision to arrest Beaman at the final meeting and was shut down by Souk, Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 61, but other attendees disagree. See supra at 16. Viewing the facts in the light most favorable to Beaman, Daniels did not speak up and oppose the arrest, and this Court’s prior opinion erred by treating his account as definitive.<sup>5</sup>

---

<sup>5</sup> Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 61 (“Plaintiff does not . . . identify any facts showing Freesmeyer pressured or exerted influence on the State’s Attorney and ASA’s decision to prosecute plaintiff. In fact, the evidence proves otherwise. Souk testified the decision was his. Daniels, who was present at the May 1994 meeting, supported that conclusion by showing Souk shut down any effort to leave the case open.”).

b. A Rational Juror Could Find That Defendants Caused The Prosecution By Hiding The Murray Polygraph From The Prosecutors.

The lead prosecutor testified that polygraph evidence is “useful for investigative purposes,” and that if he had known about the Murray polygraph, he would have “asked some questions and looked at it more.” A.3423. Even this may have been downplaying it. Knowing that he was immunized from liability, Souk was motivated to suggest that he had sole responsibility for the decision to prosecute and thereby protect the investigators who skewed the investigation and concealed the polygraph report.

This Court erred in its previous opinion by treating Souk’s claim that “Murray had no motive to kill Lockmiller” as undisputed and inferring from there that the polygraph would not have affected the charging decision because it “did not establish a motive.” Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 69. This Court’s conclusion conflicts directly with the federal district court’s analysis of the evidence on this very point: “Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, 830 n.8 (C.D. Ill. 2014), aff’d sub nom. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015).<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> This Court’s error in the previous opinion may in part reflect a misunderstanding of the federal district court’s decision. While the Illinois Supreme Court considered the Murray evidence in the aggregate, the federal court considered the polygraph standing alone on page 830 of its opinion. See Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 830. The federal court did so because the other Murray evidence, which had been disclosed to the prosecutors, was not relevant to whether Warner’s concealment of the Murray report from the prosecutors was material for Brady purposes. Having put the other Murray evidence to the side, the federal court concluded: “Plaintiff has provided sufficient evidence of a violation of his constitutional rights for the failure to disclose the Murray polygraph to the prosecution. Thus, the first inquiry in qualified immunity analysis is completed, and Plaintiff has shown facts that make out a violation of his due process right to the disclosure of material exculpatory evidence.” Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 830 (emphasis added).

It is hardly surprising that Souk might make misleading statements about the viability of other suspects given that he did just that in the criminal proceedings. See People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 80 (2008) (noting that “that the State’s [closing] argument relied upon the assertion that all other potential suspects had been eliminated from consideration” in closing argument even though Beaman “could have established [Murray] as a strong alternative suspect” had the Murray evidence not been suppressed); see also People v. Beaman, 368 Ill. App. 3d 759, 775 (4th Dist. 2006) (Cook, J., dissenting) (stating that the prosecution “le[ft] the jury to believe no one else had the motive and opportunity”).

Moreover, every member of the Supreme Court perceived that Murray had a motive, which undercuts Souk’s claim that he—an experienced prosecutor—subjectively failed to grasp that reality. Lockmiller’s drug debt to Murray “could have been offered to support a motive to commit the murder.” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 77. And Murray had a further motive: He gratified himself by harming women. Id. at 76 (evidence of harming women “supported an inference of [Murray’s] tendency to act violently toward others”). Thus, this Court was wrong to accept Souk’s self-serving statement that Murray had no motive and to infer from it that the polygraph report could not have changed the charging decision.

Moreover, those involved in the investigation recognized the polygraph’s importance. Zayas testified that the polygraph report would have been a “red flag” to the prosecutors or defense attorneys had it not been concealed. A.3403. Daniels agreed that “Murray’s noncooperation in the polygraph and failure to schedule a repeat polygraph, that as well would be important information for anybody who was evaluating Murray as a possible suspect.” A.2360. The polygraph was critical evidence because “the circumstances of the polygraph examination indicate that [Murray] intentionally avoided the test. He did not comply with the polygraph examiner’s instructions during the first attempt and failed to cooperate in scheduling a second attempt.” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 76.

In short, a rational juror could agree with the federal district court and conclude that if Souk received the polygraph report “he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 830 n.8. Even with a track record of downplaying alternative suspects in this case and every incentive to do so, Souk admitted that the hidden report would have been “useful for investigative purposes,” and he would have “asked some questions and looked at it more” had he even known about it. A.3423.

c. A Rational Juror Could Find that Defendants Caused and Continued the Prosecution Through Bad-Faith Misconduct.

A rational juror could find that defendants engaged in other misconduct instrumental to the prosecution. First, a reasonable juror could find that Freesmeyer misled the grand jury about other suspects with a motive to kill Lockmiller. A.115. Despite knowing the facts about John Murray that were withheld from the defense, Freesmeyer testified as follows:

Q. [O]ther than Mr. Beaman, were you able in the course of your investigation to locate any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller?

A. No, not necessarily.

A.115. This was a serious and misleading concealment. By hiding Murray despite Murray’s motive to kill Lockmiller, Freesmeyer performed before the grand jury the very concealment that, when replicated by Souk at trial, rendered the conviction invalid. In its 2008 decision, the Supreme Court noted that “the State’s argument [at trial] relied upon the assertion that all other potential suspects had been eliminated from consideration,” when in fact Beaman “could have argued that [Murray] had a motive to commit the murder” if the Murray evidence had not been concealed. Beaman, 229 Ill.2d at 80.<sup>7</sup>

A jury could also rely on Freesmeyer’s manipulation of the time trials as further evidence of misconduct. This Court’s previous opinion incorrectly stated, “there is no proof in the record Freesmeyer tainted or falsely reported the time trials.” Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 63. That conclusion fails to grapple with the fact that Freesmeyer included every single time trial in his police report except the exculpatory time trial that showed Beaman easily could have made it home from the bank in time to make the 10:37 and 10:39 calls by using the bypass route. A.3427-28. The results of 14 other time trials were included in Freesmeyer’s report. A.1339, 1345-46. It is particularly noteworthy that Freesmeyer included the time trial from the bank to the Beaman home that would not have allowed Beaman to make the critical 10:37 and 10:39 calls, but did not include the bypass route time trial between the same two points that showed Beaman could have made the calls. See supra at 12. A juror could view the omission of the exculpatory time trial as an honest mistake, but that certainly is not the only rational inference that could be drawn. See Illinois Supreme Court Oral Argument Audio 32:58, https://multimedia.illinois.gov/court/SupremeCourt/Audio/2018/091318\_122654.mp3 (“JUSTICE BURKE: But didn’t Mr. Freesmeyer leave out some information or omitted information from his police report? MR. DICIANNI: That—the bypass route did not make it into his police report, that is correct. JUSTICE BURKE: Right, so he omitted it, right?”). Given that Freesmeyer did record multiple time trials that he considered inculpatory, it would not be unreasonable to conclude that he omitted the exculpatory time trial intentionally. After all, Freesmeyer was fixated on nailing Beaman. He selected Beaman as the prime suspect on Day One and decided that Beaman would be arrested for the murder in the early stages of the investigation, seven months before a decision had been made to charge him. A.1318.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>7</sup> Although this Court discounted the argument in its prior opinion, a juror could also find that Defendant Freesmeyer also falsely told the grand jury that no helpful information had been learned from Lockmiller’s neighbors during the investigation—even though Singley’s interview helped establish the actions of the murderer on the day of the crime and ruled plaintiff out as a viable suspect. A.3417-18.

d. A Rational Juror Could Find That The Defendants Were A Cause In Fact And Legal Cause of the Prosecution.

Applying the facts above, a juror could find that the defendants were both a cause in fact and a legal cause of the prosecution of Alan Beaman. Souk all but admitted Freesmeyer was a but for cause when he wrote that the conviction could not have been obtained “without Tim Freesmeyer.” A.3207. Without the defendants conducting a dishonest and biased investigation, hiding evidence, misleading the grand jury, and ignoring exculpatory facts, the prosecution would not have been brought and continued, and Beaman would not have gone to prison. See Price v. Philip Morris, Inc., 219 Ill. 2d 182, 269 (2005) (“[T]he relevant inquiry is whether the harm would have occurred absent the defendant’s conduct.”); Thacker v. UNR Industries, Inc., 151 Ill. 2d 343, 354-55 (1992).

In its prior decision, this Court concluded that “[t]he evidence shows the prosecutors, Reynard and Souk, made the decision to prosecute plaintiff.” Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th)

<sup>8</sup> The Seventh Circuit concluded that Freesmeyer did not lie about one element of the time trials—the speeds at which he drove. Beaman, 776 F.3d at 512 (“Freesmeyer did not lie about the speeds at which he drove, and he was subject to cross-examination at trial about the speeds and alternative routes.”). No one has ever claimed that Freesmeyer lied about his speeds.

160527, ¶ 62. But that argument proves too much—prosecutors make the final decision to prosecute in every case. If it were true that only those who make final felony charging decisions could be held liable for malicious prosecution, then no one maliciously prosecuted for a felony would ever have a claim against the responsible investigators because felony prosecutions can be initiated only by a prosecutor. 725 ILCS 5/111-2(a) & (b); 725 ILCS 5/111-3(b).<sup>9</sup>

Moreover, the fact that Reynard and Souk played a necessary role in the charging decision does not change the fact that the investigators were also a cause. Even if the prosecutor were an additional “but for” cause of the prosecution, the actions of two or more individuals can be necessary to inflict an injury. See Turner v. Roesner, 193 Ill. App. 3d 482, 490 (2d Dist. 1990). A “but for” cause need not be “the sole cause” of an injury. Id.; see also Espinoza v. Elgin, Joliet and E. Ry., 165 Ill. 2d 107, 118 (1995). At minimum, the defendants’ malfeasance was a cause in fact because it was “a material element and a substantial factor” in causing the injury. Thacker, 151 Ill. 2d at 354 (1992); Krywin v. Chicago Transit Auth., 238 Ill. 2d 215, 226 (2010); Abrams v. City of Chicago, 211 Ill. 2d 251, 258 (2004). A reasonable juror therefore could find causation in fact.

A rational juror could also find legal causation, which “is essentially a question of foreseeability.” First Springfield Bank & Trust v. Galman, 188 Ill. 2d 252, 258 (1999). The inquiry is “whether the injury is of a type that a reasonable person would see as a likely result of his conduct.” City of Chicago v. Beretta U.S.A. Corp., 213 Ill. 2d 351, 395 (2004). Legal causation is easily satisfied here because the malicious prosecution and wrongful conviction of Alan Beaman were the natural and foreseeable results of defendants’ malicious fixation on him, their dishonest investigation, their misleading grand jury testimony, and their suppression of evidence. It is hardly a surprise that investigative misconduct like this can lead to wrongful prosecutions. The prosecutor’s charging decision might be viewed as an intervening cause of the injury, but a foreseeable intervening cause does not defeat legal causation. Bentley v. Saunemin Tp., 83 Ill. 2d 10, 16 (1980); Merlo v. Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois, 381 Ill. 300, 316-17 (1942); First Springfield Bank, 188 Ill. 2d at 257. The charging decision therefore does not negate legal causation or the defendants’ liability.

In cases like this one—where police target a manifestly innocent individual with a biased investigation, and thereby have a significant role in commencing or continuing the prosecution—liability is appropriate. The defendants caused Alan Beaman’s wrongful prosecution and conviction by selecting him as their man on Day One, and then conducting a biased investigation to reach the predetermined result.

2. Absence of Probable Cause Prong: A Reasonable Juror Could Find that Defendants Lacked Probable Cause To Arrest Beaman for Murder.

A jury should decide whether defendants had probable cause to arrest and jail Beaman because the record is beset with complex facts from which rational individuals could draw competing inferences. The Supreme Court underscored that “[s]ummary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation” and can be granted only where the movant’s right to it “is clear and free from doubt.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22. In particular, summary judgment must not be granted “[1] where reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or [2] where there is a dispute as to a material fact.” Id.; Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432 ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25; Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 972-73 (4th Dist. 1988); Skorupa v. Guzick, 2015 IL App (1st) 133082-U, ¶¶ 17-18; Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d 635, 642 (1st Dist. 2002); Maxwell v. City of Indianapolis, 998 F.2d 431, 434 (7th Cir. 1993).

In this case, a reasonable juror could find probable cause wanting based on the facts and the “divergent inferences” that can be drawn from them. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22. In particular, at the time of Beaman’s arrest:

- There was no probative physical evidence against Beaman and no one could place him in the town where the murder occurred. See supra at 11.
- Beaman maintained his innocence despite a barrage of accusatory interrogations, surreptitious overhears, and death penalty threats. See supra at 5, 10.
- Any number of men (known and unknown) could have committed the crime. See supra at 4-5, 6-9.
- The statement of the victim’s across-the-hall neighbor indicated that the murder occurred after 2:00 pm, which eliminated any possibility for Beaman to commit the crime. See supra at 14.
- In the late morning on the day of the murder, Beaman was at a bank in Rockford, some 130 miles from the scene of the crime. A.1312.

- The crime scene indicated that the killer was a stranger. See supra at 4-5.
- The crime scene indicated that the killer was a much larger and more powerful man than Beaman. See supra at 4.
- The evidence against Murray was much stronger than the case against Beaman. See supra at 7-9.

The defendants may have inferred probable cause from these circumstances, but because it was not the only reasonable inference that could be drawn, they cannot establish probable cause as a matter of law.

The circuit court avoided a serious engagement with the facts germane to probable cause in three ways. First, the circuit court opined that the thoroughly discredited conviction proved Beaman's "guilt beyond a reasonable doubt" and therefore established probable cause. A.31. A vacated conviction, however, is "null and void," and therefore inadmissible. People v. Shook, 35 Ill. 2d 597, 599 (1966). Next, the court ceded its independent judgment to the attorney who prosecuted Beaman and who believed that "probable cause existed for the arrest of plaintiff." A.31. Such opinion evidence is inadmissible as to legal questions, all the more so because probable cause is an ultimate issue in this case. Todd W. Musburger, Ltd. v. Meier, 394 Ill. App. 3d 781, 800 (1st Dist. 2009). Third, rather than analyzing the facts, the court adopted defendants' brief, stating, "[i]n this case, grounds for probable cause to charge plaintiff with murder existed as specifically stated in paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants' Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, filed in this cause recounting the facts in defendant, Freesmeyer's deposition." A.30-31.

A genuine review of the record shows that different reasonable inferences could be drawn from each assertion that the circuit court uncritically adopted in total from the defendants' brief in support of probable cause. We address these assertions in turn.

Fingerprints (Item A incorporated into circuit court opinion): The fingerprint evidence did not support the case against Beaman. His prints were not found on the alarm clock cord used to strangle Lockmiller or the scissors lodged in her chest. The alarm clock console had seven prints—two Beaman's, four belonging to Michael Swaine (who was quickly eliminated as a suspect), one unidentified. A.3264-65. The prints did not inculcate Beaman: he had used the alarm clock previously, and fingerprints cannot be dated. A.3253. Freesmeyer decided to treat the prints as evidence of guilt based “solely on [his] own interpretation.” A.1587.

Garbage Bag (Item B incorporated into lower court opinion): The murder scene included a garbage bag left out on a coffee table. A.1361. If this evidence had any significance, it pointed to a burglar, not Beaman. A.1361. Burglars often seek out sacks and other receptacles in which to carry the loot. A.1361.

Letters (Item C incorporated into lower court opinion): The police found some racy letters from Beaman in Lockmiller's apartment. A.546-84. They were old, almost all from 1992. A.546-84. Beaman had terminated the relationship well before the murder. See supra at 6.

Unreturned calls (Item D incorporated into lower court opinion): Lockmiller called Beaman several times in the days before the murder, but the phone records show that he did not answer or return the calls. A.338-39. When the two did speak, on August 23, Beaman told Lockmiller he was no longer interested in dating. A.1048-49. These facts are exculpatory. As part of his biased investigation, however, Freesmeyer somehow interpreted them as a basis for probable cause. A.1593-94.

Supposed “Hole” in Beaman’s Alibi (Item E incorporated into lower court opinion): As an initial matter, Freesmeyer did not even perform time trials to test the alibi prior to arresting Beaman. A.1624-27, 3239. The supposed “hole” in the alibi, then, hardly furnished probable cause for arrest. In any case, the alibi was bulletproof. At 10:11 a.m., Beaman drove from the bank (where he was captured on video making a deposit) to his family’s home, where he placed calls at 10:37 a.m. and 10:39 a.m. See supra at 11-13. It would have been literally impossible for Beaman to leave the family home after the second call at 10:39, drive to Bloomington-Normal to commit the murder, and be back to the family home again by 2:15 p.m., when his mother returned. See supra at 11-14. Even Souk agreed that in order for the jury to have returned a verdict of guilty, it would have had to find that Alan Beaman did not make the calls, and that Carol Beaman did make them. A.3433

Breaking Down the Door (Item F incorporated into lower court opinion): The two occasions on which Beaman kicked open Lockmiller’s door could be used at trial by the defendants to show that Beaman sometimes displayed a temper. These instances do not establish the capacity for murder or probable cause as a matter of law. Michael Swaine and Beaman were close friends and roommates, but Swaine began a sexual relationship with Lockmiller during her relationship with Beaman. A.3314-15. One night, Swaine borrowed Beaman’s car under the pretext of driving to a party; as part of the ruse, Swaine faked a phone conversation (with no one on the other end of the line) in front of Beaman. A.3311-13. Beaman grew suspicious, biked over to Lockmiller’s building, and saw his own car, which Swaine had taken, in the parking lot. A.389. As Beaman arrived at the apartment, his girlfriend and roommate had just completed oral sex and were headed to the bedroom. A.3314-15. While Beaman kicked the door open, he did not lay a finger on Lockmiller or Swaine; instead, he calmly gave Swaine a ride back to their shared apartment. A.3317, 3318-19. On the other occasion, Lockmiller was having sex with Murray. A.1752. Beaman did not touch either of them. Murray, in contrast, had a long history of beating women. See supra at 8.

Bank Video (Items H-I incorporated into lower court opinion): The bank video proved that on the day of the murder, Beaman was some 130 miles from the crime scene at 10:11. See supra at 11. But Freesmeyer decided that the bank video was evidence of guilt. A.1578, 1584. To him, Beaman seemed dishonest and guilty because he did not bring up the bank trip when Freesmeyer asked him for proof of innocence. A.1578, 1584.

Overhears (Items J-M incorporated into lower court opinion): The defendants moved heaven and earth to get an incriminating admission by bugging Beaman's conversations with Swaine and Freesmeyer. See supra at 10. They got nothing. In fact, Beaman told Swaine, "Dude, I don't know shit, that's the problem" and stated he no longer had a romantic interest in Lockmiller at the time of her death. A.3329. Freesmeyer, however, seized on the fruitless overhears as evidence of guilt. A.1579. Beaman had made a crude comment to Swaine about his relationship with Lockmiller. A.1579.

Box Fan (Item N incorporated into lower court opinion): The killer covered the victim's face with a box fan. A.1581. Freesmeyer decided this meant that the two knew each other. A.1581. If anything, this was more probative of a home invasion: burglars often cover the heads of their victims while conducting a search. A.1360.

Manner of Stabbing (Item O incorporated into lower court opinion): The manner of stabbing with the scissors suggested that the assailant did not know the victim. A.1361. Personal and emotional stabbings tend to have more wounds, indicating a frenzy. A.1361. Freesmeyer reversed this too, imagining “an act of vengeance over someone that [Lockmiller] had hurt deeply,” rather than a random attacker. A.1581.

No Obvious Signs of Forced Entry (Item P incorporated into lower court opinion): There were not obvious signs of forced entry to the apartment, but forced entry often does not leave obvious signs. A burglar could have entered with a loid, which is a piece of plastic that can slip the lock without leaving visible damage to the wood or the metal. A.1360.

From the same facts, one might also draw inferences more favorable to the defendants. Perhaps a juror would think that the kitchen garbage bag points to Beaman rather than a burglar’s improvised sack because Beaman once checked Lockmiller’s trash for evidence of contraceptives. But why then would the kitchen trash at the crime scene be removed but the trash in the bedroom left undisturbed? A.3308, 3309. Or perhaps a juror would reject the possibility that a stranger killed Lockmiller because her purse was not visibly disturbed and there were not obvious signs of forced entry. On the other hand, burglars can easily pick locks with loids, and the purse could have been forgotten once Lockmiller interrupted the burglar and the crime turned into rape and murder. A.1360. Moreover, if the perpetrator was not a burglar, why the signs of rummaging? A.1360. Questions like these are the reason trials exist. The defendants might advocate one set of inferences, but others are permissible. As the Supreme Court stated in this case, “[W]here reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or where there is a dispute as to a material fact, summary judgment should be denied and the issue decided by the trier of fact.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22 (alteration in original).

3. Malice Prong: A Reasonable Juror Could Infer Malice from the Defendants’ Conduct.

The defendants’ dishonest investigation of the Lockmiller homicide—everything from the immediate fixation on Beaman, to the refusal to undertake a serious investigation of other viable suspects, to misleading the grand jury, to manipulated time trials, to concealment of evidence—demonstrates their malice and lack of good faith. At minimum, a jury must resolve the question. “Good faith is a question of fact, and is for the determination of the jury.” Hardin v. Gouveneur, 69 Ill. 140, 143 (1873); Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172, 177 (1875) (holding in a malicious prosecution case that whether a defendant “acted in good faith . . . was a question for the jury”); Mack v. First Sec. Bank of Chicago, 158 Ill. App. 3d 497, 503 (1st Dist. 1987) (stating that “good faith is a factual determination . . . and is properly reserved to the sound discretion of the trier of fact”).

The circuit court’s reasoning was unsupportable. First, the circuit court opined that malice was implausible because “in the minds of the prosecutors, there was sufficient reason . . . to proceed solely against the plaintiff.” A.31. But every prosecution of a single-perpetrator crime includes a prosecutor who decides to “proceed solely” against one defendant—it is unheard-of in such cases to indict two people for the same crime just to see what happens. By the circuit court’s logic, any investigation that results in a wrongful conviction in a single-perpetrator offense is malice-free as a matter of law.

To compound the error, the circuit court expressed the view that the wrongful conviction itself negated a finding of malice: “At a jury trial, the State provided the jury with proof beyond a reasonable doubt that plaintiff had both motive and opportunity to commit the murder.” A.31. The circuit court failed to acknowledge that the Supreme Court both unanimously vacated the conviction and made specific findings about opportunity to commit the crime: “[T]he evidence of petitioner’s opportunity to commit the murder is not as strong as that against [Murray].” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 79.

Freesmeyer’s Malice: A rational juror could infer that Freesmeyer acted in bad faith. Freesmeyer selected Beaman as the primary suspect on Day One despite the obvious weakness of the evidence against him. See supra at 4-5. There was little that pointed to him other than “guessing” by Morgan Keefe, Lockmiller’s friend who had discovered the body; no work had been done to check alibis, to process fingerprints, or to obtain autopsy results; there were no eyewitnesses to the crime, or even anyone who could place Beaman in the same city as the victim on the day of the murder; Beaman maintained his innocence in the face of an aggressive interrogation; there was no physical evidence implicating him; and the state of the crime scene pointed to a burglary-turned-rape and suggested a perpetrator of much larger size and physical power than Beaman. See supra at 4-5.

The case against Beaman only deteriorated from there, but Freesmeyer held on to the idea that Alan Beaman was his man. When the time-of-death evidence obtained by the victim’s neighbor made it impossible for Beaman to have committed the crime, Freesmeyer ignored it. See supra at 11-14. When the fingerprint evidence proved fruitless, Freesmeyer seized on it based “solely on [his] own interpretation.” A.1587.

When the state of the crime scene pointed away from Beaman, Freesmeyer construed it as evidence of guilt. See supra at 39-40. When Beaman denied guilt in seven surreptitiously recorded conversations, Freesmeyer fixated on a few crude comments and decided they were incriminating. See supra at 39.

The pattern continued as Freesmeyer labored to discredit Beaman's alibi. Freesmeyer careened at speeds Beaman never could have reached when driving to and from the crime scene because speeding during those time trials hurt the alibi. See supra at 11-14. But when a slower speed would hurt the alibi, Freesmeyer selected the slower route and crawled along between the bank and the Beaman home at the posted limit. See supra at 11-14. Freesmeyer went on to conceal the time trial that showed that Beaman easily could have made the trip from the bank to his home in time for the 10:37 and 10:39 calls by omitting it from his report and trial testimony. See supra at 12. When Carol Beaman said that she did not make the calls because she was with her mother at her retirement home and then across the street shopping at Walmart, Freesmeyer set out to show that she drove 20 miles home and back between seeing her mother and visiting the Walmart, rather than just crossing the street. See supra at 12-13. Freesmeyer threatened Beaman with the death penalty, and later arrested him, even though his supervisor, Zayas, thought the crime was unsolved, "in limbo," and not ready to be prosecuted. A.1356-23, 1318. Plaintiff's expert in criminal investigations, a former FBI agent with 45 years of criminal investigation experience, opined that "[t]he defendants violated the basic standards for police investigations" and "showed an utter disregard for the truth that not only denied justice for Mr. Beaman, but also needlessly endangered the public by leaving a murderer on the streets free to kill again." A.3248-49.

Competing inferences could be drawn from the record regarding Freesmeyer's credibility and subjective state of mind. Maybe he ignored the evidence exculpating Beaman, omitted the exculpatory time trial, and misled the grand jury out of gross incompetence, or maybe he did so due to malice. In our system of justice, we get to the truth about these issues through a trial, which is what must occur in this case. See Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 977 (“Where two conflicting inferences may be drawn from the evidence—one of good faith actions on the part of the defendant and the other of actions inconsistent with good faith or, in other words, malicious actions—the question whether the defendant acted with malice is for the trier of fact to determine.”).

Warner's Malice: Whether Defendant Warner contributed to the malicious prosecution by intentionally burying the Murray polygraph report presents a genuine issue of material fact. See supra at 9, 20. As the federal court found, a jury question exists as to whether Warner “intentionally withheld” evidence that could have changed the trajectory of the case. Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 827; see also Illinois Supreme Court Oral Argument Audio 33:23, https://multimedia.illinois.gov/court/SupremeCourt/Audio/2018/091318\_122654.mp3 (“JUSTICE BURKE: But didn't Warner intentionally fail to disclose the evidence regarding Murray's polygraph test?"). Such deliberate malfeasance would obviously constitute malice.

Zayas's Malice: Frank Zayas was in charge of the Criminal Investigations Division, making him the boss of Freesmeyer and the other detectives. A.91, 1416-17, 2296-97. He participated in the May 16, 1994 meeting where the decision was made to arrest Beaman and, despite his direct authority over Freesmeyer, acquiesced in the arrest and did nothing to stop it. A.1334, 2296-97. He has admitted that at the time of Beaman's arrest and even months later—in November of 1994—the case was not ready for charging and prosecution:

- Q. When you left you felt that the case against Beaman was – was weak? Is that a fair statement?
- A. At that point – I’ll put it this way.
I don’t think the case was ready to be sent to the State [for prosecution] yet. I think we needed to work on it some more.
- Q. And that was true in November of ’94 when you retired?
- A. Yes, sir.

A.1356-23. Direct admissions of malice are exceedingly rare. A defendant never breaks down at the deposition table and admits to acting maliciously. This is as close as it gets to a direct admission: Zayas knew that the case was not ready “to be sent to the State,” but he let it happen anyway. At minimum, this admission makes his malice a jury question.

4. Favorable Termination Prong: The Unanimous Reversal of Beaman’s Conviction, the Abandonment of Charges, the Certificate of Innocence, and the Governor’s Pardon Demonstrate Favorable Termination.

There are three reasons, each sufficient standing alone, that the circuit court erred in granting summary judgment on the favorable termination prong. First, the prosecution dropped all charges after the Supreme Court unanimously threw out Beaman’s conviction and declared: “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding [Beaman] guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him . . . .” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81. The “dismissal of a . . . charge against the plaintiff at the instance of the prosecutor” generally suffices to show favorable termination. Rich v. Baldwin, 133 Ill. App. 3d 712, 715 (5th Dist. 1985). Second, a certificate of innocence is “relevant at least to the ‘indicative of innocence’ element of plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim.” Kluppelberg v. Burge, 84 F. Supp. 3d 741, 744, 745 (N.D. Ill. 2015). The instant case comes to this Court on summary judgment; therefore, “relevant evidence,” id. satisfies plaintiff’s burden. Third, the gubernatorial pardon on the basis of innocence, A.3377, establishes that the proceedings concluded in Beaman's favor, Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F. Supp. 2d 660, 664, 680 (N.D. Ill. 2005).

The circuit court postulated that the State's Attorney's Office declined to re-prosecute the case because it would have been difficult to reconstruct the facts after so many years, rather than because of Beaman's innocence. A.32. There is no evidence for this conclusion. The court cited paragraph 124 of Defendants' Statement of Material Facts (A.68), which in turn relies entirely on a deposition in which the original prosecutor speculated that staleness might have affected the decision to drop all charges. A.2962-66. But the prosecutor had long since departed the State's Attorney's Office and was speculating without personal knowledge about the possible reasons his successors theoretically might have had for dismissing the charges. A.2962-66.

The purpose of the favorable termination prong is to ensure that innocent people—and only innocent people—reap the benefit of the malicious prosecution tort. It is difficult to imagine a plaintiff with greater proof of innocence than Alan Beaman, equipped as he is with a unanimous reversal of his conviction by the Supreme Court, a certificate of innocence, and a pardon based on innocence.

D. Beaman's Remaining Claims Should Proceed to Trial.

In addition to the malicious prosecution claim, Beaman also brought claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress, civil conspiracy, respondeat superior, and indemnification. Each claim rises or falls with the malicious prosecution claim. If the Court reinstates the malicious prosecution claim, it should also reinstate these claims.

1. The Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress Claim Should Proceed to Trial.

This Court erred in holding that Beaman abandoned his intentional infliction of emotional distress claim on appeal. Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 74. Section II of Beaman’s appellate brief was captioned “The Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress Claim (Count II) Must Proceed To Trial.” A. 3379. That section, which appeared after a detailed recitation of the defendants’ malfeasance in the malicious prosecution section of the brief, stated: “It goes without saying that the conduct at issue here—pursuing plaintiff’s conviction maliciously, disregarding and manipulating the evidence, and sending an innocent man to prison for a dozen years for a crime he could not have committed—is extreme and outrageous conduct.” A.3379. This argument was followed by a string cite to six cases in which courts in Illinois have allowed intentional infliction of emotional distress claims to proceed on facts that relate principally to malicious prosecution. A.3379. The section concluded by stating: “[T]he circuit court erred in granting summary judgment on the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim.” A.3379.

The defendants did not argue in their response brief in this Court that Beaman had abandoned the claim; instead, they asserted that the outcome of this claim depended on the court’s resolution of the malicious prosecution claim. A.3383-84. On reply, Beaman agreed. A.3381.

Waiver occurs if: (1) no authority is cited, (2) no argument is made, or (3) an argument is merely “listed or included in a vague allegation of error.” Vancura v. Katris, 238 Ill. 2d. 352, 369-70 (2010). Nothing of the sort happened in this case. Beaman developed the intentional infliction of emotional distress claim in his opening brief, and he should not be punished for briefing an undisputed issue in a concise manner. Such an outcome would encourage litigants to waste judges' time and clients' money with elongated discussions of undisputed points, just to avoid a sua sponte finding of waiver. And even if Beaman had waived the emotional distress claim, the defendants "waived the waiver" by failing to assert at any point before this Court that waiver occurred.

In numerous prior cases, courts in Illinois have held that emotional distress claims may proceed when they are attached to viable malicious prosecution claims. See Carrocia v. Anderson, 249 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1028 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Treece v. Vill. of Naperville, 903 F. Supp. 1251, 1259-60 (N.D. Ill. 1995), aff'd, 213 F.3d 360 (7th Cir. 2000); Padilla v. City of Chicago, 932 F. Supp. 2d 907, 930 (N.D. Ill. 2013); Wallace v. City of Zion, No. 11 C 2859, 2011 WL 3205495, at *6 (N.D. Ill. July 28, 2011); Fox v. Tomczak, No. 04 C 7309, 2006 WL 1157466, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2006); McDonald v. Vill. of Winnetka, No. 00 C 3199, 2001 WL 477148, at *6 (N.D. Ill. May 3, 2001). To our knowledge, no case has ever allowed a malicious prosecution claim to proceed while rejecting an emotional distress claim (or vice-versa). The reasons are obvious: Robbing a person of liberty maliciously and without probable cause is the very sort of "extreme and outrageous" intentional conduct that constitutes intentional infliction of emotional distress. McGrath v. Fahey, 126 Ill. 2d 78, 86 (1988). In this case, the defendants' biased investigation, dishonest testimony, manipulated time trials, and concealment of evidence constitute such outrageous conduct.

The parties agreed in their previous briefing before this Court that Beaman's emotional distress and malicious prosecution claims either proceed together or fail together. There was—and is—no reason for the Court to disagree sua sponte.

2. The Civil Conspiracy Claim Should Proceed to Trial.

This Court previously affirmed dismissal of the civil conspiracy claim solely because that claim rested on the malicious prosecution claim. Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 75. Therefore, if this Court reinstates the malicious prosecution claim, it should also reinstate the conspiracy claim.

“Since conspiracies are generally evolved under the cloak of secrecy, the courts have traditionally permitted proof of a conspiracy by indirect or circumstantial evidence . . . .” Rosee v. Chicago Bd. Of Trade, 43 Ill. App. 3d 203, 239 (1st Dist. 1976). Here, the defendants collaborated closely on the case, met frequently, and shared information. A.91-92. They all read each other’s detailed reports. A.1352. From the content of those reports, they would know the state of the case and the absence of any basis for arrest or prosecution—the lack of any physical evidence, the lack of eyewitness testimony, Beaman’s alibi, the vast universe of alternative suspects, and the fact that Murray was a more likely suspect. It would have been a remarkable coincidence if they all fixated on Beaman independently despite the lack of evidence against him, and if all of their parallel actions in the biased investigation were uncoordinated. People v. Small, 319 Ill. 437, 449 (1925) (“[W]hen taken in connection with other acts, it may appear clearly that the series of wrongful acts result from concerted and associated action.”). Freesmeyer ignored exculpatory evidence and alternative suspects, misled the grand jury, and skewed the time trials (see supra at 6-9, 11-14); Warner buried a polygraph that helped to exculpate Beaman (see supra at 9-10, 20); and Zayas let the arrest go forward, knowing that the evidence could not justify it (see supra at 44-45). Based on the defendants’ close collaboration on the case and their parallel acts of malfeasance—each of which was aimed at wrongfully convicting Beaman—a reasonable juror could infer a conspiracy.

See Pearce v. Thiry, No. CIV.A.08 C 4483, 2009 WL 3172148, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 1, 2009) (stating that evidence that police officers “engaged in concerted acts sufficient to raise a reasonable inference of mutual understanding” can prove a conspiracy); Newsome v. James, No. 96 C 7680, 2000 WL 528475, at *16 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 26, 2000); Rainey v. City of Chicago, No. 10 C 07506, 2013 WL 941968, at *11 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2013).

3. The Respondeat Superior and Indemnification Claims Should Proceed to Trial.

Both the circuit court and this Court rejected the respondeat superior and indemnification claims based entirely on the same reasons that the claims discussed above were rejected. Because there was no independent basis to dismiss the respondeat superior and indemnification claims, they should be reinstated.

CONCLUSION

The Court should remand this case for a trial on the merits.

Respectfully submitted,

ALAN BEAMAN

CONCLUSION .....	53

NATURE OF THE CASE

On April 1, 1995, a McLean County jury found plaintiff Alan Beaman guilty of the murder of Illinois State University student Jennifer Lockmiller. Beaman was sentenced to 50 years in the Illinois Department of Corrections. The conviction was affirmed by the Illinois Appellate Court (People v. Beaman, 279 Ill.App.3d 1115 (4th Dist. 1996)), and a petition for leave to appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court was denied (168 Ill.2d 601 (1996)). Beaman then pursued a post-conviction petition. After an evidentiary hearing, the circuit court denied the petition, which was affirmed by the Appellate Court. People v. Beaman, 368 Ill.App.3d 759 (4th Dist. 2006). The Illinois Supreme Court granted leave to appeal and reversed the conviction, finding that Beaman’s due process rights were violated under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963). People v. Beaman, 229 Ill.2d 56 (2008). The Supreme Court found the State violated Beaman’s due process rights by failing to disclose certain potential exculpatory evidence regarding a possible alternative suspect, Larbi John Murray (Murray)<sup>1</sup>.

The McLean County State’s Attorney (“SA”) declined to retry Beaman for the murder. Plaintiff then filed suit in federal court against defendants, Town of Normal, Timothy Freesmeyer, Frank Zayas, and Dave Warner, all Town of Normal Police Department (“NPD”) police officers who worked on the Lockmiller investigation, along with other parties not joined here. Plaintiff alleged under 42 U.S.C. §1983 that defendants violated Beaman’s due process rights under Brady, along with state law claims of malicious prosecution, conspiracy and intentional infliction of emotional distress. On January 3, 2014, the district court granted defendants’ motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's federal claims, and remanded the state claims to state court. Beaman v. Souk, et al., 7 F.Supp.3d 805 (C.D. Ill. 2014). The Seventh Circuit affirmed the district court's judgment. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015).

Plaintiff refiled his state law claims in the circuit court in McLean County, with Douglas County Circuit Court Judge Richard L. Broch presiding. On June 22, 2016, the circuit court granted summary judgment in favor of defendants on all counts. Plaintiff appealed, and on August 4, 2017, this Court affirmed the circuit court. Beaman v. Freesmeyer 2017 IL App (4th) 160527.

This case appears before this Appellate Court a second time, remanded from the Supreme Court for a new review. In affirming the circuit court, this Court addressed the first element of the malicious prosecution cause of action, finding that there was a lack of evidence from which a jury could conclude that defendants commenced or continued the criminal prosecution of plaintiff. Id. at ¶2.

After this Court affirmed summary judgment, plaintiff filed a Petition for Leave to Appeal to the Supreme Court, which was denied on November 22, 2017. People v. Beaman, 93 N.E.2d 1055 (2017) (Table). On December 7, 2017, plaintiff filed a motion in the Supreme Court to reconsider the denial, and on December 8, 2017, before defendants could even file their opposition to the motion, the Supreme Court suddenly reversed itself and granted the Petition for Leave to Appeal. Briefs in the Supreme Court followed, with plaintiff supported by an amicus brief from a group of former federal prosecutors. Defendants' position in the case was supported by Illinois police and prosecutors' organizations and municipalities that would have to live with the dire impact and effect of the position plaintiff and the federal prosecutors urged. After briefing and oral argument, the Supreme Court issued its opinion, which will be further explicated in this Brief. The Supreme Court remanded the case back to this Court, in an opinion which did not criticize defendants' conduct in the investigation or otherwise impugn the positions of defendants or of this Court, but merely announced a more generic, generalized test for the commencement element of the malicious prosecution cause of action. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654.

This appeal on remand now presents this Court with the extremely important, indeed monumental, task of providing the first interpretation of the generic principles announced in the Supreme Court's opinion. This Court's position here is monumental because plaintiff offers an interpretation that would expose police to potential liability in every case they work on, without regard for the role of the prosecutor in the prosecution decision. Plaintiff pushes a radical position which the Supreme Court, and no court before or after it, has ever endorsed. Now plaintiff wants the Supreme Court's decision interpreted in a way that would expose police to trials for malicious prosecution in practically every case in which a prosecution fails in any way. This Court's original decision holds up after the Supreme Court's opinion. Summary judgment for defendants should be affirmed.

ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Should defendants be required to stand trial for the disfavored tort of malicious prosecution and related torts where all prosecution decisions were made by the McLean County SA, no wrongful conduct by defendants proximately caused that decision, there was clear probable cause for the prosecution, defendants lacked any legal or factual malice, and the murder charge against plaintiff was dismissed without any determination that indicated plaintiff was innocent of the murder.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The statement of facts in an appellate brief must be stated “fairly without argument or comment . . . “ Supreme Court Rule 341(h)(6). In blatant disregard of the Rule, plaintiff’s Statement of Facts is improperly slanted, argumentative and replete with improper comment, such that it is of little use to this Court. Defendants offer here the balanced and objective description of the facts this Court deserves.

Background

On April 1, 1995, plaintiff, Alan Beaman, was found guilty by a jury of the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller, and sentenced to 50 years in the IDOC. Beaman spent 13 years in prison and was released in 2008 based on the Illinois Supreme Court’s decision in People v. Beaman, 229 Ill.2d 56 (2008). The Supreme Court held the State violated Beaman’s right to due process under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), by failing to disclose material information about a possible alternative suspect – Murray. Id. The withheld evidence consisted of four points: (1) Murray failed to complete a polygraph examination; (2) Murray was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to Beaman’s trial; (3) Murray had physically abused his girlfriend on prior occasions; and (4) Murray’s use of steroids caused him to act erratically. Id. at 75. (C00325, ¶1).

During the Lockmiller murder investigation, defendants Freesmeyer, Warner and Zayas were police officers for the NPD and worked in its Criminal Investigations Division (“CID”). Freesmeyer was an investigator, Warner was an evidence officer, and Zayas was a lieutenant in charge of CID at the time. (C00325-326, ¶¶2, 3, 5; C00359, C00548, C00481) (C00326, ¶4; C00623). Tony Daniels was a detective in CID also involved in the Lockmiller murder investigation. James Souk was the Chief of the Felony Division in the McLean County SA's Office at the time of the Lockmiller murder. In January, 1997, Souk became an Associate Judge in McLean County, and was later elected Circuit Court Judge. Souk was the lead prosecutor in Beaman's prosecution for Lockmiller's murder. (C00326, ¶7; C02197). Charles Reynard was the elected SA for McLean County at the time of the Lockmiller murder and Beaman's prosecution. He also subsequently was elected a Circuit Court Judge in McLean County. (C00326, ¶8; C00623).

The Murder

On August 28, 1993, Jennifer Lockmiller's decomposed body was found in her apartment at 412 N. Main Street, Normal, Illinois. Lockmiller was a student at Illinois State University (ISU) at the time. Lockmiller had been strangled with an electrical cord from an alarm clock in her bedroom, and had been stabbed in the chest with a pair of scissors. (C00327, ¶9; C00548, C01135, C02785).

Lockmiller's body was found by her close friend, Morgan Keefe (now Hartman), who after attempting to contact Lockmiller for several days, went to her apartment, found the body and called the police. Keefe immediately told the police "I know who did it," and reported that Lockmiller was deathly afraid of her former boyfriend, Alan Beaman. According to Keefe, Beaman broke down Lockmiller's door several times and threatened suicide if she broke up with him. (C00327, ¶10; C00243, C02993, C01156, C01135, C02613, C00359).

The crime scene was a two-story frame apartment building containing four apartments. Lockmiller's body was found in apartment No. 4, on the west end of the second floor. The police concluded there were no signs of recent forced entry, and that all signs of damage to the apartment door frame were present prior to the date of Lockmiller's murder. (C00327, ¶11-12; C02243, C02993, C01156, C01135, C02613, C00359) (C00328, ¶13; C02243, C02993, C026313, C00359).

A gold-colored, hoop-type earring was found lying on the floor approximately three feet inside the doorway. A red shoe was lying in the hallway outside the bedroom door, and a gold colored earring similar to the earring by the entrance door was found on the bathroom floor. Dirty dishes were in the sink, a cabinet door under the kitchen sink was open, and a garbage can was lying on its side in front of the open cabinet. A bag of garbage was found on the living room sofa filled with trash, with its contents spilling out. (C00328, ¶14-15; C02243, C02993, C02613).

Two book bags and Lockmiller's purse were on a table; all three were closed and undisturbed. Lockmiller's purse contained her driver's license and other identification, a wallet with $17.71 in cash, credit cards and other personal effects. Officers did not detect any burglary signs because no items of value were missing. In the living room the television was on and the air conditioning unit was running. NPD detectives learned that Lockmiller's grey Pontiac Sunbird had been parked for several days outside the front door to the building. (C00328-329, ¶16-17; C02311, C02613, C02993, C02243, C00693, C01156).

The door to Lockmiller's bedroom was open. A hole, approximately ten inches in diameter, was found on the south wall of the bedroom. NPD detectives learned the hole in the bedroom wall was made by Beaman prior to Lockmiller's murder. (C00329, ¶18; C02243, C02993, C02877). Several letters were located under Lockmiller's bed. (C00331, ¶23; C02311, C02993, C01156).

The bedroom contained a single bed and a set of bunk beds; Lockmiller's body was found on the floor in between the beds in a supine position, with her arms extended straight out from the shoulders, her legs spread apart and bent at the knees, and her feet extended back toward her head. Lockmiller's shirt and bra were pushed up, exposing her chest; and her shorts, belt, and underwear were pulled down around her left calf and ankle. The police found no physical evidence of rape. A red shoe, similar to the shoe found in the hallway outside the bedroom door, was on Lockmiller's left foot. (C00329-330, ¶19; C02243, C02993, C02613).

A pair of scissors with red plastic handles was embedded in the center of Lockmiller's chest. The autopsy revealed Lockmiller was likely stabbed when she was already dead or her heart barely beating. Multiple other superficial stab wounds were noted in the skin on Lockmiller's chest, which apparently were made with the scissors. (C00330, ¶20; C02243, C02993, C02613). A clock radio was on the floor next to Lockmiller's head, and the cord from the radio was wrapped around Lockmiller's neck and tied in front. A box fan was resting on the scissors in Lockmiller's chest, covering her face. (C00330-331, ¶21-22; C02243, C02993, C02613).

The Murder Investigation

The apartment was processed for latent finger and palm print impressions, at the Morton Crime Laboratory, and two of Beaman's fingerprints were identified on the clock used to strangle Lockmiller; one was on the back of the clock near the cord and another on the bottom of the clock. (C00331, ¶24; C02243, C02993, C02613).

The cause of death was determined to be ligature strangulation. The post-mortem examination of Lockmiller found no defensive wounds on her body. (C00331, ¶25; C02993, C02613). The SA and NPD detectives believed the murder was a crime of passion, involving an act of vengeance of some type, and that Lockmiller knew her killer. (C00331, ¶26; C00693, C00359, C00548).

On the day Lockmiller's body was discovered, a meeting was held in the NPD with Police Chief James Taylor, several CID detectives, Souk, and McLean County Coroner Dan Brady to discuss the case. Detectives were assigned to investigate various aspects of the case. Souk himself visited the crime scene and very early on became the lead prosecutor. (C01003). Beaman was in Rockford that night and Tony Daniels and Rob Hospelhorn, another NPD Detective, were assigned to go to Rockford to interview Beaman. (C00331-332, ¶27; C00359, C00481).

Daniels and Hospelhorn were able to conduct a short interview of Beaman in Rockford on the night of August 28, 1993, which Beaman terminated abruptly. The detectives came away from the interview believing Beaman's conduct was highly suspicious. They were particularly interested that while Beaman was questioned about his relationship with Lockmiller, he never asked if something had happened to her. Daniels and Hospelhorn returned to Rockford the following day to attempt to talk to Beaman again, but were told Beaman was represented by counsel and would not talk to them. (C00332, ¶28; C00693).

Throughout the first six weeks after the murder, every detective in CID worked on the investigation. Dozens of friends, neighbors, boyfriends, relatives and acquaintances were interviewed. Zayas, as the head of CID, assigned different parts of the investigation, and each detective worked on various facets of the case. (C00332, ¶29; C00548, C00623, C00359). The detectives in CID met periodically to discuss the investigation. At times, Souk and other attorneys from the SA's Office attended as well. (C00332, ¶30; C00359, C00977).

In the beginning of the investigation, Freesmeyer focused on Mike Swaine, who came to Lockmiller's apartment while Freesmeyer was there. Swaine was Beaman's roommate, and had begun dating Lockmiller. After Swaine's alibi was verified, and he passed a polygraph, Freesmeyer worked with Swaine to obtain recorded conversations with Beaman. (C00332-333, ¶31; C00359, C01156).

Morgan Keefe

Keefe was Lockmiller's best friend. Immediately after discovering Lockmiller's body, Keefe called 911 and told the dispatcher "I know who did it .... [Lockmiller] had this psycho ex-boyfriend that she broke up with. His name's Alan, he went to Wesleyan and I only met him once and he was psycho and he used to harass her all the time and he used to break down her door." (C00333, ¶32; C02785, C02613, C01135, C03010). Warner interviewed Keefe that day, and discovered that Keefe and Lockmiller went to a movie on the Tuesday night before Lockmiller was found; they left the theater around midnight, which was the last time Keefe saw or spoke with Lockmiller. Lockmiller had been dating Beaman, but when Lockmiller tried to break away from Beaman, he would threaten suicide. Beaman broke down the door to Lockmiller's apartment a few times and Lockmiller's landlord fixed the lock. One night Keefe arrived at Lockmiller's apartment and there was a chair and a big beam against the front door. When Keefe opened the door, Lockmiller started screaming. Keefe told her, "Jen, it's me. It's ok," and Lockmiller said, "[Alan] broke down the door awhile ago." Keefe described Lockmiller as scared of Beaman. Lockmiller told Keefe that she was looking forward to Beaman going home over the summer. Beaman moved home on August 4, 1993 and Swaine moved into Lockmiller's apartment with her around August 15. Lockmiller told Keefe on August 24 that she recently had sex with Swaine. Keefe had been trying to contact Lockmiller since August 25, around 3:30 p.m. Keefe found the door to Lockmiller's apartment unlocked when she discovered Lockmiller's body. (C00333-334, ¶34; C01135, C02785).

Lockmiller's Neighbors

Liza Everett and Lori Solomon, who lived directly below Lockmiller in apartment No. 2, told NPD detectives they overheard fights between Lockmiller and a man who drove a silver Ford Escort. Beaman drove a silver/grey Ford Escort. (C00334, ¶35; C01156, C02311).

David Singley, who lived directly across the hall from Lockmiller, told NPD detectives that a month before Lockmiller's murder he overheard an argument between Lockmiller and Beaman, during which Beaman tried to break into Lockmiller's apartment by kicking and throwing himself against her apartment door. Singley also told police that Beaman ran around the apartment parking lot yelling "slut." He returned to her apartment a short time later to yell something like "I see your cherry stain on the bed;” and “you slept with him but you wouldn’t sleep with me;” and “the only reason you dated me was to go to bed with my friend.” (C00334-335, ¶36; C01156).

Susan Jenkins, who lived with Singley, described this same incident to NPD, telling detectives that Beaman seemed so “absolutely crazed” that she was afraid to call the police because she thought that if she did Beaman would beat Lockmiller as a result. (C00335, ¶37; C01156). Singley also told the police that he heard certain sounds in Lockmiller’s apartment on the day of the murder that could suggest she was still alive at approximately 2:00 p.m. However, both Freesmeyer and Souk believed Singley was mistaken about the day he heard these sounds. (C00977, at 302-304; C02311, at 1998-2000). Singley believed he saw Swaine’s car parked in the apartment parking lot the day of the murder, when in fact Swaine did not come back to Normal until the day Lockmiller’s body was discovered. (C01076).

Time of Death

The McLean County Coroner opined that Lockmiller’s body was in her apartment for 2-4 days before she was discovered. The coroner estimated the time of death being between 9:00 a.m. on August 25, 1993 and 9:00 a.m. on August 27, 1993. (C00335, ¶38; C02993, C02613, C03193).

Claudine Moss told NPD detectives she spoke to Lockmiller at 8:00 a.m. on August 25, 1993 about a kitten Lockmiller was advertising for sale. Moss told police she and her husband went to Lockmiller’s apartment to look at the cat around 4:20 p.m. on August 25, but Lockmiller did not answer her door. (C00335, ¶39; C02613, C02188).

Lockmiller’s class schedule for August 25, 1993 showed that she had four classes on that date: (a) 9:00-9:50 a.m.; (b) 10:00-10:50 a.m.; (c) 11:00-11:50; and (d) 2:00-2:50 p.m. Lockmiller attended her first three classes, but did not attend her fourth, which began at 2:00 p.m. She did not make a work meeting she was supposed to attend at 8:00 that night. (C00335-336, ¶40; C02613, C01156). NPD detectives were unable to find any person who saw Lockmiller alive after her 11:00-11:50 a.m. class on August 25, 1993. (C00336, ¶41; C02613).

Alan Beaman's Alibi

On October 11, 1993, NPD detectives learned that Beaman made a deposit at Bell Federal Savings and Loan Bank, located at 1466 S. Alpine Road, Rockford, at approximately 10:11 a.m. on August 25. (C00336, ¶44; C01156, C02613). On October 12, 1993, Freesmeyer interviewed Beaman at the NPD. During the interview, Beaman stated that on August 25, he arrived home from work shortly after 9:00 a.m. and went to sleep until his parents woke him up at 3:30-4:00 p.m., when they got home. (C00336, ¶42; C01156, C02613). Beaman's supervisor where he worked, Dennis Clark (Beaman's uncle), confirmed to NPD detectives that Beaman got off work on August 25 at 9:00 a.m. (C00336, ¶43; C02613).

Based on the distance between Rockford and Bloomington, NPD detectives believed it was possible for Beaman to have left Bell Federal, traveled to Bloomington to commit the murder, and returned to Rockford by 3:00 p.m. (C00336, ¶45; C02613, C00359).

Beaman's Relationship with Lockmiller

Beaman and Lockmiller had broken off their stormy relationship approximately one month before her murder. During their two-year relationship, they broke up and reunited 18 times. They had many loud arguments, witnessed by their friends and neighbors, one of which resulted in Beaman drinking a bottle of nail polish remover as a suicide effort, and the police being called. (C00337, ¶46; C00359, C00977, C02613).

Freesmeyer reviewed undated letters found in the apartment Beaman wrote to Lockmiller. The letters expressed Beaman's passion for Lockmiller, that he loved her "more passionately than Romeo did Juliet, more hopelessly than Ophelia did Hamlet, more vengefully than Medea, Jason," and added, "Don't worry, I won't kill anybody, I don't believe in that. I do unto others as I would have them unto me (from now on)." Beaman said, "I really just want you to be with me and only me," and other expressions of his passion that he felt for her. (C00337, ¶47; C01156, C02311).

NPD detectives learned that in June, 1993, Beaman broke down Lockmiller's apartment door while she was hosting her friend and sometimes lover, Larbi John Murray. Todd Barth, Lockmiller's friend, told NPD detectives that around 3 a.m. on July 5 or 6, 2015, Lockmiller called him because Beaman was trying to break in, and she was frightened and moved a dresser in front of the door. (C00337-338, ¶48; C00977, C01224, C03199).

Detectives learned that on July 25, 1993, Beaman suspected that Lockmiller was seeing and possibly sleeping with Beaman's roommate, Swaine, and again knocked down Lockmiller's apartment door. Swaine asked Beaman around 2:00 a.m. that night to borrow his car to go to a party. Thinking Swaine was lying (he was), Beaman followed Swaine on his bicycle to Lockmiller's apartment. Beaman banged on the door yelling, "I knew it! I know you are in there," and kicked in the door, looking for Swaine, who was hiding in the closet. (C00338, ¶49; C00359, C03193, C02877, C03143). On another occasion, Beaman pushed his way into Lockmiller's apartment and rummaged through her trash can looking for Swaine's used condoms as evidence. (C00338, ¶50; C00359).

Kris Perry, a close friend of Lockmiller and Beaman, told Detective Hospelhorn that Lockmiller told him Beaman once said he would kill her then kill himself. Hospelhorn interviewed Perry a second time a few days later and Perry changed his story to say that Beaman only threatened to kill himself, not Lockmiller. (C00338, ¶51; C00481).

Friends and family told NPD that Lockmiller was afraid of Beaman and she intended to seek an order of protection. (C00338, ¶52; C00623). Heidi Steinman, a close friend of Lockmiller's, told NPD detectives that Beaman had thrown a glass at Lockmiller, and also threw and broke her lamp. (C00339, ¶53; C03017, C03038).

Swaine told NPD detectives that Lockmiller thought Beaman was infatuated with her, and Beaman believed Lockmiller was the only woman for him. (C00339, ¶54; C02877). Mike Mackey, a friend of Beaman's, told police that Lockmiller would "fuck with his [Beaman's] head so much that he would just go crazy . . . he would be irrational and mood swings . . . it just made him suicidal . . . she just drove him crazy." (C00339, ¶55; C03102). NPD detectives received information that in the summer of 1993, Beaman was seeing a psychiatrist, was not eating or sleeping, and was "a mess" and "a mental wreck" because of what he was "going through with Jen." (C00339, ¶56; C02877). Another witness, Jennifer Seig, told NPD detectives she believed Beaman threatened to kill Lockmiller and Swaine if he ever caught them in bed together. (C00339, ¶57; C03121).

Katy Corbett, Beaman's friend, told detectives that at one time Lockmiller was ready to end it with Beaman but did not because Beaman "went through these times when he would be violent and he punched a huge hole in her wall at her apartment," and "he would get really upset." Lockmiller told Corbett she was going to wait until the end of the summer to break it off because she did not want to make Beaman upset while he was still in town working. Corbett stated that if "Alan was in the right frame of mind, he could be violent." Corbett said every time she saw Beaman "in these violent rages he would usually take it out on something else, like there is holes in the apartment walls everywhere at our complex . . . he would bash things." (C00339-340, ¶58; C03038).

Swaine also told NPD detectives Beaman became violent and punched a large hole in Lockmiller's bedroom wall. (C00340, ¶59; C02877). Michael Bowen, Lockmiller's friend, informed detectives that Lockmiller told him Beaman "pushed her before." (C00340, ¶60; C01218). Meredith Haynes, a friend of Lockmiller's, said that Lockmiller told her that Beaman broke down Lockmiller's apartment door several times, pushed her around and knocked things over. (C00340, ¶61; C03134).

Swaine's Relationship with Lockmiller

During the summer of 1993, Swaine and Beaman were roommates and working together at the Illinois Wesleyan theater. Swaine began a sexual relationship with Lockmiller in June 1993. Swaine and Lockmiller had sex for the first time on June 11, 1993. (C00340-341, ¶62; C02613, C02877). Swaine told NPD that Beaman gets "real jealous" and "would make everything real dramatic" when he thought that "something is going on" between Lockmiller and another man. Swaine and Lockmiller attempted to hide their relationship from Beaman. (C00341, ¶63; C02877).

Beaman's Discovery of Lockmiller's Letters to Swaine

On July 25, 1993, Beaman searched Swaine's bedroom while he was at work for evidence that Lockmiller and Swaine were having a relationship. Beaman found two letters from Lockmiller to Swaine, which Beaman felt confirmed his suspicions about them. Beaman also found an open box of condoms in their apartment and believed some condoms were missing from the box. Beaman thought the missing condoms meant Swaine was having sex with Lockmiller. (C00341, ¶64; C02613, C02877, C03121, C03048).

Beaman took the letters he found to the theater at school where he and Swaine worked together, and angrily confronted Swaine about his relationship with Lockmiller, accusing Swaine of "fucking my girlfriend." (C0034-3421, ¶65; C02877, C03038). Beaman then went immediately to Lockmiller's apartment, and pounded on her locked door. (C00342, ¶66; C03017). Steinman, who was with Lockmiller in her apartment, told NPD detectives that Beaman said, "Don't do this to me Jen. I'm going to kill myself" and kept threatening suicide until Lockmiller let him in. Once inside, Beaman angrily confronted Lockmiller with the letters. He went through Lockmiller's bathroom garbage can and found a tampon applicator, and said "See this is prophylactic. I know it, I know it. You had sex with him." (C00342, ¶67; C03017).

Beaman Leaves for Ohio

Beaman left Bloomington on July 25 after confronting Swaine and Lockmiller and went to Ohio, where he stayed with a friend, until August 4. (C00342, ¶68; C02877). Before leaving Bloomington, Beaman gave his theater professor, Dr. Brown, a note stating: ". . . But the things that I've found out and witnessed about my aforementioned roommate and my ex-fiancé have crushed any spirit. I had to get out of the slump, and it's really just time for me to leave. I'm just afraid I'd cause even more hell to break loose." Beaman attached the two letters he found in Swaine's room to the note he left for Dr. Brown. (C00342-343, ¶69; C02613). While he was in Ohio, Beaman called Lockmiller eight times. (C00343, ¶70; C03057, C02188).

Beaman Returns to Bloomington

On August 4, Beaman returned to Bloomington to get his car. He went to the apartment he shared with Swaine and saw him driving Lockmiller's car. (C00343, ¶71; C02877). That same day, Beaman went to Lockmiller's apartment "to talk to her because we had broken up." Beaman then drove Lockmiller to class, and when he dropped her off, she kissed him goodbye, and he told her "that might be the last time we ever kissed" because he did not think he could ever trust her again. (C00343, ¶72; C03143). Beaman told NPD detectives that August 4, 1993 was the last time he saw Lockmiller and that he had "no idea" if she was dating anyone "and didn't want to know." Beaman returned to Rockford on August 4, 1993. (C00343, ¶73-74; C03143, C02613).

Swaine Moves in with Lockmiller

Swaine moved out of the apartment he shared with Beaman and into Lockmiller's apartment around August 14 or 15, 1993. A week later, Swaine went home to Elmhurst, Illinois, to work. (C00343-344, ¶75; C02877, C01156). Swaine's belongings were in Lockmiller's apartment after he moved in: his "stuff" was on the top bunk bed; his alarm clock was on her bedroom floor; his clothes were in Lockmiller's closet and drawers; his box fan was in her bedroom; a box of his letters was in the living room; and his phone list was near the TV. (C00344, ¶76; C02877). Swaine told detectives that when he talked to Lockmiller on Sunday, August 21, Lockmiller said that she had not told Beaman she was living with Swaine. (C00344, ¶77; C02877).

Beaman's Contact with Lockmiller from Rockford

Steinman told NPD detectives that Beaman called Lockmiller from Rockford to tell her that he loved her and missed her, but that he heard she had gone out with a guy. (C00344, ¶78; C03017, C02613). Lockmiller's phone records show she made 28 calls to Beaman's Rockford residence on August 22, 1993. The next day, August 23, Beaman and Lockmiller spoke on the telephone for 13 minutes. (C00344, ¶79; C02613, C02188). Beaman later told Freesmeyer that Lockmiller was asking to get back together with him during the August 23 call, but Beaman said "No, I don't want to talk to you. You fucked my fucking roommate and I don't want to talk to you," then hung up. (C00344, ¶80; C03060).

The Other Suspects

Other suspects early in the investigation included Swaine, Stacey "Bubba" Gates, Murray, and Rob Curtis. Freesmeyer focused on Swaine, and after his alibi checked out (he was at work in Elmhurst), Freesmeyer began focusing on Beaman. (C00345, ¶81; C00623, C00359, C01156). Gates was eliminated as a suspect early when his alibi was verified. He was teaching at a school in Peoria when Lockmiller was murdered. (C00345, ¶82; C00359).

Daniels was in charge of investigating Murray. Daniels and Hospelhorn interrogated Murray twice, and tape recorded the statements. A September 2, 1993 interview revealed that Murray previously dated Lockmiller. He visited Lockmiller's apartment sometime between August 19 and 23, and he believed he left Bloomington to go home to Byron, Illinois on August 24 at 3 p.m. Murray was in Byron until September 1. While Beaman and Lockmiller were dating, Beaman “freaked out” and kicked in Lockmiller’s door when Murray was there, and grabbed Lockmiller’s arm. Lockmiller told Murray she was scared to break up with Beaman because she “did not know what he was going to do” and that Beaman was a “psycho.” (C00345, ¶83; C00693, C00481, C01218, C01224, C01252).

In a follow-up interview on September 8, 1993, Murray clarified he last saw Lockmiller on August 21, which he recalled because of his live-in girlfriend Debbie Mackoway’s work schedule. Mackoway left their apartment for work at 6:30 a.m. on August 25, and returned to their apartment at 1 p.m., and was at home from the time Mackoway left for work until she returned at 1 p.m., and was with her from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Murray left for Byron on August 25 at 4 p.m. He returned to Bloomington on September 2. Murray admitted he sold Lockmiller marijuana, and Lockmiller owed him $20. Murray offered to take a polygraph and provide his telephone records to the NPD. When Murray learned of Lockmiller’s death, he and Mackoway stayed at a hotel because they believed Beaman killed Lockmiller and were afraid of Beaman. (C00345-346, ¶84; C01252, C00481).

Daniels and Hospelhorn interviewed Mackoway on September 3 and 8, 1993. During those interviews Mackoway said she was with Murray at their apartment from 2 p.m. to 4:20 p.m. on August 25, then Murray left Bloomington for Byron. Mackoway and Murray saw Lockmiller on August 21, and Mackoway believed that was the last time Murray saw Lockmiller as well. (C00346-347, ¶85; C00481, C01218, C01282).

On September 30, 1993, Daniels took Murray to the Morton Crime Lab for a polygraph. Terrance McCann, the polygraph examiner who administered the test to Murray, was unable to obtain a result because Murray could not follow McCann's directions. McCann did not conclude Murray intentionally prevented a result to deceive the examiner. McCann explained to Daniels that the test could not be completed. While driving Murray back to Bloomington, Daniels discussed taking another polygraph with Murray. (C00347, ¶86; C00693, C03199).

A week later, Warner received the polygraph report about Murray. It was sent to Warner because he made the appointment for the polygraph, and when he received the report he gave it to Daniels. Warner did not know what Daniels did with the report. (C00347, ¶87; C00548). Warner believed the State Police Lab also sent Murray's report directly to the SA's Office. The SA never got that report in its file. (C00347-348, ¶88; C00548).

Daniels could not deny receiving Murray's polygraph report from Warner, only that he had no memory of it. Daniels worked closely with Warner and knew his practices and character well, and declared that he believed Warner did not and would not intentionally suppress the report. (C00348, ¶89-90; C00693). Daniels described possible explanations for the report not getting to the SA file: Warner may have given it to Daniels and he misplaced it; an NPD intern who made copies for the file could have misplaced it; Daniels could have accidentally put the report in a different file; or the report could have otherwise fallen through the cracks somewhere in the NPD. (C00348, ¶91; C00693).

Freesmeyer's entire knowledge regarding Murray was documented in a comprehensive report Freesmeyer completed. Kenneth Frankenberry, a state polygraph examiner from Rockford, organized three polygraph examinations at the NPD on October 12, 1993 -- for Beaman's friend, Chris Carbone; for Murray; and for Beaman. Murray did not show up for his examination, and Beaman refused. Freesmeyer was aware that Daniels' interviewing style intimidated many of the young people he interviewed, and so the fact that Murray did not appear for his polygraph was not suspicious to Freesmeyer. Freesmeyer had no other involvement with Murray's investigation. Freesmeyer did not interview Murray, and likely never met with him. (C00348-349, ¶92; C00359, C01156).

In February, 1994, several NPD investigators met with Chicago Police Department homicide detectives to discuss the investigation. According to Daniels, alternative suspects, including Murray, were discussed at that meeting. The Chicago detectives recommended that the NPD investigators continue to focus on Beaman as the prime suspect. (C00349, ¶93; C00693).

The Decision to Charge Beaman

On May 16, 1994, a meeting was held to decide if Beaman should be arrested for Lockmiller's murder. NPD Chief James Taylor, Zayas, Daniels, Freesmeyer, SA Reynard, and ASA Souk attended the meeting. (C00349, ¶94; C00977). The investigators provided input about what the nine month investigation had produced. As a result of that discussion, SA Reynard decided that Beaman should be charged with Lockmiller's murder. NPD investigators did not lobby or urge the SA to charge Beaman. The decision was solely made by Reynard, and Souk agreed with the decision. According to Souk, no one at the meeting expressed any opposition to the decision to charge Beaman. (C00349-350, ¶95; C00977).

In April, 1994, Daniels attended a conference in Florida for police agencies on cold case investigations. Daniels planned to discuss an unsolved murder from the 1970's, but NPD Assistant Chief Walt Clark suggested Daniels instead discuss the Lockmiller murder. Daniels copied the entire Lockmiller file, and brought it with him to Florida. Daniels returned with a list of suggested investigative avenues. (C00350, ¶96; C00693). According to Daniels, he brought the list from the Florida conference to the May 16 meeting, and suggested they pursue the list before they proceed with Beaman's arrest. According to Daniels, Souk said "I think we've got our guy" in response to Daniel's suggestion. Souk also said that "we went as far as we can with this case. We are going to go ahead and issue a warrant for [Beaman's] arrest." (C00350, ¶97; C00693).

Freesmeyer agreed with the decision to proceed against Beaman. Freesmeyer concluded there was probable cause for the arrest and prosecution of Beaman based on the following information developed during the murder investigation.

- Beaman's fingerprint was on the murder weapon, an alarm clock used to strangle Lockmiller.
- The crime scene matched something Beaman had done before. One time Beaman pulled a garbage bag out of a garbage can in Lockmiller's apartment to search for evidence of condoms deposited by Swaine or some other Lockmiller lover. The police found a garbage bag that had been pulled out of the can and was left on the living room couch at the crime scene.
- The police found letters Beaman had written Lockmiller, which showed an intense passion for her. Telephone records showed 28 phone calls from the Lockmiller residence to Beaman's home residence within the days before the murder.
- There was a hole in Beaman's alibi.
- Beaman had broken down Lockmiller's apartment door twice before.
- Freesmeyer asked Beaman several times in interviews whether he had any evidence or information that could clear him. Beaman's response was that he had nothing.
- Freesmeyer asked Beaman several times whether he had gone anywhere after he got off work the morning of the murder. Beaman said he did not.

In reality, Beaman had gone to a bank in Rockford that morning. A video from the bank showed Beaman in the bank at 10:11 a.m., when Beaman had told the police he got off work at 9:00 a.m., and went straight to bed.

- Beaman's attorney had requested and received the videotape from the Rockford bank in September, 1993, so Freesmeyer concluded Beaman was lying when he said he went straight to bed.
- Beaman made several suspicious statements on the overheard with Swaine. Beaman said Lockmiller had "dug into him with every ounce of sharp silver she had." Freesmeyer concluded that the statement was an unusual expression, and matched that Lockmiller was stabbed in the chest with silver scissors, which had not been publicly reported when the statement was made.
- Beaman told Swaine on the overheard that he knew Swaine was sleeping with Lockmiller because "that pussy never tasted the same," which seemed to be a crude reference about somebody he supposedly loved immediately after her death.
- Beaman told Swaine that Lockmiller was never going to be happy. In Freesmeyer's homicide investigation training, a killer will often say something like that as an effort to justify his action in his own mind.
- Beaman told Swaine that "she (Lockmiller) trained me good and she would have trained you just the same." Freesmeyer saw the statement as another justification for his actions.
- A fan covered Lockmiller's face, which Freesmeyer saw as fitting a pattern where a person murders someone he knows then cannot face it.
- Lockmiller was stabbed multiple times after she was already dead. According to the coroner's report Lockmiller died of strangulation. There was no blood spatter at the crime scene which indicated Lockmiller's heart was barely pumping when stabbed. It was inconsistent with the act of a random person, and indicated the killer had vengeance as a goal. Lockmiller had hurt Beaman very deeply, and no one else was known to have any passionate feelings about Lockmiller.
- There was no forced entry. Valuables were lying around the apartment. Lockmiller's purse was openly and visibly sitting on a table in the apartment. A burglar would have taken those things and there would have been a forced entry of some type.

(C00350-352, ¶98; C00359, C00156).

Souk was aware of all the evidence. He considered it very significant that Beaman's fingerprints were only found on the clock radio -- the murder weapon -- and not anywhere else in the apartment. He believed the motive evidence against Beaman was the strongest he had ever seen, there was sufficient evidence to establish probable cause, and a reasonable chance of prevailing at trial. (C00352, ¶99; C00977).

Todd Heyse, the owner of 412 Main Street where Lockmiller lived and the murder occurred, told police after Beaman was charged that he saw two people fitting the description of Beaman and Lockmiller around the time of the murder, possibly on the exact day. Heyse contacted the NPD after he saw a picture of Beaman in the paper following his arrest. Seeing the photograph of Beaman jarred Heyse's memory of seeing the two people and prompted him to call the police. (C00353-354, ¶106; C00977, C02845).

The Prosecution

Souk was the lead prosecutor in Beaman's case and presented the case to the grand jury. Freesmeyer, Beaman, Beaman's parents, the director of Beaman's church Youth Ministries, Beaman's co-worker, and Beaman's employer all testified before the grand jury. The hearing concluded on July 14, 1994 and a true bill was returned. Around January 1, 1995, Freesmeyer moved into the SA Office as they began to prepare for the trial. (C00354, ¶111; C00977). (C00354, ¶112; C00977, C01323, C00359).

In Souk's mind, Beaman was the only real suspect. Souk concluded after reviewing the information he had about Murray that he was not a person of interest. At the time of Beaman's prosecution, Souk did not believe there was any evidence to suggest that Murray killed Lockmiller. Souk did not believe Murray had any motive to kill Lockmiller, even though Souk was aware of their prior sexual relationship. Souk knew that Murray gave narcotics and marijuana to Lockmiller, and that there were some conflicting statements about whether Lockmiller owed Murray money for drugs. (C00354-355, ¶113; C00977). Souk also knew that Murray made a mistake regarding his alibi in his first interview with Daniels and Hospelhorn and corrected it in his second interview, which Souk did not consider suspicious. (C00355, ¶114; C00977). By the end of 1994, Souk was aware of three charges against Murray, two felony drug charges and a misdemeanor domestic battery case brought by Mackoway. (C00355, ¶116; C00977).

Souk was aware at the time of Beaman's trial that Mackoway reported that Murray started taking steroids in January, 1994, and that he then began acting erratically, which she attributed to the steroid use. (C00355-C00356, ¶117, 199; C00977; C0289). Murray was never physically violent toward Mackoway until January, 1994. (C00356, ¶118; C02829). Mackoway never believed Murray killed Lockmiller. (C00356, ¶120; C02829).

The state subpoenaed Murray for the Beaman trial and he was on Souk's witness list. Souk flagged information in the SA files regarding Murray's pending cases so the ASA handling those cases, Robert Freitag, would not offer Murray a plea in case they wanted to call Murray in the Beaman trial. A plea in Murray's pending cases could have been used to impeach him if the state called him as a witness. Souk noted that Freitag should see Souk before any deals were made with Murray. (C00356, ¶122; C00977, C01752). Souk ultimately decided not to call Murray at trial.

The jury convicted Beaman of the murder. After the appeal and the post-conviction proceedings, the judgment was vacated, and the McLean County SA declined to re prosecute Beaman for the crime. Souk was not surprised that the McLean County

SA chose not to re prosecute Beaman after the conviction was vacated. After 13 years it would take a monumental effort by the police and prosecutors to regather the witnesses and evidence again. (C00357, ¶124; C00977). Without opposition from the state, a certificate of innocence (COI) was issued by the circuit court. DNA testing of substances continued even after the judgment was vacated. The DNA results showed only that Beaman, and the other early suspects, were not known contributors to the samples obtained. (C11098)

STANDARD OF REVIEW

The standard of review from the entry of summary judgment is de novo. Weather-Tite, Inc. v. Univ. of St. Francis, 233 Ill.2d 385, 389 (2009). When the moving party identifies an issue appropriate for summary judgment on which the non-moving party bears the burden of proof, the non-moving party has to demonstrate that substantial evidence existed to create a factual dispute on a material issue. Sang Ken Kim v. City of Chicago, 368 Ill.App.3d 648, 654 (1st Dist. 2006). Summary judgment for the defendant is proper if the plaintiff fails to establish any element of the cause of action. Flint v. Court App. Special Advs. of DuPage Cty., 285 Ill.App.3d 152, 161 (2d Dist. 1996).

ARGUMENT

I. The Circuit Court Properly Granted Summary Judgment On Plaintiff's Malicious Prosecution Claim Where The State's Attorney Initiated The Prosecution, There Was Clear Probable Cause For The Prosecution, There Is No Evidence Of Malice, And The Murder Prosecution Was Never Terminated In A Manner Indicative Of Innocence.

The circuit court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim. Under Illinois law malicious prosecution requires proof of: 1) commencement or continuation of a criminal proceeding by the defendant; 2) absence of probable cause for the proceeding; 3) malice; 4) termination of the proceeding in a manner indicative of the plaintiff's innocence; and 5) damages. Swick v. Liautaud, 169 Ill.2d 504, 513 (1996).<sup>2</sup> If one of the required elements is missing, the malicious prosecution claim fails. Id. at 512.

A. *Defendants Did Not Commence Or Continue Beaman's Prosecution.

The circuit court properly found the prosecutors, not the defendant police officers, commenced the prosecution when they made the decision on who would be charged with the murder of Lockmiller. The circuit court properly found defendants did not commence or continue a criminal prosecution against plaintiff. (C12494). The circuit court analyzed the testimony of the prosecutors, the defendant police officers, and other witnesses, including the non-party NPD Investigator Daniels, to hold defendants did not initiate or continue a criminal prosecution against plaintiff. The evidence analyzed by the circuit court shows that defendants were all police officers who investigated the case for, and at times the direction of, the McLean County SA's office. Although the circuit court did not use the language ultimately clarified by the Supreme Court, the analysis the circuit court applied was the same. The circuit court properly found that the evidence undisputedly showed the SA exercised their independent judgment in the decision to prosecute plaintiff for Lockmiller's murder. (C12497).

In its Opinion, the Supreme Court first recounted the over 150 years of precedent on the disfavored malicious prosecution cause of action in Illinois, from Richey v. McBean, 17 Ill. 63 (1855), and Hurd v. Shaw, 20 Ill. 354 (1858), down through Joiner v. Benton Comm. Bank, 82 Ill.2d 40 (1980), and subsequent federal and state appellate decisions. The Supreme Court found that proximate cause, composed of both the actual and legal cause prongs of the proximate cause analysis, governs, and remanded back to this Court for another review. In its Opinion, the Supreme Court saw that language from the various decisions over the years that analyzed the commencement element, in both police and non-police cases, variably used “significant role,” or “advice and cooperation,” or the language relied on by this Court, misstating evidence or unduly influencing the prosecution. The Supreme Court did not reject the result of this Court’s decision affirming summary judgment, or the test this Court applied. The Supreme Court’s Opinion simply clarified that this Court’s focus was too restrictive. Causation can be established by conduct other than where the police “pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecution relied.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654 *47.

This Court is now faced with the first, and possibly the most important, interpretation of the Supreme Court’s decision. Much of the language used by the Supreme Court is not self-defining. What does “advice and cooperation,” or “significant role,” actually mean? A wide range of normal, non-tortious police investigative conduct could generically fit those concepts. But what type of conduct by police who investigate a crime actually causes a malicious prosecution?

The questions lend themselves to many academic discussions. However, in this case, no reasonable application of a proximate cause rule could conclude that defendants’ actions here proximately caused the prosecution. Among the undefined concepts in the Opinion, one crystal clear observation in the Supreme Court’s decision boils the test down to its core. The Supreme Court commented that however one characterizes the conduct of the police, it must overcome the presumption of the prosecutor's independent judgment. Citing historical treatises, the Court saw that:

- Liability thus depends on whether the defendant was actively instrumental in causing the prosecution, and the presumption of prosecutorial independence can be overcome by showing that the defendant improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.

2019 IL 122654 *44. Whatever the allegedly causal conduct may be, it must overcome “the presumption of prosecutorial independence. . . .”

The Supreme Court agreed with this Court that causation could be proven where police exert undue pressure or influence on the prosecutors, or provide them false information, but clarified that other conduct can cause a prosecution as well, such as when an officer “concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” Id. The Supreme Court clarified that causation of a prosecution is not limited to where the police “pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecution relied.” The additional types of conduct that could also cause a prosecution not included in this Court pronouncement of the standard is undefined at this time. Nevertheless, whatever the parameters of that conduct may be, plaintiff’s causation theory here cannot be included in that class.

Plaintiff argues that the prosecution here was caused by a “biased” police investigation, a concept mostly introduced into the case in the amicus brief by the former federal prosecutors, which drips with hostility toward police. Plaintiff argues that a cause of action for malicious prosecution can be brought against police if determined, with 20/20 hindsight twenty years after the fact, that they should have conducted a different type of investigation or arrived at different conclusions about the evidence. Plaintiff argues that investigative negligence or mistakes, such as misinterpreting the crime scene and jumping to an early conclusion about who did it, can proximately cause a prosecution for purposes of the tort of malicious prosecution.

The argument that a biased investigation occurred here is factually incorrect, and no reasonable jury could agree with it. Nevertheless, the concept that a so-called biased investigation could be actionable itself is radical, untenable, and has no support in any precedent. The Supreme Court deeply explicated Illinois and federal cases, even string-citing cases using the language plaintiff argued governed, and moored its conclusions to a long line of precedent. Id. at ¶29. Not one of the cases using the “advice and cooperation” or “significant role” language applied or recognized in any way that a “biased” investigation could cause a malicious prosecution.

Each case required active misconduct that produced a bad prosecution rather than failed to facilitate a good one. E.g., Frye v. O’Neil, 166 Ill.App.3d 963, 975 (4th Dist. 1988) (police filed false information causing arrest of wrong person); Bianchi v. McQueen, 2016 ILApp(2d) 150646 ¶72 (defendants presented fabricated witness statements to special prosecutors causing prosecution); Rodgers v. Peoples Gas, Light and Coke Co., 315 Ill.App.3d 340, 348-49 (1st Dist. 2000) (defendant induced the plaintiff to commit the acts for which he was charged with a crime). The Court went on to allude to another twenty cases, none of which endorsed the type of activity that plaintiff contends here could be deemed the cause of a malicious prosecution. E.g., Mosley v. Pendarvis, 2015 WL 2375253 *4 (N.D. Ill.) (defendant police officer signed the criminal complaint against the plaintiff and allegedly fabricated inculpatory statements of the plaintiff that were communicated to the prosecutor); Fields v. City of Chicago, 2014 WL 477394 *12 (N.D. Ill.) (defendant police officers allegedly deliberately fabricated statements by witnesses).

The Supreme Court in its decision reinforced the venerated principle that malicious prosecution is a disfavored cause of action, and should not be expanded lightly. “Nevertheless, malicious prosecution actions are subject to more stringent limitations than other tort actions and will be allowed only when all the requirements for maintaining the action have been met.” 2019 IL 122654 ¶ 25.

Despite this caution about expanding the malicious prosecution action, plaintiff calls for a radical expansion which has never been countenanced before. In their amicus brief, the former federal prosecutors pitched the “biased investigation” concept to the Supreme Court, but the Court gave it no quarter. The Court acknowledged the contribution of all amici, and endorsed the federal prosecutors call for a common-sense approach, but never gave even the slightest traction to the notion that a defective investigation, a negligence based interpretation of the circumstances surrounding the crime, could be the cause of a malicious prosecution. Plaintiff’s theory advocates anything but a commonsense approach.

Rather than requiring a causal link that overcomes the prosecutor’s independence, plaintiff’s approach completely eliminates the prosecutor’s judgment from the analysis. It assumes the hundreds of qualified and competent state court prosecutors throughout Illinois are incapable of evaluating a bad investigation and refusing a prosecution because of it. Certainly, the Supreme Court in its Opinion did nothing to impugn the capabilities of Illinois prosecutors, or to even acknowledge a causation theory that would expose police throughout the state to lawsuits in every case they investigate in which the prosecution, for whatever reason, fails. Plaintiff's construct envisions an immune prosecutor who should have rejected a "biased investigation" escaping liability with all potential exposure falling on the police.

It is safe to say there has never been a difficult police investigation that could not be, or was not, second-guessed. Criminal defense strategies almost always attack the sufficiency of the investigation, whether evidence was gathered properly, interpreted correctly, reported sufficiently, and all potential leads covered. Attacks on an investigation take place during a criminal trial to test it for the trier of fact. To say the police misinterpreted the crime scene and cut-off investigation too early is to say they were negligent. To expose the police to potential liability, based on hindsight and second-guessing normal investigative activities, invites a disaster. Some believe that defensive policing has already crippled crime fighting efforts in the state, and plaintiff's theory of what it means to proximately cause a prosecution would make it worse.

Plaintiff's approach has been expressly rejected by the Illinois legislature. Section 4-102 of the Illinois Tort Immunity Act establishes that police and public entities cannot be liable for "failure to detect or solve crimes, and failure to identify or apprehend criminals." 745 ILCS 10/4-102. A so-called biased investigation, one that fails to properly solve the crime, cannot form the basis for causation of a malicious prosecution.

The Supreme Court's Opinion expressed the requirement that police cause a malicious prosecution when they overcome prosecutorial independence. Beaman, at ¶44. Even the gross distortion of the evidence plaintiff provides in his Brief cannot raise a specter of possibility that a jury could find that the prosecutors' independent judgment was overcome in this case. To encapsulate once again, the decision to prosecute plaintiff was made by the prosecutors, after nine months of investigation, at a meeting on May 16, 1994. (C00349, ¶94; C00977). Attending the meeting were NPD investigators Daniels, Freesmeyer, Zayas, and Chief Taylor, along with McLean County SA Reynard and ASA Souk. (C00349, ¶94; C00977). Reynard and Souk were clear and unequivocal in their testimony that they made the decision to prosecute Beaman uninfluenced by any defendant. (C02197, p. 71-72; C00977, p. 139-140). Defendants' input was only to discuss the evidence. The circuit court's conclusion that the McLean County SA's Office "alone made the decision to prosecute plaintiff for the murder of Jennifer Lockmiller after considering all evidence, including evidence concerning other potential suspects in the case" (C12497), remains the correct view. The prosecutor's independent decision was the sole cause of the prosecution.

The circuit court properly recognized what cannot be plausibly denied – that the deposition testimony of Daniels "corroborates the defendants' claim in this case that the officers did not commence the prosecution." (C12497). Daniels was not sued by plaintiff and at various times stated, post-conviction, that he was "on their (plaintiff's) side." At his deposition, Daniels described wanting to discuss additional investigation he thought should be pursued, which he learned about at a cold-case conference he had recently attended in Florida. When asked about the meeting where the decision was made to arrest plaintiff, Daniels testified that Souk interrupted him when it was Daniels' opportunity to discuss leads from the cold-case conference, and instead stated that "he [Souk] thought that they went far enough in the investigation, they were going to go ahead and issue a warrant for Mr. Beaman's arrest." (C00350, ¶97; C00693).

The evidence shows Daniels was somewhat bitter about his inability to influence the prosecutors, given how steadfast they were in their decision to prosecute. The decision was solely made by the SA, in his role as the chief law enforcement officer for the County, with Souk's full support. (C00349-350, ¶95; C00977). Even a so-called "biased investigation," if one had actually occurred, could not have overcome the independent judgment of the prosecutors. Prosecutor Souk was aware of and even involved in the investigation from the beginning.

Plaintiff's standard, that a case that could be presented to a jury based on a defective investigation, one that misinterpreted evidence and focused on the wrong suspect, which overemphasized the importance of some evidence and missed the importance of other, a case of police malpractice, is a perspective that eliminates the prosecutor from the analysis. It ignores the core of the Supreme Court's Opinion, that whatever the "significant role" or "advice and cooperation" may have been, it must have overcome the independence of the prosecutor. Plaintiff's case could only establish a jury question if the prosecutor is eliminated from the test.

For example, plaintiff once again points to the Murray polygraph as some lynchpin in the case. He disregards Souk's unequivocal testimony that he never thought Murray had a motive, and therefore never considered Murray a true and viable suspect. Plaintiff calls this a "claim" of Souk, the inference being that for whatever reason, it is not credible, but the facts overwhelmingly belie that contention. That Souk never considered Murray a suspect could not ring more true. Souk read Murray's statements; knew of Murray's drug dealings and steroid use; knew about Murray's physical conflicts with his girlfriend and his erratic behavior. Souk still planned to use Murray as a witness at the trial.

Plaintiff still pushes that the incomplete polygraph would have mattered. That notion has been and remains pure fantasy. Plaintiff points to Souk's testimony that he would "have looked at it" had he gotten it, as some indication that it made a difference. Of course Souk would have looked at it, just as he looked at Murray's statements given to the police and his arrest record for drug dealing and domestic battery. Police and prosecutors see inconclusive polygraph reports all the time. Even in this case there were other inconclusive polygraph reports, and Souk did not even consider Murray's inconclusive, only incomplete. (C01093). Compared to everything else Souk knew about Murray, a reasonable jury could not say the polygraph would have made a difference to him.

This Court has already fully explored and rejected plaintiff's polygraph contentions:

- It would be speculative for a jury to find a polygraph report, indicating only that the test was incomplete due to a failure to follow instructions, would have had any bearing on Souk's decision to prosecute plaintiff. In his deposition, Souk testified Murray had no motive to kill Lockmiller. Souk knew about Murray when he decided to arrest plaintiff. During the prosecution, Souk knew Murray and Lockmiller had been involved sexually. Souk knew Murray had made two separate statements about the time he left town, meaning Murray potentially lied and Murray was in town when Lockmiller was murdered. During the prosecution of plaintiff and before plaintiff's trial, Souk learned of Murray's steroid use and erratic behavior and the domestic abuse allegations, and he continued prosecuting plaintiff. Souk already knew Murray's character was questionable. The report did not establish a motive to murder Lockmiller or provide evidence establishing Murray as the killer – the two bases for Souk's decision ruling out Murray as a suspect.

2017 ILApp(4th) 160527 ¶69.

Plaintiff argues the federal court made a finding inconsistent with this Court's about the impact of the polygraph on Souk's prosecutorial decision. Beaman v. Souk, 7

F.Supp.3d 805, 830 (C.D. Ill. 2014). The federal court's decision, however, focused on whether the polygraph was Brady material and the effect it could theoretically have had on rulings in the criminal trial, not on Souk's view of whether Murray was a suspect. This Court's conclusion is not in conflict with the district court's.

Moreover, how could the polygraph even play out in this case? The Supreme Court's decision creates a threshold that any police officer involved in an investigation had to be so "active" in it to be deemed as having provided "advice and cooperation" with the prosecutors, or have played "a significant role in" the prosecution to have caused it. The only defendant with any connection to the Murray polygraph was Warner, who played only a very insignificant role in the case. Warner took statements early on, when the entire NPD investigative unit pitched in. Warner's only connection to the Murray polygraph was not from being involved in the investigation, but because he was the NPD's evidence officer. He immediately gave the report to Daniels, who was actively involved in the investigation. Warner was not present at the meeting when the SA made the decision to arrest plaintiff for the murder. Warner did not play either an active role that amounted to advice and cooperation in the prosecution decision, or a significant role in the prosecution, to satisfy the Supreme Court's threshold. And Freesmeyer and Zayas cannot be pulled into potential liability for the insignificant polygraph, when the uncontradicted evidence shows they never even knew about it.

Plaintiff again raises the tired argument about Freesmeyer misleading the grand jury and manipulating time trials. Despite plaintiff repeatedly complaining about it, no court that has looked at this case has given any credence to these arguments. E.g., People v. Beaman, 2017 ILApp (4th) 160527 ¶63 ("Plaintiff's conclusory statements identify two types of evidence that were allegedly fabricated: the time trials and Freesmeyer's testimony before the grand jury. This evidence, however, does not support plaintiff's conclusion"); People v. Beaman, 368 Ill. App.3d 759, 768 (4th Dist. 2006) ("In its order denying defendant post-conviction relief, the court found Freesmeyer's testimony to be neither false or misleading . . . The court's conclusion is not against the manifest weight of the evidence"); Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d. 500, 512 (7th Cir. 2015) ("But, Freesmeyer did not lie about the speeds and alternative routes, and he was subject to cross-examination about the speeds and alternative routes.")

The whole Freesmeyer claim, again, could only hold traction if the role of the prosecutor is eliminated from the analysis. Souk was at the Grand Jury and asked the questions, so he knew of Freesmeyer's testimony, and could make his own independent judgment as to whether it was accurate. He obviously saw, as did the Seventh Circuit and every other court involved, nothing inaccurate about it. Souk also knew about the time trials. If Freesmeyer went too fast on one and too slow on another, Souk could and did make his own independent judgment as to how such evidence would hold up, and what affect it had on the validity of the prosecution. Time trials only determine possibilities. What can be tested in a time trial is how long something can take, under varying conditions. It would be impossible for Freesmeyer to bamboozle Souk over the time trial results. Souk could objectively determine whether the tests were probative of an issue affecting the prosecution, and could form his own judgments about it. Only plaintiff's dangerous reformulation of a proximate cause test, which eliminates the involvement of the prosecutor, and total distortion of the evidence, could create a fact issue here for the jury.

The police defendants' investigative activities here, as the Seventh Circuit acknowledged, were "the type of behavior that will be present in every criminal prosecution – valid pursuit of a conviction." Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d at 512. The police actions here were neither the actual or legal cause of plaintiff's prosecution, a determination this court can make as a matter of law from the undisputed material facts in this case. City of Chicago v. Beretta U.S.A. Corp., 213 Ill.2d 351, 395-96 (2004). Defendants' activities in conducting the investigation into the murder did not actually cause the prosecution, the murder caused a condition for prosecution, and the prosecutors' independent judgment was the actual cause. Defendants' activities were not the legal cause, because the prosecutors were fully aware of all factors important to them in making their decision, and it is not foreseeable that a sworn prosecutor would not reject a defectively biased investigation, even if it were truly biased and defective.

The cases plaintiff cites do not support his position. In Price v. Phillip Morris, Inc., 219 Ill.2d 182, 269-70 (2005), the Supreme Court questioned whether proximate cause could conceivably be established on a theory that millions of smokers were deceived into smoking by the defendant's advertisements. This Court should be equally skeptical that experienced prosecutors could conceivably be deceived by a so-called biased investigation taking place right under their noses. Thacker v. UNR Industries, 151 Ill.2d 343 (1992), addressed the inherently factual question of the type of evidence, scientific or other, capable of proving that an illness was caused by exposure to a toxic substance. Thacker has no applicability here.

Finally, plaintiff distorts what occurred at the May 16, 1994 meeting. Plaintiff conflates none of the officers disagreeing with the decision to prosecute (except, possibly, Daniels), with active effort by the police to convince the prosecutors to go forward. That cannot be the case. Plaintiff's theory puts a burden on the police to oversee the actions of the prosecutors, an argument they first made, then abandoned, in federal court.

Neither could Freesmeyer's testimony before the grand jury and at the trial constitute commencement. Police testify at legal proceedings involving persons charged with crimes. That role carries out the prosecutor's decision, it does not cause it. Plaintiff's argument would also abrogate the testimonial immunity that protects witnesses from liability and assumes the continued vitality of our legal justice system. Rehberg v. Paulk, 132 S.Ct. 1497, 1508 (2012); Jurgensen v. Haslinger, 295 Ill.App.3d 139, 141-42 (3d Dist. 1998). The United States Supreme Court in Rehburg recognized explicitly that police could not be held accountable for a prosecutorial decision by testifying in the prosecution's legal proceedings. 132 S. Ct. at 1508.

Souk drew his own conclusions regarding the evidence that was uncovered during the investigation. Souk was influenced by Beaman's obsession with Lockmiller; his breaking down her door on two occasions; his extreme jealousy toward her; his fingerprint on the murder weapon; and so on. (C00352-354, ¶¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Souk reviewed the information gathered in the investigation, and drew the conclusion that grounds existed to prosecute plaintiff. The decision was made by SA Reynard, with Souk's support. (C00349-350, ¶¶95; C00977). Even plaintiff's self-proclaimed advocate on the investigative team, Daniels, agreed that no defendant did anything at that meeting to cause Souk or Reynard to prosecute Beaman. (C00350, ¶¶97; C00693).

Defendants' conduct was not the proximate cause of the prosecution decision. Defendants did not induce Beaman to demonstrate his intense obsession with Lockmiller; break down her door; start a public fight with her new lover; place his fingers on the murder weapon; or make suspicious statements after the murder. There can be no doubt, based on an independent review of the evidence, that the SA and his Assistants were convinced of Beaman's guilt, as Souk explained in significant detail during his deposition. (C00352-354, ¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Because Souk has absolute immunity for the prosecution, as plaintiff has conceded, his testimony cannot be attacked for bias or interest. Souk had no motive except to present his honest view of the evidence. Plaintiff may disagree with Souk's view of the evidence, but that has no impact on the question of initiation of the prosecution.

Plaintiff still argues defendant Warner "buried" the Murray polygraph report. Certainly, Warner did not bury the polygraph or any other evidence, which plaintiff's advocate Daniels himself conceded. (C00348, ¶90; C00693). Nevertheless, as current precedent stands, allegations of a failure to produce even exculpatory evidence does not constitute initiation of a prosecution for a malicious prosecution claim. Szczesniak v. CJC Auto Parts, Inc., 2014 IL App (2d) 130636, ¶13-14; Denton v. Allstate Ins. Co., 152 Ill.App.3d 578, 584 (1st Dist. 1987); Geisberger v. Vella, 62 Ill.App.3d at 941 (1978); Logan v. Caterpillar, Inc., 246 F.3d 912, 922 (7th Cir. 2001).

In sum, as the circuit court properly found, there is no dispute the McLean County SA, in consultation with his Assistants, initiated the prosecution of plaintiff for Lockmiller's murder. The evidence shows defendants did nothing to proximately cause the prosecutors to deviate from exercising their independent judgment and discretion to proceed with the charges. Plaintiff did not establish the first element of his malicious prosecution claim, and the circuit court properly granted summary judgment on Count I.

B. Probable Cause Existed for Beaman's Prosecution.

Significantly, there are three other meritorious bases for summary judgment here. The circuit court also properly found probable cause existed for the prosecution and plaintiff's arrest based on the detailed evidence recounted by Freesmeyer and Souk, and that the evidence supporting probable cause was sufficient to prove plaintiff's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt at trial. (C12497). Under Illinois law, probable cause is a complete defense to a malicious prosecution lawsuit. Johnson v. Saville, 575 F.3d 656, 659 (7th Cir. 2009). Probable cause is "a state of facts that would lead a person of ordinary caution and prudence to believe, or to entertain an honest and strong suspicion, that the person arrested committed the offense charged." Reynolds v. Menard, Inc., 365 Ill.App.3d 812, 820 (1st Dist. 2006); Sang Ken Kim v. City of Chicago, 368 Ill.App.3d 648, 654 (1st Dist. 2006). The existence of probable cause depends on the "totality of the circumstances" at the time of the arrest. Gauger v. Hendle, 2011 IL App (2d) 100316 ¶112. Probable cause may be based on the "collective knowledge" of the officers involved in the investigation. People v. Long, 369 Ill.App.3d 860, 867 (2d Dist. 2007).

Probable cause is not a jury question if the facts on which probable cause is based are undisputed. Cervantes v. Jones, 188 F.3d 805, 811 (7th Cir. 1999) ("when facts sufficient to create probable cause are undisputed, probable cause is a question of law"). While plaintiff may dispute that he committed the crime, and dispute that the facts submitted to the jury proved he committed the crime, he cannot dispute the facts supporting a probable cause finding.

Plaintiff's probable cause quarrel is a paradigm of denial. He trumpets that the family values he grew up in made him an unlikely suspect, even though he used drugs with Lockmiller, terrorized her for months, then spoke of her in vile terms after her death.

The evidence collected during the investigation were not figments of the officers' imaginations, they were first-hand accounts from Lockmiller's closest friends and neighbors, of Lockmiller herself through her friends' accounts, and of forensic examinations of physical evidence, specifically damage plaintiff caused to Lockmiller's home and his fingerprint on the killing instrument.

Plaintiff cannot realistically dispute that there was strong evidence of his obsession with Lockmiller; his violent behavior toward her prior to the murder; that he bashed her door in on at least two prior occasions; his fingerprints on what the State considered the murder weapon; the inspection of Lockmiller's garbage which the State considered a signature; or the post-murder statements he made which the State considered suspicious. He may dispute his opportunity to commit the murder, but only that opportunity was improbable, not impossible. Indeed, opportunity was the focus of the criminal trial and the appeal from the conviction. The facts the State relied on in deciding to go forward with the prosecution clearly established probable cause. Souk's view that the evidence established the reasonable possibility of proving plaintiff's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt hardly can be disputed, given the outcome.

Plaintiff argues that because his conviction was vacated, and that he received a COI and a pardon, there could not have been probable cause for his arrest and prosecution. The certificate and pardon, however, do not erase the evidence supporting probable cause. A trial here could only ask a jury to make a legal determination, whether the undisputed evidence established probable cause. Plaintiff would want the jury to decide whether the evidence was sufficient to prove guilt – but in a malicious prosecution trial the jury would only decide whether evidence of guilt existed, not whether that evidence was sufficient to prove plaintiff's guilt.

Plaintiff attempts to pick apart evidence supporting probable cause by arguing that it was not indicative of plaintiff's guilt, and there was stronger evidence of innocence. However, the overwhelming evidence as reviewed established probable cause for plaintiff's arrest. Further, the nature of the crime scene and the personal manner in which Lockmiller was murdered further supported a reasonable belief that plaintiff was involved in her death. (C00327-00344, ¶9-80).

Evidence also linked plaintiff to the scene. Two of his fingerprints were found on the clock radio attached to the cord used to strangle Lockmiller. One of his prints was on the back of the clock, near the cord, and the other was on the bottom of the clock. (C00330, ¶24). A plastic garbage bag was lying on the couch in the living room with its contents spilling out, which was similar to plaintiff's past behavior, when he rummaged through Lockmiller's garbage looking for evidence that she was having sex with Swaine. (C00328, C00338, C00342, ¶15, 50, 67). Finally, due to the estimated date and time of death, defendants believed plaintiff had sufficient time to drive to Normal to commit the murder and return to Rockford. (C00335-336, ¶38-45).<sup>3</sup>

At his deposition, Freesmeyer succinctly and convincingly recounted the facts which convinced him that probable cause existed. Souk agreed with Freesmeyer's analysis. There are no facts for a jury to arbitrate. The circuit court's reliance on the undisputed facts establishing probable cause was proper.

<sup>3</sup> By the time of trial plaintiff's defense team began producing evidence, through the testimony of plaintiff's mother, to narrow the window. However, probable cause is determined at the time of arrest. People v. Wear, 229 Ill.2d 545, 564 (2008). When plaintiff was charged and the case turned over to the prosecutors the window of opportunity for plaintiff to have committed the murder was longer. Moreover, neither the prosecution nor the jury were required to credit plaintiff's mother's alibi time line, and even if credited, there was still a window of opportunity, if a narrow one, for plaintiff to have committed the murder.

The circuit court's reliance on ASA Souk's conclusion that there was probable cause for the arrest and prosecution was also proper. (C00352, ¶99; C00977). Importantly, at his deposition, Souk recounted the evidence that he believed not only established probable cause, but in his view provided the State with a reasonable chance of proving plaintiff guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. (C00352-354, ¶99-110; C00977, C02845). Indeed, in deciding to go forward with plaintiff's arrest and prosecution, Souk applied a higher standard than the reasonable grounds to believe plaintiff committed the murder needed to establish probable cause.

Plaintiff argues Souk's and Freesmeyer's conclusions about the existence of probable cause here are inadmissible, and cites Todd W. Musburger Ltd. v. Meier, 394 Ill.App.3d 781 (1st Dist. 2009), where the court held that expert testimony on whether the plaintiff had a viable claim for quantum meruit was an inadmissible legal conclusion. Here, Souk's and Freesmeyer's testimony was not offered as an expert opinion on probable cause, but an explanation of their respective evaluations of the case, determinations they had to make. Nevertheless, the presumption of probable cause based on the grand jury true bill (Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg. Co., 33 Ill.2d 291 (1965)) still applies, and Souk's consideration of the evidence gathered in the investigation leading him to take the case to the grand jury is still relevant, even aside from his conclusion that it established probable cause.

Finally, there was nothing improper about the circuit court's recognition that the evidence presented at plaintiff's jury trial was sufficient to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. (C12498). That the conviction was vacated based on procedural defects does not erase the evidence or its legal effect. Whether the evidence presented at plaintiff's trial was sufficient to prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt has been fully litigated. Although plaintiff argues the circuit court should not have even acknowledged a verdict that was later vacated, there remains a certain absurdity to an argument that the evidence did not even indicate probable cause, where an SA and his Assistants, a Grand Jury, a trial court jury, a trial court judge, and an appellate court, all determined that the evidence was sufficient to prove plaintiff guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, and the Supreme Court refused to review whether the evidence was sufficient. Then, in vacating plaintiff's conviction, the Supreme Court was careful to express no view impugning the sufficiency of the evidence.

Notwithstanding disagreements about guilt, no reasonable jury could conclude there was a lack of probable cause to prosecute plaintiff. The evidence of it was overwhelming. An office of seasoned prosecutors and a grand jury thought so, which is prima facie proof of probable cause. Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg., Co., 33 Ill.2d 291, 296 (1965). Even Tony Daniels believed there was probable cause. (C00802, p. 341). That plaintiff had the means, motive and opportunity to murder Lockmiller cannot be disputed. These factors alone can carry the day in establishing probable cause. See e.g., People v. Kidd, 175 Ill.2d 1, 22-23 (1996); U.S. v. McMullin, 568 F.3d 1, 7-8 (1st Cir. 2009); People v. Yost, 468 Mich. 122, 133 (2003); Nugent v. Hayes, 88 F.Supp.2d 862, 869 (N.D. Ill. 2000); Schertz v. Waupaca Cty., 683 F.Supp. 1551, 1565 (E.D. Wis. 1988), aff'd 875 F.2d 578 (7th Cir. 1989). Coupled with the other evidence implicating plaintiff, probable cause is overwhelmingly established, and no reasonable jury could decide otherwise. As such, the circuit court properly granted summary judgment in favor of defendants.

C. Plaintiff Cannot Prove Defendants Acted With Malice.

In the context of malicious prosecution, “malice” is “the initiation of a prosecution for any reason other than to bring a party to justice.” Szczesniak v. CJC Auto Parts, Inc., 2014 IL App (2d) 130636, ¶19. Absence of malice can be decided on summary judgment where the record is devoid of any affirmative evidence of malice, an element on which the plaintiff bears the ultimate burden of proof. Turner v. City of Chicago, 91 Ill.App.3d 931, 937 (1st Dist. 1980).

As the circuit court explained, there is no evidence to allow a jury to conclude that defendants harbored any malice toward plaintiff. The evidence showed that defendants acted on their honest beliefs that plaintiff killed Lockmiller, and therefore, the circuit court could not find that “sufficient facts exist to show that the defendants’ involvement in this case was motivated by any other reason than to bring a party to justice.” (C12498). Further, that defendants acted on advice of the SA, either directly or through his Assistants, itself vitiates any claim of malice. Salmen v. Kamberos, 206 Ill.App.3d 686, 692 (1st Dist. 1990).

Plaintiff sees malice in defendants construing evidence as inculpatory, rather than exculpatory, and in defendants not agreeing with plaintiff’s assessment of the evidence. None of the action which plaintiff identifies as proof of malice, however, can constitute malice, at least as defined for purposes of malicious prosecution. Malice found for prosecutions, for example, have been proxies for collecting a debt (Szczesniak, 2014 IL App (2d) at ¶14); to force an employee’s termination (Rodgers v. People’s Gas Light & Coke Co., 315 Ill.App.3d 340, 350 (1st Dist. 2000)); to discover why the plaintiff was on the defendant's property (D.N. Vasquez v. Jacobs, 23 Ill.App.2d 457, 464 (2d Dist. 1960). Plaintiff complains of what at worst might be construed as zealous or negligent police work, but nevertheless its only purpose was to bring Lockmiller's killer to justice. Plaintiff offers no evidence that can support a conclusion that defendants' actions were for any other purpose than to bring the person they thought killed Lockmiller to justice.

Plaintiff misstates the evidence regarding Warner and the polygraph report. As explained above, the Seventh Circuit did not find Warner intentionally hid the polygraph report. In addition, as explained above, that Zayas was in charge of the investigation, was present at the May, 1994 meeting, and believed that the case needed some work, does not show malice. The prosecutors, not Zayas, decided to charge plaintiff with murder and nothing about Zayas' belief that more on the case might be needed could possibly result in an inference of malice. In sum, the circuit court properly granted summary judgment in favor of defendants.

D. Plaintiff Cannot Prove The Termination Of His Prosecution Was Indicative Of His Innocence.

Finally, plaintiff bears the burden of proving that termination of the prosecution in his favor occurred for reasons consistent with his innocence. Swick v. Liataud, 169 Ill.2d 504, 513 (1996). To make that determination, the circumstances under which the dismissal is obtained must be examined, not the form or title given to it. Id.

Plaintiff's conviction was reversed, but the case was remanded for retrial. As the circuit court recognized, the Supreme Court specifically held that no part of its decision would suggest insufficient evidence or preclude a retrial. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill.2d 56, 82 (2008). The circuit court also recognized that, on remand, the McLean County SA decided not to re prosecute plaintiff, but nothing about that decision suggested plaintiff's innocence. Rather, relying on the deposition testimony of Souk (an experienced prosecutor and judge), the circuit court properly found the decision not to re prosecute plaintiff could have been “a matter of impracticability of reconstructing the evidence and relocating witnesses after so many years had passed.” (C12499).

Plaintiff also relies on the COI and governor’s pardon to establish a termination indicative of innocence. The Certificate and pardon, however, have no impact in this case. A COI proceeding is established under §2-702 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure, 735 ILCS 5/2-702. It is essentially a non-adversarial proceeding, although the statute allows the Illinois Attorney General or the SA to intervene as parties in the action. The statute provides no ability of a municipal police agency or police officers to participate.

The State did not oppose plaintiff’s Petition, quite likely as part of a settlement agreement in which plaintiff agreed to drop all claims against the McLean County defendants. Regardless, in order for that COI to have any impact against these defendants, they needed a meaningful opportunity to oppose plaintiff’s Petition in that litigation. Kremer v. Chemical Const. Corp., 456 U.S. 461 (1982). They did not, and therefore, the Certificate can have no preclusive effect here.

Further, by the express language of the statute, the issuance of the COI can have no impact in this case. 735 ILCS 5/2-702(j). The termination in favor of plaintiff was the nolle prosequi of the criminal charge against him after remand from the Supreme Court, which occurred long before the Certificate was issued. The Certificate, not issued until years later, played no role in the termination decision. Similarly, the governor’s pardon, not issued until years later, played no role.

The cases plaintiff cites do not support his conclusion that the COI can satisfy that element of his claim. In Kluppelerg v. Burge, 84 F.Supp.3d 741, 745 (N.D. Ill. 2015), the district court found the certificate could be relevant to whether the defendants there withheld material evidence, and possibly for damages, but never actually decided whether the certificate could prove a termination indicative of innocence. In Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F.Supp.2d 660, 673 (N.D. Ill. 2005), the district court merely recognized that if a governor's pardon uses certain language, that pardon may indicate a conviction was terminated in the plaintiff's favor for purposes of a Heck analysis only. Nevertheless, a district court decision is not precedential here, and in any event a case stands only for the issues it decides. Sanner v. Champaign County, 88 Ill.App.3d 491 (4th Dist. 1980).

Plaintiff also argues the evidence showed he is innocent, but the termination element of his claim turns on why the case was terminated, not what the civil court hearing the malicious prosecution tort case thinks of the strength of the evidence against the plaintiff. Plaintiff has presented no other evidence to satisfy his burden, and therefore the circuit court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious prosecution claim.

II. This Court Properly Found Plaintiff Forfeited His Intentional Infliction Of Emotional Distress Claim.

This Court first time around properly found plaintiff forfeited his IIED claim because he did not develop his argument in support of the claim on appeal. Op. ¶74. Plaintiff attempts to argue that because he at least brought it up in his appellate court brief, he should be allowed to pursue it. However, as the appellate court properly recognized, "mere contentions, without argument or citation of authority, do no merit consideration on appeal.” Op. ¶74.

In the alternative, even if this Court was to consider it, the circuit court properly recognized that plaintiff’s IIED claim is based on the alleged malicious prosecution and, therefore, fails because plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim fails. Jiminez v. City of Chicago, 830 F.Supp.2d 432, 451 (N.D. Ill. 2011) (success of the IIED claim was contingent on the success of malicious prosecution claim); Walden v. City of Chicago, 755 F.Supp.2d 942, 962 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (IIED claim was “intertwined” with the malicious prosecution claim). Here, because plaintiff bases his IIED claim on the alleged malicious prosecution, his IIED claim also fails. Moreover, absent proof sufficient to establish common law malicious prosecution, defendants are immune from liability for a prosecution, regardless of how plaintiff styles his cause of action. 745 ILCS 10/2-208.

III. The Circuit Court Properly Granted Summary Judgment On Plaintiff’s State Law Civil Conspiracy Claim.

The circuit court properly granted summary judgment on plaintiff’s conspiracy claim. On appeal, plaintiff confines his conspiracy claim to defendants conspiring among themselves to maliciously prosecute him, abandoning any claim that defendants conspired with the McLean County SA. To prove a civil conspiracy, a plaintiff must show an agreement to accomplish either an unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose by unlawful means. Mosley v. City of Chicago, 614 F.3d 391, 399 (7th Cir. 2010); Buchner v. Atlantic Plant Maint., Inc., 182 Ill.2d 12, 23 (1998). Most significantly, a plaintiff must prove a meeting of the minds between the defendants. A conspiracy claim cannot be based on speculation or conjecture. The plaintiff must show the defendants acted in concert. Fritz v. Johnson, 209 Ill.2d 302, 317-18 (2004).

The circuit court properly found that because defendants are entitled to summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious-prosecution claim, plaintiff cannot establish the third element of this civil-conspiracy claim. Plaintiff argues that a conspiracy is shown by the following: (1) defendants collaborated closely on the case and shared information and therefore must have known there was no probable cause to arrest and prosecute Beaman; (2) Freesmeyer ignored exculpatory evidence and alternative suspects, lied to the grand jury and skewed time trials; (3) Warner "buried" the Murray polygraph; and (4) Zayas allowed the arrest to go forward, knowing the evidence could not justify it. Plaintiff's claims of misconduct aside, his argument flags nothing more than defendants all working on the same investigation. If sufficient, such a conspiracy claim would exist in every police investigation involving more than one officer.

In Mosley, the plaintiff alleged that investigating officers conspired to prosecute him by withholding evidence of an exculpatory statement made by a key eyewitness during a line-up (614 F.3d at 39). The officers failed to make a line-up report for fifteen months to hide the witness's statement. The court found the absent report and officers working together did not amount to evidence of a conspiracy. Id. at 400. In Vodak v. City of Chicago, 2009 WL 500678 (N.D. Ill. 2009), the plaintiff's evidence of various discussions between command personnel regarding the decisions to make arrests and charge the arrestees did not support a conspiracy finding.

Here, summary judgment was also properly granted on the conspiracy claim because, as the circuit court recognized, to prevail "plaintiff would need to show that the defendants conspired with themselves and with the prosecution to maliciously prosecute him." (C12499). Because plaintiff is no longer claiming a conspiracy with the prosecutors, summary judgment was properly granted pursuant to the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine. Wright v. Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Svcs., 40 F.3d 1492, 1508 (7th Cir. 1994); Buchner, 182 Ill.2d 12 at 24.

The intracorporate conspiracy doctrine precludes conspiracy claims against members of the same entity. Payton v. Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Med. Ctr., 184 F.3d 623, 632 (7th Cir. 1999). See Piphus v. City of Chicago, 2013 WL 3975209, at 8 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (conspiracy claim was barred by the intracorporate doctrine because it was only directed at the police officers, employees of the same government entity); Ghiles v. City of Chicago Hts., 2016 WL 561897, at 3 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (conspiracy claim was barred under the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine because all defendants were City officials); Maska v. Schicker, 2015 WL 6098733 (S.D. Ill. 2015). Similarly, here, the intracorporate conspiracy doctrine bars plaintiff's conspiracy claims. In sum, the circuit court properly granted summary judgment in favor of defendants on plaintiff's conspiracy claim.

IV. The Circuit Court Properly Granted Summary Judgment On Counts IV And V.

Finally, the circuit court properly found the respondeat superior and indemnification claims are derivative claims against the Town of Normal based on the substantive claims against the individual defendants. As such, the circuit court properly affirmed summary judgment on these claims as well.

CONCLUSION

For all of the foregoing reasons, the defendants respectfully request this Court affirm the judgment in this case.

Respectfully submitted,

VI. The Remaining Claims Must Proceed to Trial. .....	19
VII. Conclusion .....	19

The Supreme Court’s unanimous decision makes it clear that officers meet the commencement or continuance element of the malicious prosecution tort when they conceal evidence or engage in other wrongful or bad faith conduct instrumental in initiating a wrongful prosecution. That is precisely what happened here and why this case must go to a jury. Defendants’ argument to the contrary is a backdoor invitation to overrule the Supreme Court’s recognition that bad faith conduct by investigators can be instrumental in initiating charges. And their factual arguments as to each prong badly misstate the record and improperly usurp the jury’s province to adjudicate disputed facts and inferences.

I. Commencement or Continuance Is An Issue for the Jury.

A. A Rational Juror Could Find that the Defendants Concealed Evidence and Engaged in Wrongful or Bad Faith Conduct Instrumental in the Initiation of the Prosecution.

The Supreme Court squarely held that the commencement or continuance prong is satisfied where police officers “concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45 (quoting 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)). In this case, it is for the jury to decide that question. The Supreme Court’s decision reaffirms—in striking, forceful terms—the jury’s power over factual matters and the extreme nature of summary judgment. The unanimous Court declared: “Summary judgment is a drastic means of disposing of litigation.” Id. ¶ 22. The extraordinary remedy is permitted “only when the right of the moving party is clear and free from doubt.” Id. (emphasis added). Summary judgment must not be granted “where reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or where there is a dispute as to a material fact.” Id. Courts must construe the record “strictly against the movant and liberally in favor of the opponent.” Id.

Thus, whatever it means for malicious prosecution to be “disfavored,” it cannot be that the summary judgment standard is to be set aside in these cases. Indeed, the Supreme Court’s opinion teaches the opposite. Commencement or continuance is an issue for trial in this case because a rational juror could find that the Defendants’ bad faith conduct and concealment of evidence were instrumental to the initiation and continuance of the prosecution in the following ways, individually or in combination:

First, a rational juror could find that Freesmeyer performed the time trials in bad faith. Defendants offer no rejoinder to the fact that Freesmeyer recorded the results of all fourteen time trials that hurt Beaman—but omitted the only one that helped Beaman. Pl. Br. 31. The omitted time trial supported Beaman’s alibi by showing he would have easily made it home from the bank in time for the 10:37 and 10:39 calls that he placed to his youth pastor. Justice Burke zeroed in on this omission at the Supreme Court argument.<sup>1</sup> Defendants have no explanation for this glaring omission. Especially given that Freesmeyer dutifully recorded every time trial result that could harm Beaman’s defense, this Court cannot simply assume Freesmeyer’s good faith—on summary judgment and as a matter of law—without usurping the jury’s rightful authority.

In its previous decision, this Court addressed whether Freesmeyer provided “false information” about the time trials but did not directly consider whether he performed them in good faith. This Court and the Seventh Circuit have concluded that Freesmeyer did not lie about the routes or the speeds at which he drove, but that was never Plaintiff's contention. Rather, the point is that an investigator acting in good faith would not perform the time trials in the manner that Freesmeyer did. True, Souk may have asked for time trials, but there is no evidence that Souk told Freesmeyer to careen at ridiculous speeds when that would hurt Beaman's alibi, crawl along when that would harm the alibi, or to omit exculpatory information from his report. A rational juror could find that the time trial results, produced through bad faith and deliberate omission, were instrumental to the initiation of the prosecution because they purported to negate Plaintiff's ironclad alibi and enabled the case against him to proceed.

Second, Freesmeyer misled the grand jury. He lied about alternative suspects, particularly Murray, claiming that investigators had not "locate[d] any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller." A.115, 3218. This was far more than concealment of the polygraph—it was total concealment before the grand jury of Murray as a suspect. Because the same sort of concealment occurred before the petit jury at trial, the Supreme Court unanimously vacated the criminal verdict in 2008. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 80 (Ill. 2008) (noting that "the State's argument [at trial] relied upon the assertion that all other potential suspects had been eliminated from consideration," when in fact Beaman "could have argued that [Murray] had a motive to commit the murder" if the Murray evidence had not been concealed).<sup>2</sup> Just as the Supreme Court could not have "confidence in the verdict," id. at 81, because alternative suspects were concealed from the petit jury, the grand jury might never have indicted Beaman but for the concealment of alternative suspects. This Court therefore cannot conclude as a matter of law that Freesmeyer's false testimony was not instrumental in causing the prosecution.

As Defendants note, grand jury perjury does not create a malicious prosecution claim all by itself, but it may be "used, along with other allegations, to support [a] malicious prosecution claim." White v. City of Chicago, 2012 WL 2525654, at *4 (N.D. Ill. 2012); see also Brooks v. City of Chicago, 564 F.3d 830, 833 (7th Cir. 2009) (stating that a claim for prosecution based on "false evidence or testimony . . . is, in essence, one for malicious prosecution" (citations omitted)).

Third, as the federal district court unequivocally held, a jury issue exists as to whether Warner intentionally concealed the Murray polygraph report because Warner received the report, he failed to follow policy on disseminating it, and the report thereafter vanished: "[T]aking the evidence in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, he has pointed to sufficient evidence to support an alternative inference that [Warner] intentionally withheld the information from Souk." Beaman v. Souk, 7 F.Supp.3d 805, 827 (C.D. Ill. 2014). Defendants make much of Daniels' totally inadmissible testimony that he did not consider Warner to be the type of officer who would intentionally conceal a polygraph report. Daniels has no personal knowledge of what happened to the report after he gave it to Warner, and no court could conclude as a matter of law that Warner simply lost it just because Daniels did not think he would hide it.

In arguing that no rational juror could find that the polygraph could have affected the decision to indict Beaman, Defendants ask this Court to break ranks with the federal district court, which concluded: “Perhaps if the prosecutor had received the polygraph report, he would no longer have agreed Murray was not a viable suspect.” Beaman, 7 F.3d at 830 n.8. The Seventh Circuit’s affirmance does not disturb that finding. Nor should the Court blindly accept on summary judgment Souk’s claim that Murray was not a viable suspect. After all, Beaman was wrongfully convicted in the first place—and his conviction was later vacated—precisely because of Souk’s dishonesty about Murray not being a viable alternative suspect. See Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 80. Moreover, the Supreme Court unanimously recognized in 2008 that Murray had a “motive to commit the murder.” Id. at 80. Even Souk himself had to acknowledge that the polygraph would have been “useful for investigative purposes,” and he would have “asked some questions and looked at it more” had he even known about it. A.3423. But even that is an effort to minimize the relevance of the polygraph to the case against Beaman. The polygraph was critical evidence because “the circumstances of the polygraph examination indicate that [Murray] intentionally avoided the test. He did not comply with the polygraph examiner’s instructions during the first attempt and failed to cooperate in scheduling a second attempt.” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 76. In addition, Defendants contend that Souk planned to call Murray as a witness at some point. Def. Br. 34–35. Even if the assertion is true, it is irrelevant since the prosecutor ultimately decided not to call him.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Remarkably, the Defendants contend that “as current precedent stands, allegations of a failure to produce even exculpatory evidence does not constitute initiation of a prosecution for a malicious prosecution claim,” Def. Br. 40, but the Supreme Court plainly stated that the commencement or continuance element can be satisfied where “conceal[ment] [of] exculpatory evidence” was instrumental in the initiation of charges. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 44.

Fourth, Freesmeyer’s extreme bias, which included a fixation on Beaman as the prime suspect from Day One, see Pl. Br. 4–5, his determination seven months before the investigation ended that Beaman “was going to be arrested for Jennifer’s death at one point or another,” A.1318, his threat to push for Beaman’s execution if he did not confess, A.1318, and his irrational view of exculpatory evidence as inculpatory, see Pl. Br. 37–40, only add to the facts that allow a rational juror to find bad faith misconduct instrumental to the prosecution. A rational juror could find that Beaman never would have been charged if Defendants had investigated information inculcating other possible suspects, including: (1) identifying similar burglaries or sexual assaults in the area, (2) attempting to locate the stranger who would not stop calling Lockmiller, (3) looking for the other stranger who gave Lockmiller his phone number in lipstick just before her death, and (4) subjecting John Murray to the same scrutiny, wiretapping, extreme bias, and browbeating as Plaintiff. Pl. Br. 10–11. The point is not, as Defendants would have it, that any investigative bias constitutes malicious prosecution. Rather, a rational juror could find that the extreme nature of the bias of this case—combined with the concrete misconduct and concealment described above—were a part of the Defendants’ bad faith actions that were instrumental in bringing about the prosecution.<sup>4</sup>

B. Defendants’ Extreme View of Prosecutorial Independence Is Contrary to the Supreme Court’s Opinion and Would Swallow the Supreme Court’s Rule for Commencement or Continuance.

The Supreme Court’s decision plainly states that four categories of action by the police satisfy the commencement or continuance prong. Commencement or continuance has occurred if police officers “[1] improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, [2] knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, [3] concealed exculpatory evidence, or [4] otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45 (quoting 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)).

---

<sup>4</sup> Defendants wholly fail to support their assertion that Daniels “agreed that no defendant did anything at [the pre-arrest] meeting to cause Souk or Reynard to prosecute Beaman.” See Def. Br. 39. (citing R.350, ¶ 97; R.693).

While sometimes paying lip service to the Supreme Court’s fourth category of conduct—officers commence or continue a prosecution when they “otherwise engage[ ] in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution,” id.,—Defendants in fact ask this Court to eviscerate this method of showing commencement or continuance. By zeroing in on the Supreme Court’s reference to the presumption of prosecutorial independence to the exclusion of everything else in the opinion, Defendants and their amici are asking this Court to overrule the Supreme Court from below. Strangely, Defendants deny that the Supreme Court rejected the pressure, influence, or misstatement test that this Court had applied. Compare Def. Br. 28 (“The Supreme Court did not reject the result of this Court’s decision affirming summary judgment, or the test this Court applied.”) (emphasis added) with Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47 (“We conclude that the appellate court’s standard failed to consider whether the defendants proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the criminal proceeding against Beaman. The appellate court focused its inquiry on whether the ‘officer[s] pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor’s decision or made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied.’” (quoting Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 58)). The municipal amici simply excise “otherwise engag[ing] in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45, from the test they propose.

Municipal Am. Br. 4 (No mention of wrongful or bad faith conduct in their formulation: “[T]he plaintiff must overcome the presumption of prosecutorial independence, and this can be achieved in narrow circumstances where the defendant improperly exerted pressure on the charging prosecutor, made knowing misstatements upon which the prosecutor relied, falsified evidence, or concealed exculpatory evidence.”).

The opposing briefs do not even try to offer an account of the types of investigative misconduct other than the first three items in the Supreme Court’s list that can be instrumental in the initiation of a prosecution. They effectively treat the fourth category, “otherwise engag[ing] in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution,” as an empty set. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45. Such a narrow view cannot be right. If it were, the Supreme Court would not have included wrongful or bad faith conduct instrumental in the prosecution as an additional form of commencement or continuance. In short, the extreme view of prosecutorial independence urged in the opposing briefs would negate the Supreme Court’s opinion and resurrect the far more restrictive “pressure, influence, or misstatement” rule—the very approach that the Supreme Court unanimously rejected.

Moreover, the Supreme Court recognized the practical reality that prosecutorial decisions rely on—and indeed defer to—police investigations: “This court has recognized that prosecutors ordinarily rely on police and other agencies to investigate criminal acts. Significantly, it is the recognized practice that the State’s Attorney sensibly defers to the investigative duties of the police.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 43 (emphasis added) (citation and internal quotations omitted). These statements recognize the critical role that investigators have in setting a prosecution in motion. As a corollary of that critical role, the Supreme Court concluded broadly that officers satisfy the commencement or continuance element when they “otherwise engage[ ] in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” Id. ¶ 45. Throughout their Brief, Defendants continue to rely on the false tautology that if a prosecutor caused the charges, the police must not have. See Def. Br. 27 (“[T]he prosecutors, not the defendant police officers, commenced the prosecution.”). That binary view flies in the face of the Supreme Court’s opinion in this case, which recognizes the extent to which prosecutors must rely on and defer to the police.

Rather than acknowledging the Supreme Court’s holding that bad faith conduct other than pressure, false statements, or concealment of evidence can be instrumental to the initiation of a prosecution, Defendants and their amici attempt to present this Court with a choice between effectively nullifying the Supreme Court’s decision and expanding malicious prosecution to encompass any biased, negligent, or mistaken investigation.

The choice is a false one. The Supreme Court was very clear that police officers can only be liable in malicious prosecution for “wrongful or bad-faith conduct.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45. Mere negligence or mistake does not constitute malicious prosecution. Plaintiff has never argued otherwise, because the Defendants’ investigation in this case was rife with bad faith and wrongful conduct. This Court is not free to ignore the Supreme Court’s standard—commencement or continuance includes “wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” Id. And given the competing inferences about bad faith and the effect of Defendants’ misconduct and concealment on the initiation of the prosecution, it is not for a court to take that question from the jury.

II. Malice Is A Question for the Jury.

From the actions described above, a rational juror could easily find malice. After all, questions of state of mind and good faith versus bad faith or malice are quintessential factual issues at the core of the jury’s function. “Good faith is a question of fact, and is for the determination of the jury.” Hardin v. Gouveneur, 69 Ill. 140, 143 (1873); Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172, 177 (1875) (holding in a malicious prosecution case that whether a defendant “acted in good faith . . . was a question for the jury”); Mack v. First Sec. Bank of Chicago, 158 Ill. App. 3d 497, 503 (1st Dist. 1987) (stating that “good faith is a factual determination . . . and is properly reserved to the sound discretion of the trier of fact”).

Perhaps a juror could conclude that Freesmeyer botched the case due to error rather than malice. Maybe Freesmeyer ignored the evidence exculpating Beaman out of gross incompetence rather than malice; maybe it was an innocent mistake to floor the accelerator when a fast speed would hurt Beaman’s alibi and to brake when that would hurt the alibi; maybe Freesmeyer denied the existence of viable alternative suspects before the grand jury out of mere incompetence as opposed to bad faith; and maybe Freesmeyer remembered to memorialize in his report every time trial except the one that exculpated Beaman due to an innocent mistake. Maybe Zayas assented to the arrest despite knowing the case was not ready to be sent to the State because he really didn’t think about it, see Pl. Br. 17, and maybe Warner innocently lost the polygraph rather than the alternative recognized by the district court—that he “intentionally withheld the information from Souk.” Beaman, 7 F.Supp.3d at 827. Yes—maybe.

All of these maybes reflect what is obvious: there are competing inferences that might be drawn from the record regarding the Defendants’ credibility and subjective state of mind. In our system of justice, we get to the truth on these issues through a trial, which is what must occur in this case. The conclusion of Plaintiff’s expert in criminal investigations, a former FBI agent with 45 years of criminal investigation experience, that the Defendants “showed an utter disregard for the truth” A.3248–49, is not a fanciful one that no rational juror could reach. The drastic remedy of resolving such questions through summary judgment has no place here because “the right of the moving party” is not “clear and free from doubt.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22.

III. A Rational Juror Could Find that Defendants Lacked Probable Cause.

A jury must decide whether Defendants had probable cause to arrest and jail Beaman because the record is beset with complex facts from which competing inferences could be drawn. Defendants want the Court to take not only some of the facts as undisputed but to adopt their inferences about whether those facts inculpate Beaman and help to establish probable cause. A court may grant summary judgment if (1) the material facts are undisputed and (2) the only rational inferences that one can draw from those facts amount to probable cause. Seymour v. Collins, 2015 IL 118432, ¶ 42; Carney v. Union Pac. R. Co., 2016 IL 118984, ¶ 25; see also Pl. Br. 35 (citing additional cases). True, under the first part of this analysis, Plaintiff and Defendants agree on some of the facts. The Court, however, cannot resolve the second part—the proper inferences to draw from those facts—on summary judgment in this case. Thus, Defendants are dead wrong to imply—even if the facts were undisputed, and they are not—that probable cause would be a pure “legal determination,” Def. Br. 42, in a civil trial. Rather, the law is crystal clear that all inferences, even from undisputed facts, must be drawn in favor of Beaman. Indeed, the Supreme Court underscored the point in this very case, stating that summary judgment “should be denied” if “reasonable persons could draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22 (emphasis added).

For example, police found Beaman’s fingerprints on the alarm clock console (not the cord used to strangle the victim) along with both Michael Swaine’s prints and additional prints that could not be identified. Pl. Br. 37. This fact is not disputed, but the inferences are the rub. A rational juror considering the fingerprints could easily say, “Of course Alan Beaman’s prints were on the alarm clock. He had spent the night there and used the alarm clock, but they don’t mean anything because no one can date fingerprints, and Swaine’s prints were on the clock too. Plus, the unidentified prints probably belonged to the killer! At best the fingerprint evidence is irrelevant to probable cause; if anything, the unidentified prints are exculpatory.”

A rational juror would also have to assess the evidence known to Defendants that made it obvious Beaman was in Rockford, some 120 miles away from the crime. After Beaman made the bank deposit and placed the 10:37 and 10:39 calls, it would have been impossible—literally—for him to travel to Normal, commit the murder, and return home by 2:15, when Carol Beaman confirmed he was at the family residence. See Pl. Br. 11–12. Singley’s evidence, which established the time of death as 2 p.m. or later, made the scenario doubly impossible. Id. 13–14. Defendants even acknowledge a disputed issue on whether “opportunity was improbable.” Def. Br. 42. It strains logic to say that cause is probable as a matter of law while conceding that opportunity is improbable. A rational juror would also consider that no witness could place Beaman in Bloomington-Normal (much less at the victim’s apartment), that he maintained his innocence both under vigorous interrogation and in conversations with a friend that police recorded in secret, and that no probative physical evidence connected him to the crime. Pl. Br. 11. Surely a rational juror would consider the many potential killers (some known, others not) who floated in and out of the victim’s high-risk life. Id. 4–9. No potential juror could ignore John Murray, the steroid-abusing drug dealer known to beat women. He had sex with the victim and sold her drugs, could not complete a polygraph about the killing, and lied about his alibi. Id. 7–9. At the end of it all, some rational jurors would reject probable cause to arrest Alan Beaman; perhaps others would find it. The solution to this problem is a trial.

The circuit court failed to perceive the competing inferences surrounding each piece of evidence and usurped the role of the jury when it adopted, wholesale and without elaboration, the inferences Defendants set forth in “paragraphs (a) through (p) of Defendants’ Memorandum of Law in Support of Defendants’ Motion for Summary Judgment.” A.30–31. Defendants reiterate the (a) through (p) list in their facts section, Def. Br. 22–23, and rely on it for their probable cause argument, but like the fingerprint evidence discussed above, every other item on the list could be considered irrelevant, if not exculpatory. Plaintiff’s opening brief detailed this analysis item-by-item on pages 37–40, and we will not repeat it here. At best, each item of evidence cuts both ways. That means a court must stay its hand and let the jury decide. One rational juror might agree with Defendants that some of these facts support probable cause; another might consider them irrelevant, if not exculpatory. The complex summary judgment record in this case (comprising 91 pages of briefs, 272 pages of statements of material facts and responses thereto, and 11,066 pages of exhibits) presents a thicket of competing inferences that only a factfinder can resolve.

Even if the Defendants and Souk subjectively believed they had sufficient evidence to constitute probable cause, probable cause is an objective standard. Whatever opinions they held are not relevant to probable cause, and the Court must ignore them. Penn v. Chicago State Univ., 162 F. Supp. 2d 968, 976 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (“[An] official’s subjective belief as to the legal basis of the prosecution is irrelevant; the test for probable cause is an objective one.”).

The only question is whether a juror could rationally infer from the facts that probable cause was lacking. For example, it does not matter from the standpoint of probable cause if Freesmeyer and Souk thought the scene suggested a “personal” crime, Def. Br. 43, because a rational juror could easily infer that the scene suggested a stranger, see Pl. Br. 5. It does not matter that Freesmeyer thought the fingerprint evidence to be inculpatory—a conclusion based “solely on [his] own interpretation,” A.1587, as he acknowledged—because a rational juror could view it as irrelevant (if not exculpatory, given the unidentified prints on the clock). See Pl. Br. 11. It does not matter that Souk or Freesmeyer erroneously placed weight on strife in the relationship because that evidence was obviously stale. By the time Beaman returned to Rockford three weeks before the murder, he was reported to be calm and over the relationship, and the investigators knew it. A.85–86; R.8739–40 (noting that, by this time, Beaman “seemed to me to be in an overall good mood and he had finally, he had finally gotten to the point of where he was no longer angry about anything. He sounded like he wanted to try to be just be [sic] friends with Jennifer again. The general thing I got was that he was in a good mood, I hadn’t seen in quite a while.”); R.8749 (noting that, by this time, “things were ironed out” between Lockmiller and Beaman, and Beaman “seemed ok.”). Nor does it matter whether Freesmeyer viewed the emergence of the bank video (which helped to solidify Beaman’s alibi) as evidence of guilt, or thought Beaman killed his former girlfriend because he made some coarse comments about her during a barrage of interrogations and surreptitious overhears in which he also consistently maintained his innocence. See Pl. Br. 39. While Defendants try to salvage their improper reliance on Souk and Freesmeyer’s legal conclusions by suggesting that their opinions are relevant to their personal “evaluations of the case” and “consideration of the evidence,” see Def. Br. 44, such personal views are off limits in the Court’s consideration of probable cause. The only question for the Court is whether a rational juror could find an absence of probable cause.

Contrary to Defendants’ absurd characterization, Plaintiff does not argue that either the Supreme Court’s 2008 vacatur of Beaman’s conviction or his undisputed innocence establishes the absence of probable cause. The point, rather, is that the circuit court erred in holding that the thoroughly discredited conviction established the existence of probable cause. A.31. Recall that the unanimous Supreme Court stated in 2008: “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding petitioner guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him, along with the nondisclosure of critical evidence.” People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 81 (2008).<sup>5</sup>

While the disputed inferences alone preclude summary judgment, disputed issues of fact make the circuit court’s error all the more manifest. Defendants’ inaccurate and one-sided recitation of the facts—some of which are pure fiction with no grounding in the

<sup>5</sup> Defendants claim in passing that the grand jury indictment establishes a presumption of probable cause. Def. Br. 44. This argument is waived because Defendants did not assert it in the Circuit Court or at any other point, presumably because it obviously would fail on the merits. The Supreme Court has stressed that false or incomplete grand jury testimony (such as Freesmeyer’s, see supra at 3-4) is sufficient (though not necessary) to defeat any relevance of a grand jury indictment to probable cause in a malicious prosecution case. Freides v. Sani-Mode Mfg. Co., 33 Ill. 2d 291, 296 (1965) (“‘Prima facie probable cause’ is established by the return of the indictment by the grand jury but it is not conclusive evidence of probable cause. It may be rebutted by other evidence such as proof that the indictment was obtained by false or fraudulent testimony before the grand jury, or by failing to make a full or complete statement of facts, or by other improper or fraudulent means. No decision of the court ever has restricted the rebutting evidence solely to proof of false or incomplete testimony . . .” (citation omitted)).

record—makes it clear that important issues of fact cannot be resolved as a matter of law, as careful review of the full record will confirm. A few examples follow:

- Defendants claim that “Jennifer Seig, told NPD detectives she believed Beaman threatened to kill Lockmiller and Swaine if he ever caught them in bed together,” Def. Br. 14, but Seig admitted in the same interview that she might have heard this supposed threat not in reality but “in a dream or something.” R.3126.
- Defendants claim that “Todd Heyse, the owner of 412 Main Street where Lockmiller lived and the murder occurred, told police after Beaman was charged that he saw two people fitting the description of Beaman and Lockmiller around the time of the murder, possibly on the exact day,” Def. Br. 24, when in truth Heyse testified that he saw the individuals four or five days after he closed on a real estate transaction—a transaction that occurred three weeks before the murder. R.8812, 8818–19. Moreover, Heyse saw these people while driving past the apartment building on North Main Street, a busy thoroughfare, and testified that he could not “identify either one of them again if [he] saw them.” R.8802, 8809.
- Defendants’ assertion that “Steinman told NPD detectives that Beaman called Lockmiller from Rockford to tell her that he loved her and missed her, but that he heard she had gone out with a guy,” Def. Br. 18, is a half-truth at best. Defendants had Beaman’s phone records, which showed Steinman’s statement to be false. A.339 (phone records showing that in August of 1993, when Beaman was in Rockford, Lockmiller called Beaman repeatedly, he called her only once, and that call lasted 13.8 seconds).
- While Defendants’ brief claims that Beaman forced open the door “several times” and “a few times” see Def. Br. 5, 9, 15, it happened but twice. (Both times, Ms. Lockmiller was having sex with other men while dating Plaintiff.). A.86.
- Per the Defendants, “Terrance McCann, the polygraph examiner who administered the test to Murray, was unable to obtain a result because Murray could not follow McCann’s directions, Def. Br. 20, a characterization that contradicts the Supreme Court, which stated: “[T]he circumstances of the polygraph examination indicate that [Murray] intentionally avoided the test.” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 76; see also id. at 67 (“The polygraph examiner testified that the failure to follow the instructions could have been an intentional avoidance tactic.”).
- Defendants assert that “[Daniels and Hospelhorn] came away from the Beaman interview believing Beaman’s conduct was highly suspicious,” Def. Br. 8, when in reality, Hospelhorn testified that after the interview, he had “[n]o suspicions at all” that Beaman committed the murder. A.2583.
- Defendants suggest that Murray did not lie about his alibi but “made a mistake” which he later “corrected” when confronted with the truth, Def. Br. 25, but the Supreme Court viewed Murray’s state of mind differently: “[Murray] initially gave a false alibi stating he left town the day before the murder. That false exculpatory statement could be used as probative evidence of consciousness of guilt.” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 80-81.

As these conflicting facts and inferences underscore, the circuit court erred in granting summary judgment on the probable cause element.

IV. A Rational Juror Could Find that the Criminal Proceedings Against Beaman Concluded in a Manner Indicative of Innocence.

Prosecutors dropped the charges against Beaman after this Court threw out the conviction, then Beaman won a certificate of innocence through litigation in the Circuit Court of McLean County, and the Governor then pardoned him on the basis of innocence. Any one of these events would defeat summary judgment on the “indicative of innocence” prong all by itself.

A gubernatorial pardon on the basis of innocence alone establishes that the proceedings concluded in the plaintiff’s favor. Walden v. City of Chicago, 391 F. Supp. 2d 660, 664, 680 (N.D. Ill. 2005). A certificate of innocence is “relevant at least to the ‘indicative of innocence’ element of plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim.” Kluppelberg v. Burge, 84 F. Supp. 3d 741, 744 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (citation omitted). The instant case comes to this Court on summary judgment; therefore, relevant evidence satisfies plaintiff’s burden. The mere fact that the certificate is not preclusive in this proceeding “does not bar evidentiary use of the certificate.” Id. at 745.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> The certificate of innocence resulted from an adversarial judicial proceeding in which the State opposed the petition. R.3472. DNA testing initiated by the State then proved that Plaintiff did not kill Ms. Lockmiller. Id. Only then did the State drop its opposition to the certificate of innocence. Id. It did so because the DNA evidence established Plaintiff’s innocence, A.3355–3366, not because of some “settlement agreement,” Def. Br. 48, between Plaintiff and the State, A.121. In addition, Defendants incorrectly cite 735 ILCS § 5/2-702(k) for the proposition that the certificate of innocence is irrelevant, but the statute

Even if Beaman did not come to court with a certificate of innocence and a pardon from the Governor, the “indicative of innocence” prong still would be a jury question. The “dismissal of a . . . charge against the plaintiff at the instance of the prosecutor” generally suffices to show favorable termination. Rich v. Baldwin, 133 Ill. App. 3d 712, 715 (5th Dist. 1985). The State’s Attorney’s Office not only dropped the charges, but it did so after this Court unanimously declared, “We cannot have confidence in the verdict finding [Plaintiff] guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him . . .” Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81.

Moreover, Defendants lack any admissible evidence to suggest that the proceedings did not terminate in a manner indicative of innocence. They cite Souk’s testimony about why the State’s Attorney might have dropped the charges after the Supreme Court’s 2008 ruling. That testimony is inadmissible because Souk was speculating and lacked personal knowledge. A.2962–2966. He had long since departed the State’s Attorney’s Office and was not consulted about dropping the charges. Id.

V. The Civil Conspiracy Claim Must Proceed to Trial.

The Defendants’ parallel malfeasance provides the strongest evidence of conspiracy. Freesmeyer lied to the grand jury, manipulated time trials, and concealed exculpatory evidence. Zayas let Beaman get arrested even though he knew the case was shoddy and incomplete. Whether Warner hid the Murray polygraph presents a genuine issue of fact, as the federal district court recognized. Taking these facts as true, it would be an extraordinary coincidence if the Defendants all decided in solitude to fabricate evidence that would says only that a certificate of innocence does not have binding or res judicata effects. A certificate of innocence is “relevant at least to the ‘indicative of innocence’ element of plaintiff’s malicious prosecution claim.” Kluppelberg, 84 F. Supp. 3d at 744.

enable the prosecution of Alan Beaman, a college student with an alibi that placed him some 120 miles from the scene. This claim, too, must go to a jury.

The intra-corporate conspiracy doctrine does not bar this claim. “Courts have recognized two exceptions to the Illinois intracorporate conspiracy doctrine: (1) a conspirator acts out of self-interest rather than in the interest of the principal; and (2) when the scope of the conspirators act beyond the scope of their official duties.” Whitley v. Taylor Bean & Whitacker Mortg. Corp., 607 F. Supp. 2d 885, 897 n.5 (N.D. Ill. 2009). Relying on these exceptions, courts routinely refuse to apply the doctrine to police misconduct.<sup>7</sup> This Court should do the same. Misconduct and evidence suppression neither benefit a police department nor fall within a detective’s legitimate duties.

VI. The Remaining Claims Must Proceed to Trial.

Plaintiff did not waive his intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, as his appellate brief addressed it with argument and citation. A.3379. This claim must rise or fall with the malicious prosecution claim. The same holds for the respondeat superior and indemnification claims—they should be reinstated with the malicious prosecution claim.

VII. Conclusion

The Court should reverse the circuit court and remand this case for trial.

Circuit Court Case No. 14 L 51

Hon. Richard L. Broch, presiding

DEFENDANTS-APPELLEES' MOTION TO STRIKE PLAINTIFF-APPELLANT'S STATEMENT OF FACTS

Defendants-Appellees, Tim Freesmeyer, Dave Warner, Frank Zayas, and the Town of Normal ("Appellees"), by and through their attorneys, Ancel Glink, P.C., and pursuant to Illinois Supreme Court Rules 341(h)(6) and 375(a), hereby move this honorable Court for an order striking the Statement of Facts as presented in Plaintiff-Appellant's ("Appellant") opening appellate brief. Appellant's Statement of Facts fails to comply with the requirements of Illinois Supreme Court Rule 341(h)(6), in that it is replete with argument, comment, animadversion, and editorialization, it does not fairly present the facts, and many statements are without citation to the record. As such, it should be stricken. In support of this Motion, Appellees state as follows:

LEGAL STANDARD

Illinois Supreme Court Rule 341(h)(6)<sup>1</sup> governs the contents of the statement of facts presented in an appellant's opening appellate brief. Rule 341(h)(6) provides:

(h) Appellant's Brief. The appellant's brief shall contain the following parts in the order named: ... (6) Statement of Facts, which shall contain the facts necessary to an understanding of the case, stated accurately and fairly without argument or comment, and with appropriate reference to the pages of the record on appeal in the format as set forth in the Standards and Requirements for Electronic Filing the Record on Appeal.

Rule 375(a) provides that “[i]f after reasonable notice and an opportunity to respond, a party or an attorney for a party or parties is determined to have wilfully failed to comply with the appeal rules, appropriate sanctions may be imposed upon such a party or attorney for the failure to comply with these rules. Appropriate sanctions for violations of this section may include an order that ... any portion of a party's brief relating to that issue be stricken.”

ARGUMENT

The Statement of Facts (“SOF”) in Appellant's opening brief (“AOB”) fails to comply with the requirements of Rule 341(h)(6). Specifically, Appellant failed to present facts “stated accurately and fairly without argument or comment” and many without reference to the record. Rule 341(h)(6). As such, Appellant's SOF should be stricken pursuant to Rule 375(a).

A party may make, and this Court may grant, a motion to strike any portion of an appellant's appellate brief; specifically, a party may make, and this Court may grant, a motion to strike the statement of facts portion of an appellant's appellate brief when the statement of facts fails to comply with the requirements of Rule 341(h)(6). See, e.g., Artisan Design Build, Inc. v. Bilstrom, 397 Ill.App.3d 317, 321-22 (2nd Dist. 2009); Canel & Hale, Ltd. v. Tobin, 304 Ill.App.3d 906, 910-11 (1st Dist. 1999). For instance, in Canel & Hale, Ltd. v. Tobin, supra, the court found the defendants-appellees were “correct in objecting to plaintiff's statement of facts” and filing their motion to strike it. Canel, supra, 304 Ill.App.3d at 911. The court found plaintiff's statement of facts contained "argumentative remarks and comments." Ibid. But, because the "argumentative remarks and comments did not interfere with this court's review of the case," the court declined to strike the statement of facts entirely and "simply ... disregarded" them. Ibid. See also, Artisan Design, supra, 397 Ill.App.3d at 322 ("Much of the statement of facts is an argument justifying [defendants' actions], ... appear[ing] to be an effort to sway the court with matters not germane to the issues on appeal.")

Here, Appellant's SOF is replete with innuendos, argument, and comment, rather than simply facts as facts. For instance, Appellant argues that "Freesmeyer conducted an investigation to reach a predetermined result: Beaman did it." (AOB, at 3). In support of this "statement," Appellant cites his own AOB: "... Beaman did it. See infra, at 4-5, 10-14." (Ibid.) This kind of presentment of argument, rather than simply stated facts, occurs throughout Appellant's SOF, as for example on page 3 of the AOB alone: "The defendants misled the grand jury, hid a polygraph report inculcating a steroid-abusing drug dealer who beat women, manipulated driving trials to discredit Beaman's alibi, brushed aside exculpatory evidence, and refused to conduct a serious investigation of the viable suspects" (Ibid.); "It worked. Freesmeyer 'solved' the murder ... and testified as the prosecution's star witness ..." (Ibid.); "He walked out of the Lockmiller case with a sergeant's chevrons and a glowing recommendation from the lead prosecutor ..." (Ibid.); "Alan Beaman – slight, scrawny, and innocent – spent nearly 13 years in prison, while his friends completed their education, married their spouses, and raised their children" (no citation to the record) (Ibid.).

Appellant's argument continues throughout his SOF: "On Day One of the investigation, ..." (AOB, at 4); "The defendants decided to ignore every avenue but one – the murderer was an intimate partner" (Id., at 6); "They did not bother to find out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area ... or to interview all of the people Lockmiller had been in contact with in the days and hours prior to her death.” (Ibid.); “The defendants disregarded other potential suspects.” (no citation to record) (Ibid.); “As one example of the many potential suspects...” (Ibid.); “An even more likely suspect was John Murray ....” (Id., at 7).

Further, if one examines the cited pages in the appellate record, which purport to stand for Appellant’s “facts,” one can see that the material cited is not factual itself. For example, Appellant cites to the report of one of his retained expert witnesses, rather than deposition testimony or other factual evidence, to support certain “facts” in his SOF. Appellant states: “The defendants decided to ignore every avenue but one – the murderer was an intimate partner. A3242. They did not bother to find out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area, A.3243, 3246, ...” (AOB, at 6). The appellate record pages Appellant cites to, A3242, 3243, and 3246, are contained in the “Analysis and Conclusion” section of an expert witness report, dated August 17, 2015, prepared by Gregg O. McCrary with Behavioral Criminology International, and containing his opinions, for which he was retained to render by Appellant. (A3224-3251 generally; A3224, 3245, 3246). In this example, Appellant’s “facts” are not based on factual evidence at all, such as the deposition testimony of the officers themselves, but on the opinions of an expert retained by him.

Simply put, Appellant’s SOF reads like an argument, rather than a statement of simple facts without comment, argument, animadversion, or editorialization; Appellant’s SOF is replete with comment, argument, animadversion, and editorialization. And, in some cases, the “facts” Appellant presents are not supported by factual evidence; Appellant utilizes expert opinions as authority for his “facts.” As such, Appellant’s SOF does not comply with Rule 341(h)(6). See, e.g., Artisan Design, supra, 397 Ill.App.3d at 321-22; Canel, supra, 304 Ill.App.3d at 910-11. Thus, Appellant’s SOF should be stricken pursuant to Rule 375(a), for failing to comply with the requirements of Rule 341(h)(6).

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, Appellant's Statement of Facts in his Opening Brief should be stricken pursuant to Rule 375(a) for failing to comply with Rule 341(h)(6)'s requirements.

PLAINTIFF-APPELLANT’S RESPONSE TO MOTION TO STRIKE STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Court should deny Defendants’ motion to strike. Defendants do not meet the exacting standard for a motion to strike, which is warranted only when “rules violations [are] so flagrant as to hinder or preclude review.” Oakleaf of Ill. v. Oakleaf & Assocs., Inc., 173 Ill. App. 3d 637, 646 (1st Dist. 1988). Defendants do not even attempt to make that showing. A “statement of facts” that is “argumentative at times” is not a sufficient basis for a motion to strike. Id.

Each and every one of the isolated statements to which Defendants cite is accurate and supported by the record. Moreover, all of these statements also appeared in identical or materially identical form in Plaintiff’s brief to the Illinois Supreme Court. The Defendants did not move to strike that brief or raise any concern about its compliance with the Illinois Supreme Court Rules, and the Supreme Court accepted the brief without incident. In light of that reality, it can hardly be said that the brief “hinder[s] or preclude[s] review” by an appellate court. Id.

If any document before this Court should be stricken, it is Defendants’ brief. Defendants may complain about the tone and style of Plaintiff’s brief, but they fail to show any inaccuracy. Their own brief, in contrast, repeatedly misstates important matters of objective fact. At the end of the day, however, striking either side’s brief is not necessary. The Court should proceed directly to the merits because its independent review of the record will make it plain that Defendants’ brief is replete with factual errors and misstatements.

A. The Statements Cited by Defendants Do Not Warrant Striking Plaintiff’s Facts Section Because These Statements Are Both Accurate and Isolated.

Plaintiff’s statement of facts spans 19 pages and includes 157 citations to the record. Defendants move to strike the entire statement of facts, but they do not argue in their motion that any assertion is inaccurate or misleading. Instead, they object—as to tone and style—to a one-page introduction and summary to the statement of facts, in addition to three sentences and three phrases elsewhere in the brief.

Defendants do not come close to meeting the relevant standard—“violations so flagrant as to hinder or preclude review.” Oakleaf, 173 Ill. App. 3d at 646; see also Anderson Dundee 53 L.L.C. v. Terzakis, 363 Ill. App. 3d 145, 152 (1st Dist. 2005) (“[T]his court will not strike a party’s statement of facts unless it includes such flagrant improprieties that it hinders our review of the issues.”); Merrifield v. Ill. State Police Merit Bd., 294 Ill. App. 3d 520, 527 (4th Dist. 1998) (“Where violations of supreme court rules are not so flagrant as to hinder or preclude review, the striking of a brief in whole or in part may be unwarranted.”). Notably, none of the cases Defendants cite actually grants a motion to strike.

At most, Defendants have identified differing factual characterizations and disagree on matters of tone and style. These are insufficient grounds for a motion to strike. Kannewurf v. Johns, 260 Ill. App. 3d 66, 70 (5th Dist. 1994) (“The statements of fact are, for the most part, accurately matched with correct citations to the record. Of course, the parties’ interpretations of many of the same facts are diametrically opposed, but that is not unusual in a case such as this. Therefore, we deny plaintiffs’ motion to strike Rich’s brief.”); Schnuck Mkts., Inc. v. Soffer, 213 Ill. App. 3d 957, 983–84 (5th Dist. 1991) (“Without going into excessive detail, suffice it to say that we find that the defendants’ brief does not violate Rule 341(f). Both the plaintiffs’ and the defendants’ briefs set forth facts which are advantageous to each and omit facts which may be harmful to their respective cases. We decline to strike any portion of the defendants’ brief.”); Oakleaf, 173 Ill. App. 3d at 646 (“Oakleaf’s statement of facts, although argumentative at times, includes appropriate record references. It lacks rules violations so flagrant as to hinder or preclude review. Accordingly, the motion to strike Oakleaf’s brief is denied.”).

Statements in the Introduction and Summary

Defendants principally take issue with assertions in subsection A of the statement of facts. Subsection A is captioned “Introduction and Summary,” indicating that it provides an overview of the facts at a high level of generality, with greater specificity to follow in the subsequent sections. The statements in this introductory section are accurate and fully supported by the record.

1. “[Freesmeyer] walked out of the Lockmiller case with a sergeant’s chevrons and a glowing recommendation from the lead prosecutor...” This statement is accurate. Appendix 2971, which is cited, is the transcript page of the 1995 criminal trial in which Freesmeyer states that his “present rank” is “sergeant.” A.2971.<sup>1</sup> Appendix 3207, also cited, is a letter from the lead prosecutor to the Normal Chief of Police which mentions Freesmeyer’s “recent promotion.” The letter is fairly described as “glowing.” It states: “I would not be comfortable without expressing to you officially my great admiration for Tim, both as a person and a police officer. Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.”

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff’s Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 (excerpts from Supreme Court Opening Brief) at 3.

2. “Alan Beaman—slight, scrawny, and innocent—spent nearly 13 years in prison, while his friends completed their education, married their spouses, and raised their children.” There is not a citation for this statement—again, this is an introduction and overview—but it is correct and fully explained later and with full citation in the statement of facts. Page 4 states “Beaman was thin and small,” citing to Appendix 3221–3222, where Freesmeyer testifies “Alan’s appearance, he’s not a real big man. He’s maybe 120 pounds. Stands about 5’7”, 5’8 maybe.” Beaman’s factual innocence is non-controversial. Defendants have never disputed it in this litigation. Page 19 of the statement of facts cites the gubernatorial pardon at Appendix 3377, which states that the pardon is “based upon innocence as if no conviction.” The Appendix also contains, at page 340, Beaman’s Certificate of Innocence from the Circuit Court of McLean County, which states: “The Petitioner is innocent of the offenses charged in the indictment.” No one disputes that Beaman was convicted while in college and spent nearly thirteen years in prison, between the 1995 conviction and 2008 vacatur. Of course, these thirteen years were the period when many of peers graduated from college and started families.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 3.

3. "The defendants misled the grand jury, hid a polygraph report inculcating a steroid-abusing drug dealer who beat women, manipulated driving trials to discredit Beaman's alibi, brushed aside exculpatory evidence, and refused to conduct a serious investigation of the viable suspects." This is an overview and summary statement and is supported with an infra cite to pages 6–11 and 17–18 of the brief. Those pages, in turn, are replete with detail and meticulous citation to the record supporting each of these assertions. It would have been cumbersome and unhelpful to the reader to cite in support of the statement above every appendix page cited on pages 6–11 and 17–18. Therefore, the introduction uses infra cites that direct the reader to the pages of the brief that contain the relevant details and underlying citations.

A materially identical statement appeared in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 3.

4. "Aided by Defendants David Warner and Frank Zayas, Freesmeyer conducted an investigation to reach a predetermined result: Beaman did it."

Similar to the statement immediately above, this overview and summary statement is supported with an infra cite to pages 4–5 and 10–14, which contain extensive detail and supporting record citation.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 3.

5. "It worked. Freesmeyer 'solved' the murder of a college student in a small town and testified as the prosecution's star witness at trial."

The statement is accurate and supported by the record. Appendix 2971, which is cited, is the first page of Freesmeyer's lengthy and detailed trial testimony. As noted above, Freesmeyer indeed was credited at the time for solving the Lockmiller murder, see Appendix 3207 ("Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer.”)—but of course the murder was not really solved since everyone now understands that Beaman did not commit it.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff’s Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 3.

Remaining Statements

1. “On Day One of the investigation, Defendant Freesmeyer, who was to become the lead investigator in the case, selected Beaman as the primary suspect.” Br. 4. This statement accurately reflects Freesmeyer’s deposition testimony at Appendix 1576, which is cited in support of the statement:

Q. So on Saturday night [August 28, the day the body was discovered], Beaman was the primary suspect?

A. That would be a fair statement to say, yes.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff’s Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 4.

2. “The defendants decided to ignore every avenue but one—the murderer was an intimate partner.” Br. 6. This is the topic sentence for a paragraph regarding Defendants’ failure to investigate possibilities other than the theory that an intimate partner was the killer. Defendants do not contest the accuracy of the supporting factual assertions that follow—the Defendants did not inquire whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area or to attempt to interview all the people Lockmiller encountered on the final days and hours of her life. Id. (citing A.3243, 3246, 1650–51, 2584). The topic sentence is fully supported by its cite to Appendix 3242, a page of the Expert Report of Greg McCrary. Mr. McCrary investigated violent crimes (including over 1,000 murders) over 40 years, including 25 years as an FBI agent and Supervisory Special Agent at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Virginia. A.3224–25. On A.3242, Mr. McCrary states:

By immediately concluding that Ms. Lockmiller's murder was an act of intimate partner violence, they limited the universe of suspects to four: Stacy Gates, Michael Swain, John Murray and Alan Beaman. That error also meant that they shut down other avenues of investigation that reasonably trained detectives would have been expected to explore.

The statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 4.

3. "They did not bother to find out whether other burglaries or sexual assaults had been reported in the area, A.3243, 3246, or to interview all of the people Lockmiller had been in contact with in the days and hours prior to her death, A.1650–51, 2584." Defendants do not elaborate on why they consider this sentence problematic or dispute the accuracy of the citations regarding Defendants failure to pursue investigative avenues.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 6.

4. "The defendants disregarded other potential suspects." Br. 6. This is a topic sentence. The paragraph that follows describes particular potential suspects that the Defendants did not investigate and is replete with citations to the record that clearly support the phrase Defendants challenge. Defendants do not dispute that the topic sentence accurately reflects the record content cited in the paragraph that follows.

A materially identical statement appeared in Plaintiff's Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 6.

5. The phrase "[a]s one example of the many potential suspects" in the sentence, "As one example of the many potential suspects, Lockmiller flirted with and rejected several men on August 21, four days before the murder, when she drank at various bars." Br. 6–7. Defendants do not identify any inaccuracy in the phrase "[a]s one example of the many potential suspects" or dispute that there were many potential suspects. The paragraphs that follow describe potential suspects with extensive citation to the record.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff’s Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 6.

6. The phrase “an even more likely suspect was John Murray ....” Br. 7. This phrase is part of a topic sentence; the paragraphs that follow explain why Murray was a more viable suspect than Beaman, with extensive detail and citation to the record. Defendants’ motion does not identify any inaccuracy in the challenged phrase or the supporting sentences and citations that follow.

This statement appeared verbatim in Plaintiff’s Supreme Court brief. See Ex. 1 at 6.

B. Defendants’ Brief Is a Far Better Candidate For Striking Than Plaintiff’s Brief Because It Is Replete With Misstatements of Objective Fact.

In contrast to Plaintiff’s brief, to which Defendants object on the basis of tone and style, Defendants’ brief contains multiple misstatements of objective fact. Thus, if any document should be stricken as unhelpful to the Court, it is Defendants’ brief. False statements throughout that document undermine the very purpose of Rule 341(h)(6)—ensuring accuracy as to matters of objective fact. Defendants’ false affirmations of objectivity make these misstatements all the more striking: “Defendants offer here the balanced and objective description of the facts this Court deserves.” Def. Br. 4. What follows in Defendants’ brief is anything but balanced and objective.

Defendants’ misstatements are especially egregious because the case comes to the Court on a summary judgment posture with Plaintiff as the non-movant, meaning all inferences must be drawn in Beaman’s favor. At the end of the day, however, striking briefs is unnecessary in this case. The record is available to the Court, and it is obvious from the record that Defendants’ brief misstates important facts. Some examples follow:

1. “Beaman’s fingerprint was on the murder weapon, the cord of an alarm clock used to strangle Lockmiller.” Def. Br. 23. This statement is flatly untrue. Police did not find Beaman’s prints on the cord. A.3257 (Fingerprint examiner: “I found no suitable prints on the electrical cord.”). Investigators found Beaman’s prints only on the alarm clock console—where they also found prints from Swaine (a more recent boyfriend of the victim) and from an unidentified stranger. A.3264–3265.

This is a very serious inaccuracy because Beaman’s finger prints on the console were fully explained by the fact that he had spent nights with Lockmiller and used the alarm clock. A.876, 2967, 2969, 3253, 3266. In contrast, finding Beaman’s prints on the cord of the clock wrapped around Ms. Lockmiller’s would have been suspicious indeed.<sup>2</sup>

2. “Another witness, Jennifer Seig, told NPD detectives she believed Beaman threatened to kill Lockmiller and Swaine if he ever caught them in bed together.” Def. Br. 15.

Defendants fail to acknowledge that in the same interview they cite, Seig admitted she might have heard this supposed threat not in reality but “in a dream or something.” R.3126.

3. “Todd Heyse, the owner of 412 Main Street where Lockmiller lived and the murder occurred, told police after Beaman was charged that he saw two people fitting the description of Beaman and Lockmiller around the time of the murder, possibly on the exact day.” Def. Br. 25.

It is not at all clear that Heyse saw these people during the week of the murder. Heyse testified that he saw the individuals four or five days after he closed on a real estate transaction, but that transaction occurred three weeks before the murder. R.8812, 8818–19. Moreover, Heyse saw these people while driving past the apartment building on North Main Street, a busy thoroughfare, and testified that he could not “identify either one of them again if [he] saw them.” R.8802, 8809.

<sup>2</sup> Elsewhere in their brief, Defendants appear to acknowledge their own misstatement. Def. Br. 8 (stating that the fingerprints were on the console).

4. “Steinman told NPD detectives that Beaman called Lockmiller from Rockford to tell her that he loved her and missed her, but that he heard she had gone out with a guy.” Def. Br. at 18.

This is at best a half-truth: Defendants had Beaman’s phone records, which showed Steinman’s statement to be false. A.339 (phone records showing that in August of 1993, when Beaman was in Rockford, Lockmiller called Beaman repeatedly, he called her only once, and that call lasted 13.8 seconds). The statement is all the more misleading because the tumult between Beaman and Lockmiller was confined to the time when they were dating. Beaman was reported to be calm and over the relationship by the time he returned home to Rockford, in early August of 1993, three weeks before the murder. A.85–86; R.8739–40 (noting that, by this time, Beaman “seemed to me to be in an overall good mood and he had finally, he had finally gotten to the point of where he was no longer angry about anything. He sounded like he wanted to try to be just be [sic] friends with Jennifer again. The general thing I got was that he was in a good mood, I hadn’t seen in quite a while.”); R.8749 (noting that, by this time, “things were ironed out” between Lockmiller and Beaman, and Beaman “seemed ok.”).

5. “[The Murray polygraph report] was sent to Warner . . . and when he received the report he gave it to Daniels.” Def. Br. 21.

On the contrary, the federal district court found “sufficient evidence to support an . . . inference that [Warner] intentionally withheld the [polygraph report] from Souk.” Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, 827 (C.D. Ill. 2014), aff’d, 776 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 2015). The court noted that Warner, for “reasons unknown,” violated department policy that required him to give a copy of the report to Zayas. Id.; see also Br. at 9–10 (discussing the evidence that Warner concealed the polygraph). As the federal district court stated: “A jury could infer from the failure to follow policy and the conflicting testimony that there was intentional suppression of the evidence by Warner, the only Defendant shown by the record to have possessed the polygraph report.” Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d. at 827.

6. “Terrance McCann was the polygraph examiner who administered the test to Murray. McCann was unable to obtain a result because Murray could not follow McCann’s directions. McCann did not conclude Murray intentionally prevented a result to deceive the examiner.” Def. Br. 20

This statement contradicts the Supreme Court, which stated in 2008: “[T]he circumstances of the polygraph examination indicate that Doe intentionally avoided the test.” People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 76 (2008); see also id. at 67 (“The polygraph examiner testified that the failure to follow the instructions could have been an intentional avoidance tactic.”).

7. “Daniels and Hospelhorn came away from the Beaman interview believing Beaman’s conduct was highly suspicious.” Def. Br. 9

In truth, Hospelhorn testified that after the interview, he had “[n]o suspicions at all” that Beaman committed the murder:

Q. As a result of your interview with Beaman on August 28, the one you did with Daniels, did you and/or Daniels form any suspicion as to whether Beaman might be guilty of murdering Jennifer Lockmiller?

MR DiCIANNI: I’ll object to foundation as to Daniels.

THE WITNESS: No.

A.2583.

As these examples illustrate, Defendants’ brief misstates the record and is full of factual assertions that are not true. Should any document be stricken, Defendants’ brief is a far better candidate than Plaintiffs' brief. But the more straightforward course is to dispense with the issue of striking briefs and proceed to the merits.

C. If the Court Does Not Deny Defendants' Motion, Plaintiff Requests Leave to File an Amended Opening Brief with the Introduction and Summary Section Removed.

Defendants' principal quarrel is with the introduction and summary subsection on page three of Plaintiff's opening brief. If the Court does not simply deny Defendants' motion to strike on the merits, Plaintiff requests the Court's permission to submit an amended brief with this subsection removed.

CONCLUSION

The Court should deny Defendants' motion to strike Plaintiff's statement of facts.

Respectfully Submitted,

ALAN BEAMAN

JUSTICE KNECHT delivered the judgment of the court, with opinion.
Justices Steigmann and Harris concurred in the judgment and opinion.

OPINION

¶ 1 In 2008, the Supreme Court of Illinois overturned plaintiff’s conviction for the murder of his ex-girlfriend, Jennifer Lockmiller, upon concluding the State violated his right to due process when it failed to disclose material and exculpatory information about an alternative suspect. People v. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, 890 N.E.2d 500 (2008). In April 2014, plaintiff initiated this action, alleging defendants, Tim Freesmeyer, Dave Warner, and Frank Zayas, former officers in the Normal Police Department, acted maliciously in investigating him and in aiding in his prosecution. Plaintiff asserted claims of malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and conspiracy. Plaintiff requested damages from defendant, the Town of Normal, on theories of respondeat superior and indemnification.

¶ 2 In June 2016, the trial court, finding no genuine issue of material fact as to plaintiff’s claims of malicious prosecution, granted defendants’ motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed, arguing, in part, a reasonable jury could find in his favor on each of the elements of its malicious-prosecution claim. We affirmed, concluding the trial court properly found no genuine issue of material fact existed on the first element of malicious prosecution—the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendants.

¶ 3 In February 2019, the Supreme Court of Illinois reversed our decision. The court concluded our review of the aforementioned element was improperly limited. The court remanded, directing this court to determine “whether the defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in [plaintiff’s] prosecution.” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 47.

¶ 4 On remand, we have considered the “significant role” test as set forth in Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45, and affirm the summary judgment order.

¶ 5 I. BACKGROUND

¶ 6 Before summarizing the facts of this case, we note both sides of this dispute have hindered this court’s ability to verify the facts set forth in the briefs. The parties, defendants more so, repeatedly failed to provide specific cites to the record to support their claims, thereby asking this court to perform appellate counsels’ briefing duties. See Ill. S. Ct. R. 341(h)(6) (eff. May 25, 2018) (requiring the statement of facts contain “appropriate reference to the pages of the record on appeal”); see also Maun v. Department of Professional Regulation, 299 Ill. App. 3d 388, 399, 701

N.E.2d 791, 799 (1998) (“Strict adherence to the requirement of citing relevant pages of the record is necessary to expedite and facilitate the administration of justice.”). In the appellee brief, defendants routinely cited the first page of a deposition, instead of the page on which the support for the alleged fact may be found. By doing so, defendants ask this court to review hundreds of pages of deposition testimony to find the one or two pages containing specific facts in support of their defense. Both sides cited their statements of material facts filed in the trial court without providing citations to the appellate record for this court to verify those facts.

¶ 7 In addition, plaintiff’s statement of facts is rife with argument and conclusions in violation of Illinois Supreme Court Rule 341(h)(6) (eff. May 25, 2018) (“Statement of Facts *** shall contain the facts necessary to an understanding of the case, stated accurately and fairly without argument or comment ***.”). For example, headings in plaintiff’s statement of facts include “Freesmeyer Delivers the Indictment and Conviction,” “Defendants Ignore a Witness who Exonerates Beaman,” and “Warner Hides Evidence.”

¶ 8 In our attempt to summarize the evidence in this case, we rely primarily on the facts provided in the published cases on this matter. We also include facts that are readily verifiable, but we have not fulfilled appellate counsels’ duties by using judicial resources to search the voluminous record to find support for every alleged fact.

¶ 9 A. Lockmiller’s Murder and the Investigation

¶ 10 On August 28, 1993, the body of Lockmiller, a 21-year-old student at Illinois State University, was found in her Normal, Illinois, apartment. Lockmiller’s shirt was pulled up, exposing her breasts. Her shorts and underwear were down around one of her legs. The electrical cord of an alarm clock was around Lockmiller’s throat. A pair of scissors protruded from her chest.

A box fan had been placed over Lockmiller's face. A bag of trash, which may have been taken from a trash can, was found on the living room sofa. The kitchen sink was filled with dirty dishes. The book bags and purse found on a table appeared closed and undisturbed. The wallet contained $17.71 in cash. Both the air conditioner and television were on. The apartment showed no signs of forced entry. Lockmiller died from ligature strangulation with the cord of the alarm clock. The investigators found no one who had seen Lockmiller alive after her class ended at 11:50 a.m. on August 25, 1993.

¶ 11 A number of police officers from the Town of Normal Police Department (NPD) were involved in the investigation. These officers included defendants: Freesmeyer, a detective, Warner, a detective, and Zayas, a lieutenant. Early in the investigation, starting in October or November 1993, Freesmeyer served as the principal detective on the investigation. Warner's role included serving as an evidence custodian and investigating one of the suspects, Stacey Gates. Zayas supervised the detectives who worked on the investigation until he retired in November 1994. Other individuals involved in the investigation included Charles Reynard, the McLean County State's Attorney, and James Souk, assistant state's attorney. Souk acted as the lead prosecutor in plaintiff's criminal case.

¶ 12 Police officers focused the investigation on plaintiff early in the case. Lockmiller's body was found by her friend, Morgan Keefe (now Hartman). Hartman attempted to contact Lockmiller for several days. Hartman went to Lockmiller's apartment. She called the police upon finding her body. Hartman told the police she knew "who did it." Hartman reported Lockmiller was afraid of plaintiff. She heard Lockmiller "say over and over and over again that she was afraid" of him. Lockmiller also reported to Hartman that plaintiff had broken down her door and threatened suicide if she broke up with him. Hartman “was aware” plaintiff “was possessive.” Hartman stated Lockmiller usually kept her apartment tidy.

¶ 13 While investigating plaintiff, the officers learned plaintiff, a student at Illinois Wesleyan University, was residing with his parents in Rockford, Illinois, at the time of Lockmiller’s murder. Rockford is approximately two hours from Normal by car. Detectives learned plaintiff occasionally sang and played guitar and saxophone for his church youth group while home from college. He was scheduled to rehearse on Wednesday, August 25, 1993, for the performance the following Sunday. Plaintiff and the youth pastor arranged that time as plaintiff’s “parents were coming in.”

¶ 14 Officers garnered information regarding plaintiff’s and Lockmiller’s relationship. Plaintiff and Lockmiller began a tumultuous relationship in July 1992. The two broke up and rekindled the relationship 17 to 18 times. The relationship ended about one month before the murder. Detectives learned of a history of loud arguments. One argument ended when plaintiff drank nail polish remover. According to letters found in Lockmiller’s apartment after her murder, plaintiff wanted their relationship to be monogamous, but he suspected Lockmiller saw other men. In the letters, plaintiff expressed he loved her “more passionately than Romeo did Juliet, more hopelessly than Ophelia did Hamlet, more vengefully than Medea, Jason,” and stated, “Don’t worry, I won’t kill anybody, I don’t believe in that. I do unto others as I would have them unto me (from now on).” Shortly before her death, Lockmiller became involved with Michael Swaine, plaintiff’s friend and roommate.

¶ 15 Lockmiller’s apartment showed no sign of forced entry. The police investigated individuals Lockmiller knew. The police questioned Lockmiller’s current boyfriend and plaintiff’s roommate, Swaine, as well as former boyfriends, including plaintiff, Gates, and Larbi John Murray. Swaine had an alibi. On August 25, 1993, the date the State concluded Lockmiller was murdered, Swaine was working at a bookstore in Elmhurst, Illinois. Gates, who had moved to Peoria to be closer to Lockmiller, also had an alibi. Records from a Peoria school showed Gates was at work on August 25.

¶ 16 The NPD officers learned Murray was Lockmiller's drug dealer. Murray and Lockmiller had also been lovers. Murray was twice interviewed by police. Initially, Murray reported leaving town on August 24, 1993, a day before the murder. Murray's girlfriend, Debbie Mackoway, however, told police they did not leave town until the afternoon of August 25. Murray then amended his story and his version was consistent with Mackoway's report. Murray informed officers he was alone at home before 2 p.m. on August 25. Murray resided 1.5 miles from Lockmiller. Murray had a criminal history. He faced charges of drug possession with intent to deliver and of domestic violence for the abuse of Mackoway. According to Mackoway, Murray also began using steroids and behaved erratically. Both cocaine and steroids had been found in Murray's apartment. Murray agreed to submit to a polygraph examination. At the start of the examination, Murray failed to follow instructions. The examiner terminated the examination.

¶ 17 Investigators interviewed David Singley, Lockmiller's neighbor. Singley informed investigators he arrived home from class at 2 p.m. on August 25 and heard someone slam the door to Lockmiller's apartment. Singley stated he heard the stereo, the door open and close a second time, and footsteps. Singley also reported noticing, around 4:30 p.m., the stereo was off and the television had been turned on.

¶ 18 Lockmiller's neighbors who lived directly below Lockmiller told detectives they overheard fights between Lockmiller and a man who drove a silver Ford Escort. Plaintiff drove a silver/grey Ford Escort. The neighbors recalled the fights occurred in January or February 1993. John Revis, another individual interviewed by Freesmeyer, reported once ripping off plaintiff during a drug deal.

¶ 19 In an August 28, 1993, interview by Freesmeyer of Swaine, Swaine reported he and plaintiff were friends. They were roommates for an unspecified time. Lockmiller and Swaine started a relationship while Lockmiller and plaintiff “were going out.” Swaine reported plaintiff made two holes in Lockmiller’s apartment walls. Swaine also reported the first time plaintiff broke into Lockmiller’s apartment, he found Lockmiller “fooling around” with Murray. The second time occurred within two months of Lockmiller’s death. Swaine was at Lockmiller’s apartment. Plaintiff arrived and began screaming at Lockmiller. Swaine ran and hid in the bedroom closet. Swaine heard plaintiff scream, “I know you are in there.” Plaintiff broke through the door. On a different date, plaintiff searched Lockmiller’s trash, looking for Swaine’s used condoms.

¶ 20 The investigation recovered seven fingerprints from the alarm clock found at Lockmiller’s apartment. Two belonged to plaintiff, four to Swaine, and one remained unidentified.

¶ 21 As of August 29, 1993, one day after the discovery of the body, Souk concluded plaintiff was the only suspect, but other people could be potential suspects. According to Souk, he did not believe Murray had a motive to kill Lockmiller. While prosecuting plaintiff, Souk knew Murray had provided Lockmiller with narcotics and marijuana, and conflicting statements had been made about whether Lockmiller owed Murray money. Souk also knew Murray made a mistake regarding his alibi and corrected that mistake in a second interview. Souk did not find the mistake suspicious. At the time of the trial, Souk knew Murray began taking steroids in January

1994 and had begun acting erratically. Before that time, Murray had not been physically violent toward Mackoway.

¶ 22 In February 1994, Freesmeyer was involved in a consultation with the Chicago Police Department (CPD) regarding the investigation. As the NPD had limited experience in investigating homicides, the Normal chief of police suggested the consultation for suggestions on the investigation. A copy of the case report was sent to the CPD. Detectives from CPD later met with Freesmeyer and others. The CPD detectives' only suggestion was "to continue to try to talk to [plaintiff] as long as [they] could."

¶ 23 On May 16, 1994, a meeting was held to determine whether to arrest plaintiff for Lockmiller's murder. Those in attendance included Reynard, Souk, Freesmeyer, Zayas, Normal Chief of Police James Taylor, and Detective Tony Daniels. During the meeting, Reynard decided to charge plaintiff. Souk agreed. At his deposition, Daniels testified he suggested a list of investigative avenues to pursue before arresting plaintiff. Souk responded, "I think we've got our guy[,] *** we went as far as we can with this case." Souk stated they were going to go ahead and issue a warrant for plaintiff's arrest. Freesmeyer, in his deposition, testified no one at the hearing questioned the decision to arrest plaintiff. He had no memory of Daniels's suggestions. Plaintiff was arrested in May 1994.

¶ 24 B. Grand Jury Proceedings

¶ 25 In July 1994, proceedings on Lockmiller's murder were held before the grand jury. At the hearing, Souk conducted the questioning. Freesmeyer, as well as other witnesses, testified. During Freesmeyer's testimony, the following questioning occurred:

"Q. I want to go now to some alibi evidence. First as to Michael Swaine, before we get into his alibi, first let me ask you if your investigation revealed any conceivable motive that Michael Swaine might have had to kill Jennifer Lockmiller?

A. No, Michael was the present boyfriend. When we picked him up at the scene, extremely remorseful, crying and sobbing. We were able to find no motive whatsoever.

Q. *** [B]ut other than Mr. Beaman, were you able in the course of your investigation to locate any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller?

A. No, not necessarily.

Q. Perhaps the best thing is why don't you just summarize for us Mr. Swaine's alibi and how you were able to establish it?

A. In speaking with Mr. Swaine, I asked him where he was that week.”

¶ 26 Freesmeyer was questioned regarding whether his interviews of residents of the apartment building revealed anything helpful to the case. He answered they did not.

¶ 27 Souk also questioned Freesmeyer about the time trials he performed on the route from the Beaman residence in Rockford to Lockmiller's apartment and the routes he took from Bell Federal to the Beaman residence:

“A. However, considering the phone calls, if she would have left her mother's residence at 10:00 ***, she would have been home by 10:17. She could have made the calls at 10:37 and 10:39. Left the house and arrived back at Walmart at approximately 10:57 or 11:00 ***. Give her 10 minutes to go into three different departments at Walmart and check out. It would have been rushed, but it would be possible.

Q. And again, this was one of those rare occasions when you were driving the speed limit?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now did you also on two occasions do the same kind of timing from Bell Federal to the Beaman residence?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. On one of those occasions, did you basically drive it through town?

A. I drove the most direct route and I also drove what I thought to be the fastest route, the two most logical ways to get to the Beaman residence from Bell Federal.

Q. On both those occasions, did you drive the speed limit?

A. Yes. The trip through town, I drove the speed limit[,] and I drove it on a Wednesday afternoon at approximately 10:00 ***, so it would be very comparable to the time that Mr. Beaman would have driven that route.

Q. How long did that trip take going through town?

A. That trip took me 30 minutes. If he had left the bank at 11 minutes after 10:00, he'd [have] gotten home at 10:45. The calls were made at 10:37 and 10:39.

Q. When you drove it the other way, did you—from Bell Federal, if you go a couple miles south, do you get to this Route 20 going around the south side of town?

A. Yes, Bell Federal is on the corner of Newburg and Alpine. If you take Alpine straight south to 20 and around, that would be probably the quickest route to Mr. Beaman's residence, and that took me 25 minutes. So once again 25 added to the 10:11 would put me there at 10:36. The calls were at 10:37 and 10:39."

¶ 28

C. Motion in Limine

¶ 29

Before trial, the State filed a motion in limine to exclude evidence of Lockmiller's relationships with men other than plaintiff and Swaine. The trial court reserved ruling on the motion. Later, the State and plaintiff's defense counsel discussed Lockmiller's relationship with an individual identified as "John Doe," who is Murray. Souk told the court Doe had "nothing to do with the case." Souk had not disclosed to plaintiff's trial counsel Murray's criminal records, which would have exposed his drug and steroid use, the incidents of domestic violence, or the incomplete polygraph examination. Plaintiff's trial counsel had no specific evidence pointing to another individual who could have committed the offense. The trial court granted the motion in limine.

¶ 30

D. Plaintiff's Trial and Conviction

¶ 31

At trial, evidence established plaintiff, then a student at Illinois Wesleyan

University, used Lockmiller's alarm clock to wake for class. During the course of their relationship, plaintiff stayed the night at Lockmiller's up to four or five times a week.

¶ 32 Singley testified at trial. During the 1993 spring semester, Singley, on multiple occasions, heard plaintiff pound on Lockmiller's door late at night. He also reported hearing plaintiff and Lockmiller yell at each other.

¶ 33 Plaintiff testified, on an unspecified night that same spring, Lockmiller called him to end their relationship. Plaintiff went to Lockmiller's residence to retrieve his compact disc player. Upon arriving at the apartment, plaintiff observed "John Doe's" car in the parking lot. Plaintiff pounded on Lockmiller's apartment door. Lockmiller refused to let him enter her apartment. Plaintiff continued pounding on the door and began kicking it, causing the door to break. Plaintiff discovered Doe and Lockmiller inside the apartment. Plaintiff grabbed his compact disc player and left. He yelled while inside the apartment but made no physical contact with Doe or Lockmiller.

¶ 34 Evidence established another incident during which plaintiff forcefully broke Lockmiller's apartment door. In the summer of 1993, Lockmiller was in a relationship with Swaine. One night in July 1993, plaintiff suspected Swaine was at Lockmiller's apartment. He broke the apartment door by pounding and kicking it. Upon entering the apartment, plaintiff did not see Swaine. Plaintiff verbally confronted Lockmiller but made no physical contact. Plaintiff remained at the apartment for 30 to 45 minutes.

¶ 35 Plaintiff testified his night shift at his uncle's grocery store ended at 9 a.m. on August 25. Plaintiff drove home to retrieve some cash and a check. He drove to the bank to make a deposit. Plaintiff's trip to the bank was confirmed by a bank security videotape that showed plaintiff leaving the bank at 10:11 a.m. Plaintiff returned home and slept until 5 p.m.

¶ 36 Telephone records demonstrated two calls were made from the Beaman residence at 10:37 and 10:39 a.m. on August 25. The first call was to the plaintiff's church, the second to the church's director of music and youth ministries. Only two people could have made those calls: plaintiff and his mother, Carol Beaman. Plaintiff did not recall placing those calls but stated he could have done so. Carol denied making the calls. She testified she left the Beaman residence around 7 a.m. and drove to her mother's assisted-living facility. Carol took her mother to the clinic and returned to the facility around 10 a.m. Carol testified to having spent 15 to 20 minutes with her mother inside the facility before driving to the Walmart store across the street. A receipt shows Carol checked out at Walmart at 11:10 a.m. after having purchased copy paper, poster frames, blue jeans, and magazine holders. Before returning home, Carol drove to other stores. Her last stop was a grocery store, where she purchased perishable items. She checked out at 2:03 p.m. and headed home. Carol testified she was home by 2:16 p.m., but she had previously told officers she arrived home around 3 p.m. When Carol arrived home, she noticed plaintiff's car in the driveway. Carol awoke plaintiff for dinner at approximately 6 p.m.

¶ 37 Freesmeyer testified regarding road tests he performed to test plaintiff's opportunity to murder Lockmiller. According to Freesmeyer, the distance between plaintiff's bank and Lockmiller's apartment was 126.7 miles. Freesmeyer's test indicated plaintiff, having left his bank at 10:11 a.m., could have arrived at Lockmiller's apartment before noon if plaintiff drove 10 miles per hour over the speed limit. Freesmeyer further testified 139.7 miles separated the Beaman residence and Lockmiller's apartment. He averred plaintiff could have made that trip in just under two hours if he drove at a speed 10 miles per hour over the posted limit.

¶ 38 Freesmeyer performed a road test from plaintiff’s bank to the Beaman residence to see if it was possible to make the phone call from the Beaman residence at 10:37 a.m. He testified he drove through downtown Rockford, the “most direct route,” obeyed all speed limits, and concluded it took 31 minutes to make the trip. Freesmeyer concluded plaintiff would have arrived home at 10:42 a.m. Freesmeyer testified it took him 15 minutes to drive from the Beaman residence to the Walmart where Carol shopped on August 25. On cross-examination, Freesmeyer acknowledged plaintiff did not state he drove through downtown Rockford on August 25. Freesmeyer also agreed the route he took was through downtown Rockford and not on “the high speed bypass” around the city.

¶ 39 In rebuttal argument, the State argued all of the other possible suspects were excluded due to alibis: “Did we look at Mr. Swaine? You bet we did. Did we look at [Gates]? You bet we did. Did we look at a lot of people and interview a lot of witnesses? You bet we did. And guess who sits in the courtroom *** with the gap in his alibi still unclosed even after all this?”

¶ 40 On April 1, 1995, the jury found plaintiff guilty of first degree murder. He was sentenced to 50 years’ imprisonment. On direct appeal, a majority affirmed plaintiff’s conviction. People v. Beaman, No. 4-95-0396 (Ill. May 23, 1996) (unpublished order under Illinois Supreme Court Rule 23).

¶ 41 By letter dated April 17, 1995, Souk wrote to Normal Police Chief James Taylor, commending Freesmeyer for his work on the case. The letter stated as follows:

“I would be derelict in my duties if I did not write you a separate letter concerning Tim Freesmeyer’s performance in the Beaman case.

Rather than elaborate on the details, I will simply tell you that Tim's work on this case is the single finest effort by any police officer in any case with which I have been involved during 20 years as both a prosecutor and defense lawyer.

The effort is all the more remarkable considering his relative youth and inexperience. His recent promotion indicates you are already aware of his exceptional ability, but I would not be comfortable without expressing to you officially my great admiration for Tim, both as a person and a police officer. Beyond any question in my mind, this case would not have been won without Tim Freesmeyer."

¶ 42 E. Proceedings on Plaintiff's Petition for Postconviction Relief

¶ 43 In April 1997, plaintiff filed a petition for postconviction relief. Later, several amendments were made to the petition. In its final form, plaintiff alleged, in part, the State violated his right to due process by failing to disclose material information regarding Murray's viability as a suspect. An evidentiary hearing was held on plaintiff's petition.

¶ 44 At the evidentiary hearing on plaintiff's postconviction claims, Daniels testified he believed Murray was and continued to be a viable suspect. Murray was Lockmiller's former boyfriend, and according to Murray, the two were about to rekindle their romance. Daniels testified Murray provided Lockmiller with drugs and she owed him money. Murray lived a short distance from Lockmiller's apartment. Murray visited Lockmiller a few days before the murder but found her with Swaine. Daniels further testified Murray was asked to take a polygraph examination. The examination could not be completed because Murray was not cooperative. Murray was asked to complete a second polygraph examination, and he agreed. The examination, however, did not occur.

¶ 45 At the hearing, the polygraph examiner also testified. He opined the lack of cooperativeness could have been intentional.

¶ 46 The circuit court denied plaintiff postconviction relief. This court, with Justice Cook dissenting, affirmed the denial. People v. Beaman, 368 Ill. App. 3d 759, 772, 858 N.E.2d 78, 91 (2006).

¶ 47 In 2008, the Supreme Court of Illinois found the State violated plaintiff's constitutional right to due process of law when it failed to disclose the evidence related to Murray and reversed the circuit court order denying his postconviction petition. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 81-82. The Court summarized the undisclosed evidence as consisting of four points: "(1) [Murray] failed to complete the polygraph examination; (2) [Murray] was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to [plaintiff's] trial; (3) [Murray] had physically abused his girlfriend on numerous prior occasions; and (4) [Murray's] use of steroids had caused him to act erratically." Id. at 74. The court concluded the State's case against plaintiff "was not particularly strong" and "tenuous," supporting the admission by plaintiff "of the similarly probative alternative suspect evidence on" Murray. Id. at 77-78. The court had no "confidence in the verdict finding petitioner guilty of this crime given the tenuous nature of the circumstantial evidence against him, along with the nondisclosure of critical evidence that would have countered the State's argument that all other potential suspects had been eliminated from consideration." Id. at 81.

¶ 48 Plaintiff's conviction was vacated and remanded. The State declined to reprosecute plaintiff and dismissed the charges against him. Plaintiff was released from prison in June 2008 and the State of Illinois, in April 2013, certified his innocence. Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 776 F.3d 500, 504 (7th Cir. 2015). The Governor of Illinois pardoned plaintiff "based upon innocence as if no conviction."

¶ 49 F. Plaintiff's Federal Civil Suit

¶ 50 In January 2010, plaintiff filed a section 1983 complaint (42 U.S.C. § 1983 (2006)) against defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas, as well as against Souk, Reynard, and other detectives. Plaintiff alleged three federal claims: defendants acting individually and in conspiracy withheld exculpatory evidence in violation of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) (individual liability), defendants conspired to deprive plaintiff exculpatory evidence (conspiracy liability), and defendants failed to intervene to prevent violation of his rights. Beaman, 776 F.3d at 505. Plaintiff included state law claims for malicious prosecution, civil conspiracy, and intentional infliction of emotional distress against the Town of Normal. Id.

¶ 51 The claims against Souk and Reynard were dismissed based on absolute immunity or qualified immunity. Id. at 506. The claims against the other detectives, individuals who are not named defendants in this case, were dismissed after discovery revealed those detectives were not involved in the suppression of evidence. Id.

¶ 52 The district court granted summary judgment on the federal claims to the remaining defendants—Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas—and the Seventh Circuit affirmed. The court found insufficient evidence from which a jury could infer an agreement between the defendants to withhold the Murray evidence. Id. at 513. The Seventh Circuit concluded "[t]he defendants did not falsify any physical evidence or use any knowingly false testimony at trial.” Id. at 512. As to Freesmeyer, the Seventh Circuit discounted plaintiff’s argument Freesmeyer prepared a “deceptive” police report regarding the time trials. The court found “Freesmeyer did not lie about the speeds at which he drove, and he was subject to cross-examination at trial about the speeds and alternative routes.” Id. The court observed “[t]his is the type of behavior that will be present in every criminal prosecution—valid pursuit of a conviction.” Id. The court also found “the defendants are entitled to qualified immunity for their failure to turn over the Murray polygraph report to the prosecution and Beaman’s defense counsel.” Id. at 510. The court did so after framing the question as to whether inadmissible information inculcating another suspect could be Brady material. Id. The court observed “[i]t is clear that Beaman’s primary quarrel is with Souk. Souk possessed (most of) the Murray evidence, failed to turn it over, and told the court and jury that there were no alternative suspects.” Id. at 513. Neither the district court nor the Seventh Circuit addressed the state-law claims of malicious prosecution, intentional infliction of emotional distress, or conspiracy against the Town of Normal for lack of jurisdiction. Id. at 506.

¶ 53 G. Plaintiff’s State Civil Lawsuit

¶ 54 In April 2014, plaintiff filed this action against defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, Zayas, and the Town of Normal. The complaint contains five claims: (1) malicious prosecution, (2) intentional infliction of emotional distress, (3) civil conspiracy, (4) respondeat superior, and (5) indemnification. In his complaint, plaintiff asserted the three individual defendants played significant roles in his prosecution and wrongful conviction.

¶ 55 Plaintiff asserted Freesmeyer “advocated for, approved, and physically effected” his arrest. Plaintiff alleged Freesmeyer moved into an office in the state’s attorney’s office to work full-time on plaintiff's case and decided, on the first day of the investigation, plaintiff was "the primary suspect." Freesmeyer did so, according to plaintiff, even though the crime scene suggested the murderer was "a perpetrator of considerable size and power" while "plaintiff was thin and small" and Lockmiller's drug use and "behavior" pointed to a number of other possible suspects and "unsavory characters." Plaintiff identified Murray as the most significant suspect in that he was a drug dealer and Lockmiller's "sex partner" who used steroids and cocaine, beat women, and lied about his alibi.

¶ 56 Other evidence plaintiff pointed to includes allegations Freesmeyer had a "continued fixation on plaintiff despite [a] lack of evidence." Plaintiff argued the evidence Freesmeyer, and other detectives, did not investigate area burglaries or sexual assaults, did not interview individuals with whom Lockmiller had been in contact before her murder, and failed to listen to other detectives "who questioned their singular fixation." Plaintiff maintained Freesmeyer doctored the time trials to secure plaintiff's conviction, thereby "creat[ing] evidence" plaintiff did not make the calls from the Beaman residence by driving within the speed limit and using the downtown route and not the bypass route favored by Rockford locals. Freesmeyer further avoided telling the jury about his testing the bypass route and finding had plaintiff used the bypass route he could have made those calls. In contrast, when attempting to establish plaintiff could have made the trip to Normal, Freesmeyer drove over the speed limit. Plaintiff highlighted evidence Freesmeyer threatened the death penalty during an interview of plaintiff and Freesmeyer's repeated efforts to secretly tape inculpatory statements from him.

¶ 57 As to Warner, plaintiff alleged he was liable to plaintiff for damages as a result of burying a report regarding Murray's polygraph. The report of the incomplete polygraph was addressed to Warner. Warner averred he gave the report to Daniels, but Daniels had no memory of receiving it. The state's attorney's office did not receive a copy. According to the report, Murray denied strangling Lockmiller and denied knowing who did. The report, however, was inconclusive given Murray's failure to comply with specific directions:

“Throughout the course of this polygraph examination, the subject did not follow specific directions given to him which are necessary for the proper completion of a polygraph examination. After being advised several times to follow directions, the subject informed this examiner that he was not able to comply. Subsequently, the subject was dismissed from this laboratory.”

¶ 58 Defendants moved for summary judgment on plaintiff's claims. Defendants maintained there was no evidence establishing a genuine issue of material fact on four of the five elements of his malicious-prosecution claim. Defendants contended, as a result, they were entitled to judgment on the malicious-prosecution claim and the remaining claims, which plaintiff predicated on the contention he was maliciously prosecuted.

¶ 59 H. Summary Judgment Order

¶ 60 In June 2016, the trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment. After listing the elements for the claim of malicious prosecution, the court found the prosecutors who handled the case, not the defendant officers, decided to prosecute plaintiff. In support, the court highlighted Daniels's deposition testimony. The court pointed to Daniels's statement that, during the May 1994 meeting with investigating officers and lead prosecutors, Souk rejected Daniels's suggestions to investigate other avenues. Souk expressed the investigation was complete and an arrest warrant would be issued for plaintiff. The court explicitly found defendants “did not exert any unusual influence on the prosecutors which caused a malicious prosecution to take place against plaintiff.”

¶ 61 The trial court further found no genuine issue of material fact as to the remaining malicious-prosecution elements and to plaintiff’s claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress, conspiracy, respondeat superior, and indemnification.

¶ 62 I. Plaintiff’s Appeal of the Summary Judgment Order

¶ 63 Plaintiff appealed the order. In his appeal, plaintiff challenged the trial court’s order, maintaining the evidence showed a genuine issue of material fact to each of the elements of malicious prosecution. Plaintiff argued all of his claims were improperly dismissed.

¶ 64 In our opinion, we affirmed the order for summary judgment. We began our analysis by setting forth the elements of a malicious-prosecution claim in Illinois:

“Under Illinois law, a claim of malicious prosecution requires proof of each of the following elements: ‘(1) the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant[s]; (2) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) the presence of malice; and (5) damages resulting to the plaintiff.’ ” Beaman v. Freesmeyer, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 49 (quoting Swick v. Liautaud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 512, 662 N.E.2d 1238, 1242 (1996)).

¶ 65 We then considered whether, in viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff, defendants showed no genuine issue of material fact on the first element of that offense: “ ‘the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant[s].’ ” Id. ¶ 50 (quoting Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512). On that issue, plaintiff, in a little over four pages, asserted he sufficiently established the element by simply showing the defendants had “significant involvement” in the commencement or continuance of his prosecution. Plaintiff did not mention proximate cause, only (1) asserting the conviction would not have occurred but for the conduct of the defendant officers and (2) the officers, one of whom worked out of the office of the State’s Attorney, had significant roles in the prosecution. We questioned the approach of limiting consideration of the commencement element to only the significance of one’s role in instituting the prosecution. Id. ¶ 54.

¶ 66 Turning to defendants’ brief for guidance, we found defendants argued proof of the element required a causal link, like undue influence, on the prosecutor’s decision to commence suit. We disagreed the question should be limited to only instances of “undue influence.” Id. ¶ 55. Instead, to resolve the question of whether the commenced-or-continued element was sufficiently satisfied, we relied upon a recent decision by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Colbert v. City of Chicago, 851 F.3d 649 (7th Cir. 2017), which held the chain of causation in a malicious-prosecution action will be broken by a prosecutor’s indictment absent “ ‘an allegation of pressure or influence exerted by the police officers, or knowing misstatements by the officers to the prosecutor.’ ” ” Beaman, 2017 IL App (4th) 160527, ¶ 57 (quoting Colbert, 851 F.3d at 655, quoting Reed v. City of Chicago, 77 F.3d 1049, 1053 (7th Cir. 1996)). We analyzed the evidence presented and concluded no genuine issue of material fact existed on this element as there was no evidence showing the defendants pressured or influenced Souk’s decision to prosecute plaintiff and no evidence of knowing misstatements by the defendants to Souk. Id. ¶¶ 65, 69, 72. We, therefore, concluded the chain of causation was broken. We affirmed the trial court’s order. Id. ¶ 80. Plaintiff appealed.

¶ 67 J. Illinois Supreme Court’s Reversal

¶ 68 Before the Supreme Court of Illinois, the parties more fully addressed the issue of the proper considerations of the commencement-or-continuance element of malicious prosecution. In addition to the parties’ briefs, the court allowed the filing of multiple amici briefs by former state and federal prosecutors, police unions, and cities (Peoria and Chicago).

¶ 69 The court summarized three approaches in Illinois case law for analysis of this element: “significant role,” “advice and cooperation,” and “pressure, influence, or misstatement” tests. See Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶¶ 29-31. The court agreed with defendants that all steps require proof of causation and concluded “the relevant inquiry is whether the officer proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the criminal proceeding.” Id. ¶ 33. The court then articulated the “significant role” assessment should be used to ascertain proximate cause and defined it as follows:

“This significant role assessment necessarily includes those persons whose participation in the criminal case was so ‘active and positive’ to ‘amount to advice and co-operation’ [(Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143, 147 (1866))] or those persons who ‘improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution (52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)).”

Id. ¶ 45.

¶ 70 The supreme court remanded this case, ordering this court to “examine whether the defendants’ conduct or actions proximately caused the commencement or continuance of the original criminal proceeding by determining whether defendants played a significant role in [plaintiff’s] prosecution.” Id. ¶ 47.

¶ 71

II. ANALYSIS

¶ 72

A. Summary Judgment Standards

¶ 73 When considering a motion for summary judgment, the court’s role is to ascertain whether a genuine issue of material fact exists and not to resolve factual questions. Williams v. Manchester, 228 Ill. 2d 404, 417, 888 N.E.2d 1, 8 (2008). A court should grant such a motion only when the depositions, pleadings, affidavits, and admissions, viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, show both no genuine issue of material fact and the movant is, as a matter of law, entitled to judgment. Pontiac National Bank v. Vales, 2013 IL App (4th) 111088, ¶ 29, 993 N.E.2d 463 (citing 735 ILCS 5/2-1005(c) (West 2008)). Because summary judgment is a drastic means to resolve a case, a trial court should grant summary judgment only when the moving party’s right to judgment is clear and free from doubt. Vales, 2013 IL App (4th) 111088, ¶ 29. When reasonable persons can “ ‘draw divergent inferences from the undisputed material facts or where there is a dispute as to a material fact, summary judgment should be denied and the issue decided by the trier of fact.’ ” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 22 (quoting Espinoza v. Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Ry. Co., 165 Ill. 2d 107, 114, 649 N.E.2d 1323, 1326 (1995)). On appeal, we review summary judgment orders de novo. Rettig v. Heiser, 2013 IL App (4th) 120985, ¶ 30, 996 N.E.2d 1220.

B. Malicious Prosecution

¶ 75

As stated above, to establish a claim of malicious prosecution, a plaintiff must prove each of the following elements: “(1) the commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding by the defendant[s]; (2) the termination of the proceeding in favor of the plaintiff; (3) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding; (4) the presence of malice; and (5) damages resulting to the plaintiff.” Swick, 169 Ill. 2d at 512. The failure to prove one element prevents recovery on the claim. Id.

¶ 76

1. Probable Cause

¶ 77

The existence of probable cause is a complete defense to a claim of malicious prosecution, no matter the motive prompting the arrest. Ely v. National Super Markets, Inc., 149 Ill. App. 3d 752, 758, 500 N.E.2d 120, 125 (1986). Probable cause, for purposes of an action for malicious prosecution, is defined as a state of facts, in the prosecutor’s mind, that would lead a person of ordinary caution and prudence to believe or entertain an honest and strong suspicion the person arrested is guilty of the offense for which he was arrested. Frye v. O’Neill, 166 Ill. App. 3d 963, 975, 520 N.E.2d 1233, 1241 (1988); see also Fabiano v. City of Palos Hills, 336 Ill. App. 3d 635, 642, 784 N.E.2d 258, 266 (2002) (“Probable cause is a state of facts that would lead a person of ordinary care and prudence to believe or to entertain an honest and sound suspicion that the accused committed the offense charged.”). “Whether the relevant facts, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, constitute probable cause for instituting a criminal prosecution is a question of law which the court must determine.” Frye, 166 Ill. App. 3d at 976; see also Poris v. Lake Holiday Property Owners Ass’n, 2013 IL 113907, ¶ 63, 983 N.E.2d 993 (noting “the existence of probable cause is a question of law and only becomes a question of fact if the operative facts are in dispute”). In assessing whether probable cause exists, we examine the totality of the circumstances at the time of the arrest. Gauger v. Hendle, 2011 IL App (2d) 100316, ¶ 112, 954 N.E.2d 307, 329.

¶ 78 Defendants contend the existence of probable cause for plaintiff’s arrest is another meritorious basis to affirm the award of summary judgment. Defendants argue the totality of the circumstances show no genuine issue of material fact as to the existence of probable cause. Defendants point to plaintiff and Lockmiller’s tumultuous relationship, which included outbursts overheard by neighbors; Lockmiller’s expressed fear of plaintiff; plaintiff’s love letters and threats of suicide; plaintiff’s behavior in following Swaine and kicking down Lockmiller’s door; the existence of two of plaintiff’s fingerprints on the murder weapon; a plastic garbage bag lying on the couch in the living room, a circumstance reminiscent of the time plaintiff searched the trash for used condoms; the lack of signs of a forced entry; the fact Lockmiller began a relationship with Swaine, plaintiff’s roommate; and the timeline, albeit narrow, indicating plaintiff had time to murder Lockmiller and return to Rockford.

¶ 79 Plaintiff concedes the parties “agree on some of the facts” but contends the proper inferences to be drawn from those facts must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmovant. We note plaintiff does not dispute defendants’ assertion of facts from plaintiff’s mother’s testimony, testimony that narrowed the window of the time when he could have committed the crime, were not known until after the case was turned over to prosecutors.

¶ 80 Plaintiff argues, however, a reasonable juror could find probable cause wanting based on the divergent inferences that could be drawn from them. Plaintiff lists the following reasons in support: (1) no probative physical evidence against plaintiff exists; (2) no one could place plaintiff in town when the murder occurred; (3) plaintiff maintained his innocence during the investigation, which included “overhears”; (4) any number of men could have committed the crime; (5) Singley’s statement indicates the murder occurred after 2 p.m., eliminating any possibility plaintiff murdered Lockmiller; (6) plaintiff was in Rockford, 130 miles from Bloomington, at 10:11 a.m. on the morning of the murder; (7) the crime scene indicated the killer was a stranger, as the trash bag having been pulled from the trash can indicates a burglar and a larger and more powerful man; (8) the evidence against Murray was stronger, as Murray lived near Lockmiller, had a history of domestic violence, and was a drug dealer to whom Lockmiller owed money; (9) the fingerprint evidence was weak, as plaintiff had stayed overnight at Lockmiller’s apartment regularly when they were dating and he used the alarm clock; (10) the love letters were old, and plaintiff ended the relationship; (11) plaintiff did not return the many phone calls Lockmiller made to him before the murder; (12) the timeline was literally impossible; (13) the incidents of violence, e.g., kicking down the door and punching walls, were not inflicted on people; (14) the evidence of the fan on Lockmiller’s head was indicative of a burglary; and (15) the use of scissors for the murder indicates the killer did not know Lockmiller.

¶ 81 We acknowledge plaintiff has an explanation for each fact, but our review of probable cause focuses not on individual facts but on the totality of the circumstances. Viewing the totality of the circumstances, and doing so in the light most favorable to plaintiff, we find no genuine issue of material fact on the existence of probable cause. The facts are such that, in the prosecutor’s mind, a person of ordinary caution and prudence would be lead to believe or entertain an honest and strong suspicion plaintiff was guilty. Summary judgment for defendants was proper.

¶ 82 In addition to this analysis of the points raised by plaintiff, we also conclude plaintiff could never successfully meet his burden of showing probable cause did not exist. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict at his trial for first degree murder. The jury convicted him. This court affirmed plaintiff's conviction and rejected his claim the State's evidence was not sufficient to support his conviction. No court, in the multiple reviews of his convictions, has ever deemed the evidence against him insufficient to sustain his conviction—quite the opposite.

¶ 83 In Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 56, the supreme court reversed plaintiff's conviction on the sole ground he was entitled to a new trial due to a Brady violation but added:

“As a final matter, we note that on direct appeal the appellate court held the evidence was sufficient to convict petitioner of this offense. Petitioner does not raise any claim based on the sufficiency of the evidence in this court. Accordingly, there is no double jeopardy impediment to a new trial.” Id. at 82.

¶ 84 2. Commencement or Continuance Element

¶ 85 To be sure we have fully complied with the remand from the supreme court, we choose to address plaintiff's additional arguments despite our conclusion plaintiff cannot show an absence of probable cause. Our interpretation of the court's decision in Beaman is that to ascertain whether the defendants commenced or continued an original criminal or judicial proceeding against plaintiff, we must consider whether the role of defendants was significant. The court states persons whose roles are significant include those “whose participation in the criminal case was so active and positive to amount to advice and co-operation [citation] or those persons who improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.” (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 45.

¶ 86 The parties dispute the manner by which these considerations must be undertaken. Defendants contend that however one characterizes the officers’ conduct, a plaintiff must overcome the presumption of the prosecutor’s independent judgment before one can establish a person proximately caused malicious prosecution. In support, defendants quote the court’s language directly preceding the paragraph in which the court set forth the significant-role assessment:

“ ‘Liability thus depends on whether the defendant was actively instrumental in causing the prosecution, and the presumption of prosecutorial independence can be overcome by showing that the defendant improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.’ ” Id. ¶ 44 (quoting 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)).

¶ 87 Plaintiff contends such an interpretation of Beaman would, in effect, be an improper attempt by this court to reverse the supreme court’s decision. Plaintiff contends the supreme court rejected the conclusion the prosecutor’s decision could insulate defendants when it reversed our decision to affirm summary judgment upon finding a plaintiff may establish the commencement-and-continuance element by showing the officer pressured or exerted influence on the prosecutor's decision or made knowing misstatements to the prosecutor. Relying on that holding, plaintiff argues all he must show is a rational juror could find the police officers “ ‘concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.’ ” Id. ¶ 45 (quoting 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)). Plaintiff then maintains “significant role,” and thus proximate cause, is satisfied with proof of bad-faith conduct or concealed exculpatory evidence.

¶ 88 We do not agree with plaintiff that to accept defendant's contentions regarding prosecutorial independence would be an attempt by this court to reverse the holding of Beaman. The supreme court's holding in Beaman is that our review of defendants' conduct was too narrow, finding error in the decision to focus on whether the officers' pressured or unduly influenced the prosecutor or whether the officers made false representations. The supreme court held the standard employed failed to acknowledge a person may be liable for malicious prosecution even if that person did not “actively deceive prosecutors.” Id. ¶ 43. The Beaman court did not hold this court erred by examining whether the officers' conduct proximately caused the decision to prosecute plaintiff.

¶ 89 Our review of Beaman establishes proximate cause is not established absent proof of conduct that overcomes the presumption of prosecutorial independence. It is not enough for a plaintiff seeking relief for malicious prosecution to establish an officer acted in bad faith or performed a wrongful act. That plaintiff must still establish legal causation. Beaman says as much. As we stated above, Beaman defines when a person falls within the “significant role” standard:

“This significant[-]role assessment necessarily includes those persons whose participation in the criminal case was so active and positive to amount to advice and co-operation [citation] or those persons who improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution (52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018)).” (Internal quotation marks omitted.) Id. ¶ 45.

In the paragraph directly preceding this pronouncement, the court cites the same section of Malicious Prosecution and states the following:

“ ‘Liability thus depends on whether the defendant was actively instrumental in causing the prosecution, and the presumption of prosecutorial independence can be overcome by showing that the defendant improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution.’ 52 Am. Jur. 2d Malicious Prosecution § 88 (2018).”
Id. ¶ 44.

¶ 90 Because the supreme court used the same language from the same source it cited a paragraph earlier, it is clear the supreme court plainly intended proximate cause cannot be established absent proof the wrongful or bad-faith conduct overcame prosecutorial independence. A prosecutor's decision to commence or continue suit breaks the causal chain, absent some conduct, as defined in the significant-role assessment, on behalf of an officer.

¶ 91 Plaintiff next argues a reasonable juror could find defendants played a significant role in the commencement or continuation of his prosecution as the participation in the criminal case was so "active and positive" to amount to advice and cooperation. Plaintiff emphasizes that in the meeting in which all of the defendants reached a "consensus" with Reynard and Souk no doubt was expressed in arresting plaintiff, and no one objected to the arrest. Plaintiff further points to the multiple occasions, which "could have" been as many as 50, during which Souk and Freesmeyer discussed the investigation.

¶ 92 This test is cited by the Beaman court as part of the significant-role, proximate-cause assessment. The source of the advice-and-cooperation test is an 1866 case, Gilbert v. Emmons, 42 Ill. 143 (1866), involving private citizens. In Gilbert, the plaintiff sued defendants Palmer and Gilbert, who were partners in a firm from which money had been stolen. Id. at 146. The warrant that was issued was made by Palmer. Id. The court reasoned Gilbert would be equally responsible as Palmer if he advised the arrest—if he directly participated in causing the arrest or advised the arrest be made. Id. Gilbert's consent to the arrest was insufficient unless it was "so active and positive a character as to amount to advice and co-operation." Id. at 147.

¶ 93 We find consideration of the test espoused in Gilbert does not establish the officers proximately caused plaintiff's prosecution. As plaintiff asserts in his reply brief filed in the supreme court, Gilbert "has never applied the test to a police officer (or to any defendant since Gilbert)." For good reason, as the Beaman court recognizes "prosecutors ordinarily rely on police and other agencies to investigate criminal acts.” Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 43 (citing People v. Ringland, 2017 IL 119484, ¶ 24, 89 N.E.3d 735 (also observing state’s attorneys defer to the investigative duties of the police)). Unlike in relationships between private citizens and prosecutors and private citizens and police (e.g., Gilbert), the relationship between police and prosecutors on investigative matters routinely involve “advice and cooperation.” It would be contrary to public policy and incongruous to ask officers and prosecutors to cooperate and work together and yet take officers to trial for doing just that.

¶ 94 We turn to the remaining assessments to ascertain whether a reasonable juror could find defendants, individually, “improperly exerted pressure on the prosecutor, knowingly provided misinformation to him or her, concealed exculpatory evidence, or otherwise engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct instrumental in the initiation of the prosecution” and whether such conduct is the proximate cause of the commencement or continuation of plaintiff’s prosecution.

¶ 95 a. Defendant Freesmeyer

¶ 96 In asserting sufficient evidence exists for a jury question on the “commenced or continued” element in his claim against Freesmeyer, plaintiff contends Freesmeyer targeted plaintiff since “Day One,” led a biased investigation, lied to the grand jury, doctored time trials, omitted exculpatory evidence from his police reports, threatened plaintiff with the death penalty, moved into the prosecutor’s office, and gave misleading trial testimony. Plaintiff contends these actions by Freesmeyer could lead a reasonable juror to find Freesmeyer commenced or continued his prosecution.

¶ 97 We further disagree with plaintiff’s statement a reasonable juror could find Freesmeyer lied to the grand jury about his interview with Singley. Plaintiff contends Freesmeyer, ignoring Singley's statements, told the grand jury no helpful information had been learned from Lockmiller's neighbors during the investigation when Singley's interview helped rule out plaintiff as a suspect. Freesmeyer's statement is a conclusion he did not find the information helpful:

“Q. Without going into individual details, were the other residents of the apartment building shortly after the discovery of the body, in the next few days, questioned extensively?”

A. Yes. ***.

Q. Would it be a fair summary of those interviews that all of them produced no eyewitnesses to the crime and no information that turned out [to] be particularly helpful in the investigation?

A. That's correct.”

Testimony from plaintiff's trial shows Freesmeyer identified a reason he “discount[ed] Singley's observations as being inaccurate:

“Well, first of all, nobody could pick out Mr. Swaine's vehicle from the photos we showed them. Second of all, Mr. Singley stated he heard the door, the same door open and close on Friday as he did on Wednesday, and everybody on the team was in agreement that Ms. Lockmiller was deceased long before Friday. And also he stated he saw Swaine's vehicle there on Wednesday, and I'd already spoken with Ms. Betteridge from Elmhurst. She stated that Mr. Swaine was at her side until 3:15 that day. There was absolutely no way that that car could have been in Normal on Wednesday.”

¶ 98 First, despite the repeated references to a “biased investigation” in plaintiff’s appellant brief and the former prosecutors’ amicus brief, no language in the supreme court’s Beaman decision supports the expansion of the malicious-prosecution torts to acts of “bias.” As the Beaman court acknowledged, because public policy favors the exposure of crime, malicious-prosecution actions are disfavored. Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 24. To expand the tort to allow actions against “biased” private citizens and police officers would contravene the aforementioned public policy. We will not expand the tort to include “bias.”

¶ 99 We note “bias” does not equate to “bad faith” conduct. Bias is defined as “an inclination of temperament or outlook” and “a personal and sometimes unreasoned judgment.” Merriam-Webster Online Dictionary, <https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/bias> (last visited Dec. 9, 2019) [<https://perma.cc/Q6JX-9E9L>]. Black’s Law Dictionary defines “bad faith” as follows:

“The opposite of ‘good faith,’ generally implying or involving actual or constructive fraud, or a design to mislead or deceive another, or a neglect or refusal to fulfill some duty or some contractual obligation, not prompted by an honest mistake as to one’s rights or duties, but by some interested or sinister motive. Term ‘bad faith’ is not simply bad judgment or negligence but rather it implies the conscious doing of a wrong because of dishonest purpose or moral obliquity; it is different from the negative idea of negligence in that it contemplates a state of mind affirmatively operating with furtive design or ill will.” Black’s Law Dictionary

139 (6th ed. 1990).

Bias will be actionable only if it culminates into conduct, such as bad-faith conduct, that satisfies the elements of a malicious-prosecution claim.

¶ 100 Turning to the assessments set forth in Beaman, we find there are no facts from which a reasonable juror could infer Freesmeyer pressured or exerted influence on Souk's decision to prosecute plaintiff. The evidence shows Souk believed plaintiff was the "only" or primary suspect within one day of the discovery of decedent's body. The evidence shows the prosecutors, Reynard and Souk, made the decision to prosecute plaintiff. No witness testimony contradicts this conclusion. As the trial court concluded, testimony of Daniels shows Souk, during the May 1994 meeting, refused to consider additional evidence and decided it was time to prosecute plaintiff. Plaintiff contends it was error to focus on Daniels's statement. Plaintiff points to Freesmeyer's deposition testimony in which he did not recall anyone expressing doubt in arresting plaintiff, and contends, taking the evidence in the light most favorable to plaintiff, we must accept Freesmeyer's account. Even accepting Freesmeyer's account on whether Daniels objected to the arrest of plaintiff or not, no evidence suggests anyone other than the prosecutor made the decision to prosecute plaintiff and then did so.

¶ 101 We turn to the question of whether a reasonable juror could find Freesmeyer provided false information to Souk or Reynard to influence the commencement or continuation of plaintiff's prosecution. Plaintiff identifies two types of evidence that were allegedly fabricated: the time trials and Freesmeyer's testimony before the grand jury. This evidence, however, does not support plaintiff's conclusion the element is satisfied. Initially, there is no proof in the record Freesmeyer tainted or falsely reported the time trials. Indeed, the Seventh Circuit examined similar allegations against Freesmeyer and found “Freesmeyer did not lie ***.” Beaman, 776 F.3d at 512. Similar to the Seventh Circuit’s findings, we find Freesmeyer’s efforts were to show plaintiff’s conduct could have fit within the State’s theory of the case. “This is the type of behavior that will be present in every criminal prosecution—valid pursuit of a conviction.” Id.

¶ 102 On remand, plaintiff contends our conclusion regarding Freesmeyer’s time-trial testimony is incorrect as it ignores the fact Freesmeyer did not disclose in his reports the fact he performed a time trial that had a result favorable to plaintiff. Specifically, plaintiff emphasizes the results from all but one test appear in his reports, implying Freesmeyer concealed the result that would have shown plaintiff had time to leave Bell Federal, use the bypass route around Rockford, and be home in time to make the 10:37 a.m. and 10:39 a.m. calls.

¶ 103 There is good reason this court did not address this nondisclosure in Freesmeyer’s reports—plaintiff did not raise this argument in the commencement-or-continuation argument section in his initial brief before this court. Plaintiff, in one sentence in his original statement of facts, reported “Freesmeyer proceeded to omit mention of that trial from his police report and avoided telling the jury that fact during his testimony at trial.” However, no reasonable juror could find this nondisclosure is the proximate cause of the commencement or continuation of plaintiff’s prosecution. The undisputed facts, and any reasonable inference therefrom, show the presumption of prosecutorial independence (Beaman, 2019 IL 122654, ¶ 44) cannot be overcome by this conduct. Souk, who made the decision to prosecute, knew this fact. Freesmeyer disclosed it before the grand jury after Souk questioned him about the bypass route:

“Q. Now did you also on two occasions do the same kind of timing from Bell Federal to the Beaman residence?”

A. Yes, I did.

Q. On one of those occasions, did you basically drive it through town?

A. I drove the most direct route and I also drove what I thought to be the fastest route, the two most logical ways to get to the Beaman residence from Bell Federal.

Q. On both those occasions, did you drive the speed limit?

A. Yes. The trip through town, I drove the speed limit[,] and I drove it on a Wednesday afternoon at approximately 10:00 ***, so it would be very comparable to the time that Mr. Beaman would have driven that route.

Q. How long did that trip take going through town?

A. That trip took me 30 minutes. If he had left the bank at 11 minutes after 10:00, he'd [have] gotten home at 10:45. The calls were made at 10:37 and 10:39.

Q. When you drove it the other way, did you—from Bell Federal, if you go a couple miles south, do you get to this Route 20 going around the south side of town?

A. Yes, Bell Federal is on the corner of Newburg and Alpine. If you take Alpine straight south to 20 and around, that would be probably the quickest route to Mr. Beaman's residence, and that took me 25 minutes. So once again 25 added to the 10:11 would put me there at 10:36. The calls were at 10:37 and 10:39.”

¶ 104 Freesmeyer did not conceal this information from Souk. The failure to include the information in the police report could not have proximately caused or continued Souk’s decision to prosecute. In addition, we note there is no evidence Freesmeyer avoided telling the jury of this fact at plaintiff’s trial. Freesmeyer was questioned and cross-examined about the time trials. He did not lie. He was not asked the right questions. Indeed, as counsel noted during defendant’s appeal from the denial of his postconviction petition, “[b]ecause drive times were ‘not really’ the focus of his defense, defense counsel stated he conducted ‘minimal cross-examination’ of Freesmeyer with respect to drive times between the bank and the Beaman residence.” Beaman, 368 Ill. App. 3d at 771, rev’d, 229 Ill. 2d 56.

¶ 105 We further find no reasonable juror could find Freesmeyer lied by, as plaintiff states in his brief, telling the jury he was unable “to locate any other person anywhere who had any conceivable motive to kill Jennifer Lockmiller.” Freesmeyer did not say those words. In fact, he qualified his answer, “No, not necessarily.” Souk, who was questioning Freesmeyer at the time, guided the testimony and did not ask Freesmeyer what he meant by “not necessarily.” Instead, Souk began questioning Freesmeyer about another suspect, Swaine. Souk did not ask Freesmeyer an open question. Souk did not ask about Murray.

¶ 106 Plaintiff points to no other wrongful or bad-faith conduct by Freesmeyer. We affirm the order granting summary judgment to Freesmeyer as there are no disputed facts, or reasonable inferences therefrom, that may establish Freesmeyer is proximately liable for the commencement or continuation of plaintiff’s prosecution.

¶ 107 b. Detective Warner

¶ 108           Regarding Warner, plaintiff contends a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether Warner played a significant role in commencing or continuing the prosecution of him when he buried the Murray polygraph report, a report he asserts both the Northern District of Illinois and the Supreme Court of Illinois found to be “material and exculpatory.” In his role in the investigation, Warner was to ensure Zayas received a copy of the report, submit the report for record keeping, and disseminate copies to the investigators working on the case. Plaintiff’s contention the evidence is sufficient to create a genuine issue of material fact on the commenced or continued element is predicated on the fact Warner’s role was significant and the record was material to the case.

¶ 109           We find the evidence does not create a genuine issue of material fact on the question of whether Warner commenced or continued the prosecution as a result of pressure on the prosecutor or the provision of false information. There is no evidence from which a jury could reasonably infer Warner encouraged or exerted pressure on Souk to prosecute. There is also no evidence from which a jury could reasonably infer Warner knowingly provided Souk false information.

¶ 110           However, there is a question of genuine issue of material fact on whether Warner intentionally concealed the incomplete polygraph report from prosecutors. A jury could conclude the failure to turn over the report to the prosecutor was a negligent mistake. Or a jury could conclude Warner, who undisputedly had the polygraph report in his possession, intentionally withheld it. Beaman v. Souk, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, 827 (C.D. Ill. 2014). Given these divergent inferences, a reasonable jury could find Warner concealed evidence from the prosecutor.

¶ 111           That determination, however, does not end the commencement-or-continuance inquiry—we must consider whether a genuine issue of material fact exists on the question of whether, interpreting the facts in the light most favorable to plaintiff, Warner’s suppression of the incomplete polygraph was the proximate cause of the commencement or continuation of the prosecution. Before undertaking this analysis, we note consideration of the incomplete polygraph report by the supreme court in Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d 56, and the federal district court in Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d 805, was undertaken to review the nondisclosure of that result to plaintiff. In those cases, in addition to the incomplete polygraph examination, it is clear the prosecutor or State did not reveal to plaintiff the following: (1) Murray “was charged with domestic battery and possession of marijuana with intent to deliver prior to [plaintiff’s] trial”; (2) Murray “physically abused his girlfriend on numerous prior occasions”; (3) Murray used steroids, causing him to behave erratically; and (4) the prosecution evaluated Murray as a potential suspect. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 67, 74. Here, except for the incomplete polygraph examination, the prosecutor was already aware of these facts. We consider the effect on the nondisclosure of the incomplete report alone on the prosecutor.

¶ 112 Plaintiff argues the polygraph report was exculpatory and material and a reasonable juror could find the disclosure of the report would have changed Souk’s opinion on prosecuting plaintiff. In support, plaintiff relies on language from the federal district court’s decision in Beaman.

¶ 113 We acknowledge the federal district court, for the purposes of analyzing plaintiff’s claim Warner committed a Brady violation by not turning over exculpatory evidence to the prosecutor, found “evidence relating to Murray” “exculpatory” in that “it inculpatates someone else.” Beaman, 7 F. Supp. 3d at 823. However, what is not clear is if the district court would have done so if the polygraph report stood alone. In the very next sentence after the federal district court found all Murray evidence “exculpatory,” the court refers to such evidence as “not strong evidence,” but “taken together, Murray’s erratic behavior from steroids, history of domestic assault including elbowing his girlfriend in the chest, and possible evasion during the polygraph *** suggest he could have been the culprit.” (Emphasis added.) Id. Moreover, in finding the evidence of the polygraph report material, the district court found it material only when considered with the other information related to Murray:

“Armed with Murray’s documented drug abuse, domestic assault with possibly similar patterns, and erratic behavior from steroids, as well as a polygraph that Murray did not complete and the plausible inference that it was an intentional evasion, the evidence pointing to Murray may well have overcome the showing required for the trial judge to allow Plaintiff to argue another culprit, namely Murray, committed the murder.” (Emphasis added.) Id. at 825.

Plaintiff cites language appearing in the case as proof the district court found the polygraph report standing alone to be material and exculpatory: “Plaintiff has provided sufficient evidence of a violation of his constitutional rights for the failure to disclose the Murray polygraph to the prosecution. *** Plaintiff has shown facts that make out a violation of his due[-]process right to the disclosure of material exculpatory evidence.” Id. at 830. We have reread the case. The summary provided by the district court follows analysis of the polygraph report only in conjunction with the other Murray evidence. See id. at 823. At no point in its analysis did the district court analyze the polygraph report separate and apart from the other Murray evidence in deciding it to be exculpatory and material.

¶ 114 Similarly, the Illinois Supreme Court did not evaluate the polygraph report separate from the other Warner evidence. The Illinois Supreme Court plainly found the failure to disclose all information related to Warner material, which included the incomplete polygraph examination, the domestic-battery and drug charges, the prior physical abuse of his girlfriend, and his use of steroids and erratic behavior. Beaman, 229 Ill. 2d at 58-59, 74-75.

¶ 115 The undisputed facts of this case show the prosecution already knew Murray was a suspect and a potential liar when the decision was made to commence and continue the case. During the prosecution, Souk knew Murray and Lockmiller had been involved sexually. Souk knew Murray made two differing statements about the time he left town, meaning Murray potentially lied and Murray was in town and had no alibi when Lockmiller was murdered. Souk knew Murray had been charged with domestic violence, and there was evidence Murray physically abused his girlfriend multiple times. Souk knew of Murray's steroid abuse. Souk knew Murray had been charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver. He knew Murray was Lockmiller's drug dealer and Lockmiller owed him money. Souk was informed of Murray's character and Murray's opportunity to murder Lockmiller.

¶ 116 According to the undisputed facts, the polygraph report adds little if anything to the prosecution's existing knowledge of Murray. The incomplete report does not establish a motive to murder Lockmiller or establish Murray to be the killer. The polygraph report, standing alone, indicates only that the test was incomplete due to Murray's failure to follow instructions or, at best, with an inference in plaintiff's favor, Murray intentionally avoided completing it. To find a genuine issue of material fact on the matter of proximate cause, we would have to extend the reasonable inference that Murray intentionally avoided completing the polygraph to another inference—such information would have persuaded Souk to not charge or prosecute plaintiff. Given all that Souk indisputably knew about Murray, that inference is not reasonable. In these circumstances, arising from undisputed facts and reasonable inferences therefrom, a jury could not reasonably find Warner’s nondisclosure of the polygraph report, whether intentional or not, a proximate cause of the plaintiff’s prosecution.

¶ 117 Our decision is not undermined by plaintiff’s emphasis on Souk’s admission had he known about the report, he would have asked questions about it. When Souk was asked if it would have changed his mind if the polygrapher opined Murray manipulated the polygraph, Souk did not respond it would have: “Well, I think that was fairly early in the investigation. I would have asked some questions and looked at it more.”

¶ 118 As the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals concluded when it rejected plaintiff’s attempt to find the police officers liable due to the prosecutor’s failure to disclose Brady material by simply alleging the police and prosecutor agreed the prosecutor would not disclose the evidence, “[i]t is clear that Beaman’s primary quarrel is with Souk.” Beaman, 776 F.3d at 512. Summary judgment in Warner’s favor is proper.

¶ 119 c. Defendant Zayas

¶ 120 Plaintiff made three allegations regarding Zayas’s role leading to his prosecution: (1) Zayas participated in the May 1994 meeting during which the decision was made to prosecute plaintiff, (2) Zayas supervised the detectives who worked on the case, and (3) Zayas allowed the arrest to occur knowing the “case was half-baked.” Plaintiff, however, points to no evidence from which a jury could conclude Zayas commenced or continued the criminal suit against him. There is no evidence Zayas pressured or exerted influence over Reynard's and Souk's decision to prosecute and no evidence of any false statements by Zayas to the prosecutor. There is no evidence showing Zayas concealed information or engaged in wrongful or bad-faith conduct. Because plaintiff cannot establish the first element of his malicious-prosecution claim, Zayas is entitled to summary judgment.

¶ 121 C. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

¶ 122 The trial court held plaintiff's claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress (IIED) was based and contingent upon his malicious-prosecution claims against defendants and granted summary judgment on that claim. In the initial appeal, plaintiff's only challenge to that holding was the conduct in "pursuing plaintiff's conviction maliciously, disregarding and manipulating the evidence, and sending an innocent man to prison for a dozen years for a crime he could not have committed" constituted extreme and outrageous conduct. We held plaintiff failed to develop this argument or cite relevant authority and, thereby, forfeited his claim. See Ill. S. Ct. R. 341(h)(7) (eff. Jan. 1, 2016).

¶ 123 On remand, plaintiff asks this court to reconsider its holding. Plaintiff maintains, rather than provide another detailed recitation of the facts underlying the malicious-prosecution claim, he summarized his argument and cited six cases in which Illinois courts allowed IIED claims to proceed on facts related to malicious prosecution.

¶ 124 The fact remains plaintiff's sole argument in his initial brief was one sentence long. Plaintiff did not cite the elements for an IIED claim. Plaintiff did not clarify whether the IIED claim depended upon the viability of his malicious-prosecution claims or whether he sought relief for IIED independent of those claims. Plaintiff simply provided string cites and left the burden on this court to research those cases and to surmise his position. Issues that are ill-defined and insufficiently presented do not satisfy the requirements of Rule 341(h)(7). Express Valet, Inc. v. City of Chicago, 373 Ill. App. 3d 838, 855, 869 N.E.2d 964, 979 (2007). Plaintiff has forfeited this claim.

D. Conspiracy

¶ 126 The elements of a civil-conspiracy claim are as follows: (1) a combination of two or more individuals, (2) for the purpose of accomplishing by concerted action an unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose by unlawful means, (3) in the furtherance of which one of the conspirators committed an overt tortious or unlawful act. Fritz v. Johnston, 209 Ill. 2d 302, 317, 807 N.E.2d 461, 470 (2004). The tortious or unlawful act alleged is defendants' alleged malicious prosecution of plaintiff. Because we have found defendants Freesmeyer, Warner, and Zayas are entitled to summary judgment on plaintiff's malicious-prosecution claims, plaintiff cannot establish the third element of his civil-conspiracy claim. We affirm the trial court's order granting summary judgment to defendants on plaintiff's cause of action for conspiracy.

E. Respondeat Superior and Indemnification Claims

¶ 128 Plaintiff, on appeal, acknowledges the respondeat superior and indemnification claims are dependent on the claims against the individual defendants. Given our findings summary judgment was properly granted on the individual claims, we conclude the trial court properly granted summary judgment on the respondeat superior and indemnification claims.

¶ 129

III. CONCLUSION

¶ 130

We affirm the trial court's judgment.
