VIII. CONCLUSION .....	34

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiffs brought this FOIA action seeking access to a confidential settlement agreement (the “Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement”) that resolved a lawsuit between private parties: the estate of Alfonso Franco, a deceased former IDOC inmate, and Wexford Health Sources, Inc. (“Wexford”), a private company that contracts with the Illinois Department of Corrections (“IDOC”) to provide healthcare services to IDOC inmates. Although IDOC was not party to that lawsuit and did not possess a copy of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement, Plaintiffs sought disclosure of the document directly from IDOC pursuant to the Illinois Freedom of Information Act, 5 ILCS 140/1 et seq. (“FOIA”). Until this FOIA dispute, neither IDOC nor any other governmental agency had any connection to the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement.

This appeal asks whether a settlement agreement between private parties is subject to disclosure under FOIA. Wexford respectfully submits that it is not, because the settlement agreement is a purely private document in the sole possession of a private party, having no bearing on any governmental function. For these reasons, the agreement does not satisfy FOIA’s requirement for the disclosure of public settlement agreements found in Section 2.20 of the statute. Nor is this document subject to disclosure under the more general terms of FOIA Section 7(2), which allows for disclosure of documents in the possession of private parties contracting to perform a governmental function only when those records “directly relate” to the governmental function. For these reasons, the Appellate Court of Illinois, Fourth Judicial District erred in finding that Section 7(2) of FOIA provides for the disclosure of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. As the Circuit Court correctly held, no applicable provision of FOIA requires the disclosure of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement.

The judgment at issue in this appeal is the Circuit Court's grant of Summary Judgment in favor of Wexford, which was reversed by the Fourth District. The Circuit Court below considered, in camera, an unredacted copy of the subject settlement agreement as well as an index describing: (1) the reason for withholding the same and (2) the nature and basis of the redactions applied to the version previously provided to IDOC in an effort to resolve this FOIA dispute without litigation. The same was provided to the Fourth District for its independent review.

II. ISSUE PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Whether FOIA requires disclosure of a confidential settlement agreement between Wexford and another private party, where the document has no bearing on Wexford's performance of a governmental function.

III. JURISDICTION

Illinois Supreme Court Rule 315 confers appellate jurisdiction on this Court. On January 8, 2019, the Appellate Court of Illinois, Fourth Judicial District, reversed and remanded the Circuit Court of Sangamon County's grant of Summary Judgment in favor of Wexford, which held that the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement was not subject to public disclosure pursuant to FOIA. A 001-09. Wexford filed a timely petition for leave to appeal with this Court on February 13, 2019, within 35 days of the entry of the Fourth District's Order. This Court granted review on May 22, 2019.

IV. STATUTES INVOLVED

“Public records” means all records, reports, forms, writings, letters, memoranda, books, papers, maps, photographs, microfilms, cards, tapes, recordings, electronic data processing records, electronic communications, recorded information and all other documentary materials pertaining to the transaction of public business, regardless of physical form or characteristics, having been prepared by or for, or having been or being used by, received by, in the possession of, or under the control of any public body.

5 ILCS 140/2(c).

Settlement and severance agreements. All settlement and severance agreements entered into by or on behalf of a public body are public records subject to inspection and copying by the public, provided that information exempt from disclosure under Section 7 of this Act may be redacted.

5 ILCS 140/2.20.

A public record that is not in the possession of a public body but is in the possession of a party with whom the agency has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the public body, and that directly relates to the governmental function and is not otherwise exempt under this Act, shall be considered a public record of the public body, for purposes of this Act.

5 ILCS 140/7(2).

V. STANDARD OF REVIEW

The de novo standard of review applies to this review of a grant of summary judgment. See Stern v. Wheaton-Warrenville Cmty. Unit Sch. Dist. 200, 233 Ill. 2d 396, 404 (2009); Uphoff v. Grosskopf, 2013 IL App (4th) 130422,

¶ 11. In the FOIA context, this Court has held that the scope of disclosure is a question of law to be reviewed de novo. Better Gov't Ass'n v. Office of the Special Prosecutor (In re Appointment of Special Prosecutor), 2019 IL 122949,

VI. STATEMENT OF FACTS

Pursuant to its contract with the State of Illinois, Wexford provides medical, dental, vision, pharmaceutical, and mental health services to inmates at specified State correctional centers. Wexford, a private company, also carries out business with a variety of other partners throughout the country. Wexford works cooperatively with IDOC to fulfill the agency's obligations under the FOIA statute and produce documents responsive to FOIA requests when the law requires. As a business with confidential and competitively sensitive information, Wexford also asserts its right to maintain the confidentiality of its business records when such records are not subject to disclosure under FOIA or any other applicable laws.

In 2014, the estate of Alfonso Franco ("Franco"), a former IDOC inmate, filed suit against Wexford and certain Wexford personnel on behalf of deceased former IDOC inmate Alfonso Franco. The lawsuit did not name IDOC or any IDOC personnel as a party, and IDOC was not involved in any aspect of the litigation. See C 513. Wexford made an independent business decision to settle the lawsuit. Wexford memorialized that decision in the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. C 501, SEC C 4-18; C 18-19. IDOC was not involved in Wexford's decision to settle that lawsuit: IDOC did not participate in settlement discussions, review draft agreements, provide funding, receive updates, or have any input in the settlement of the litigation. See C 14-17.

The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement does not discuss or otherwise relate to any aspect of Wexford's provision of medical care. It simply memorializes Wexford's decision to settle a legal claim. The document not only lacks any discussion, analysis, or assessment of Mr. Franco's health or Wexford's treatment thereof, it also affirmatively and explicitly confirms the parties' understanding that the Agreement is neither evidence of any violation of, or non-compliance with, any statute, duty, or law, nor the admission of wrong-doing or liability of any party. Id. at § 6.

A. Plaintiff's FOIA Request and Discussions With IDOC and Wexford.

On August 25, 2015, Plaintiff Bruce Rushton, a journalist employed by Plaintiff Illinois Times, made a FOIA request to IDOC "for a set of records relating to claims and/or lawsuits filed in connection with the death of Alfonso Franco, a former inmate." C 8; C 12. IDOC possessed no documents responsive to this request. Then, as now, the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement belonged to Wexford and was in Wexford's sole possession (other than the copy in the Franco Estate's possession). IDOC did not have a copy of the document because IDOC was not a party to, nor did it play any role in, the formation of the Agreement. See C 14-17.

On September 8, 2015, IDOC informed Mr. Rushton that it did not maintain or possess documents responsive to the FOIA request. C 14-17. After several additional exchanges between IDOC and Rushton, on September 28, 2015, IDOC contacted Wexford to request that it provide IDOC with a copy of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. C 13; C 15. Responding the same day, Wexford declined to provide the Franco Settlement Agreement to IDOC, citing the confidential nature of the document. Id. Over the next several months, Wexford, IDOC, and Mr. Rushton had extensive back-and-forth discussions regarding whether the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement was properly subject to disclosure under FOIA. C 14-17.

Ultimately, and only in the interest of cooperation with its longtime business partner, Wexford provided IDOC with a redacted version of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement on December 7, 2015. C 18-19. Along with the redacted document, Wexford included a two-page memorandum reiterating Wexford's position that the FOIA statute did not require disclosure of this confidential document. Id. As explained therein, Wexford provided the redacted Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement to IDOC "because it is committed to maintaining its valued and long-standing partnership with IDOC," and because Wexford was confident that once IDOC personnel reviewed the document, they would "determine that it is only a document memorializing Wexford's independent business decision to settle a legal claim filed by an individual IDOC inmate." C 18. Wexford and IDOC continued their discussion regarding the applicability of FOIA to the document throughout December 2015 and January 2016.

Wexford did not hear anything further from IDOC or Mr. Rushton until June of 2016, when discussions resumed regarding the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. C 87-88. Wexford readily agreed to provide Mr. Rushton the memorandum that Wexford had provided to IDOC in October 2015 regarding the issue, but it maintained its continued objection to the production of the redacted Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement for the reasons it had previously articulated. See id. In June 2016, IDOC provided Mr. Rushton with the correspondence between IDOC and Wexford, as well as the memorandum Wexford had previously provided to IDOC. See C 88. IDOC did not, however, produce the redacted Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement to Mr. Rushton.

After hearing again from Mr. Rushton, on August 25, 2016, IDOC renewed its request for an unredacted copy of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement for its independent review. C21-22. IDOC stated that “once received, [IDOC] will determine if there are applicable FOIA exceptions. If there are no applicable exceptions, it is [IDOC’s] position that these agreements must be tendered to Mr. Rushton.” Id. Finally, IDOC warned Wexford that “[i]n the event that we do not receive these documents, we will tender the heavily redacted settlement agreement along with an explanation that we have been unable to obtain responsive documents from Wexford.” Id.

Wexford objected to IDOC’s stated intention to provide the redacted Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement to Mr. Rushton, and on September 26, 2016, it filed suit seeking to prevent IDOC from unnecessarily producing the redacted document. See Complaint, Wexford v. IDOC, 2016-MR-852, at ¶¶ 16-18 (Cir. Ct. Sangamon County, filed Sept. 16, 2016); C 81-94. After that case was dismissed on procedural grounds unrelated to the merits, see C 571-72, but before Wexford's time to appeal had run, IDOC provided the redacted document to Mr. Rushton. See C 518. Wexford never consented to this release.

B. The Current Lawsuit.

On April 7, 2017, Plaintiffs filed a FOIA action against IDOC, seeking production of the unredacted Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement, as well as attorneys' fees, costs, civil penalties, and other relief. C 10 at ¶ 14. At IDOC's request, Wexford filed a Motion to Intervene C 4, which the Circuit Court granted on July 20, 2017. Id. Pursuant to court order, Wexford filed, under seal, a copy of the unredacted Settlement Agreement and an Index setting out the basis for withholding and redacting the same. C 5.

Both Plaintiffs and Wexford filed motions for summary judgement. At the February 16, 2018 hearing on those motions, Judge Otwell heard oral argument from both sides, noting for the record that he had reviewed both the Index and unredacted Settlement Agreement prior to that hearing. A 015. IDOC declined to take a position in the dispute, informing the court that "the AG's Office defers to Wexford and Plaintiff. It's their fight, and we'll follow the Court's order." A 043. Following lengthy oral argument and detailed questioning by Judge Otwell, the court concluded that the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement constituted "a business decision that is not directly related to the provision of medical services pursuant to the contract between Wexford and IDOC." A 048-49.

On February 26, 2018, the Circuit Court granted Wexford's Motion for Summary Judgment and denied Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment.

C 6, A 010-11. That order was memorialized in both a docket entry on motion hearing (C 6) and in a subsequent agreed written Order on Cross-Motions for Summary Judgment, which incorporated the reasoning set forth as stated on the record. A 010-11. In that Order, the Circuit Court held that “5 ILCS 140/7(2) does not authorize disclosure of the settlement agreement because the business decision to settle claims does not ‘directly relate’ to the governmental function performed by Wexford.” Id. (emphasis in original). The court further held that “5 ILCS 140/2.20 does not authorize disclosure of the settlement agreement because Wexford is not a public body.” Id.

Plaintiffs appealed to the Fourth District. On January 8, 2019, the Fourth District reversed and remanded the Circuit Court’s grant of summary judgment in favor of Wexford. A 001-09. Noting that “FOIA does not define the term ‘directly relates,’ which appears in section 7(2),” but “declin[ing] to define this term because any definition might prove to be insufficiently flexible in future cases,” the Fourth District concluded that “the term ‘directly relates’ must be liberally construed in light of FOIA’s purpose.” A007-08. The Fourth District therefore held that “Wexford’s settlement agreement directly relates to a governmental function because that settlement agreement involved the settling of a claim arising out of its rendering of medical care.” A 008. Wexford timely filed a timely Petition for Leave to Appeal with this Court, which was granted on May 22, 2019.

VII. ARGUMENT

As a general matter, FOIA does not apply to documents held by private citizens. In recent years, however, the Illinois legislature has amended the statute to require, in a narrow set of circumstances, the disclosure of a private entity's records so that governmental entities do not "avoid their disclosure obligations by contractually delegating their responsibility to a private entity." Better Gov't Ass'n v. Ill. High Sch. Ass'n ("IHSA"), 2017 IL 121124, ¶ 62.

Importantly, the Illinois legislature limited FOIA's reach regarding disclosure of a private entity's records in several key respects. First, the legislature crafted a provision that only calls for the disclosure of settlement agreements entered into "by or on behalf of a public body." 5 ILCS 140/2.20. Critically, the legislature did not provide for disclosure of settlement agreements between private entities.

For documents other than settlement agreements, the legislature required disclosure of private entities' records in certain limited circumstances. Specifically, unlike public entities, whose records are subject to disclosure if they merely "pertain[] to the transaction of public business," private entities performing a governmental function are only required to disclose documents that "directly relate" to that governmental function. 5 ILCS 140/2(c). While Wexford does not believe this limited disclosure obligation reaches private entities' settlement agreements, even if it does, as explained below, the disclosure requirement does not apply in this case.

Through its comprehensive legislative scheme, the Illinois legislature directed that private entities' documents are subject to FOIA in only limited circumstances. This case is about recognizing that none of those limited circumstances contemplated by the legislature apply to Wexford's Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement.

A. Illinois' FOIA Statute Narrowly Cabins Disclosure of Private Records.

In evaluating this appeal and construing the meaning of FOIA, “the cardinal rule, to which all other rules and canons are subordinate, is to ascertain and give effect to the true intent of the legislature.” Nelson v. Kendall Cty., 2014 IL 116303, ¶ 23. The “most reliable indicator of legislative intent is the language of the statute.” Better Gov't Ass'n, 2019 IL 122949, ¶ 23. That statutory language must be “viewed as a whole. Therefore, words and phrases must be construed in light of other relevant statutory provisions and not in isolation. Each word, clause, and sentence of a statute must be given a reasonable meaning, if possible, and should not be rendered superfluous.” Id.

This Court has also instructed that “the court may [also] consider the reason for the law, the problems sought to be remedied, the purposes to be achieved, and the consequences of construing the statute one way or another. Further, a court presumes that the legislature did not intend absurdity, inconvenience, or injustice in enacting legislation.” Id. That said, this Court has reiterated that “[a] court cannot restrict or enlarge the meaning of an unambiguous statute. The responsibility for the justice or wisdom of legislation rests upon the legislature.” Henrich v. Libertyville High Sch., 186 Ill. 2d 381, 394-95 (1998). Instead, “[a] court must interpret and apply statutes in the manner in which they are written[,] and as such “[a] court must not rewrite statutes to make them consistent with the court’s idea of orderliness and public policy.” Id.

Here, Illinois’ FOIA statute draws critical distinctions between the disclosure obligations of public entities and those of private entities that perform governmental functions. Specifically, FOIA requires disclosure of a public entity’s (1) records that “pertain[] to the transaction of public business,” and (2) settlement agreements. For private entities, on the other hand, FOIA (1) reaches only those records that “directly relate” to a governmental function, and (2) does not reach settlement agreements.

Three provisions of the FOIA Statute—enacted or amended in relevant part by the Illinois legislature at the very same time—create this framework. First, in Section 2(c), FOIA defines “public records” to mean all records, as broadly described, “pertaining to the transaction of public business” that have been “prepared by or for, or having been or being used by, received by, in the possession of, or under the control of any public body.” 5 ILCS 140/2(c) (emphasis added). Absent a FOIA exemption, if these records are in the possession of a public body, they must be produced in response to a valid FOIA request.

Second, in Section 2.20, the Statute provides that settlement agreements “entered into by or on behalf of a public body are public records” that must be produced, absent a FOIA exemption. 5 ILCS 140/2.20 (emphasis added).

And finally, in Section 7(2), the Statute provides that records that are held exclusively in the possession of a private party performing a governmental function and that “directly relate[] to the governmental function” are public records that must be produced, absent a FOIA exemption. 5 ILCS 140/7(2) (emphasis added).

1. Settlement Agreements Entered Into Solely Between Private Entities Are Not Subject to FOIA Disclosure.

In Section 2.20, the Illinois legislature explicitly identified those settlement agreements that are subject to FOIA disclosure. Section 2.20 provides:

Settlement and severance agreements. All settlement and severance agreements entered into by or on behalf of a public body are public records subject to inspection and copying by the public, provided that information exempt from disclosure under Section 7 of this Act may be redacted.

5 ILCS 140/2.20 (emphasis added).

a. Section 2.20 Excludes Settlements Between Private Entities From the Reach of FOIA.

Section 2.20 is the legislature’s first and last word on whether settlement agreements are subject to disclosure pursuant to FOIA. Indeed, no other section of FOIA addresses settlement agreements. Importantly, the legislature did not include private entities’ settlement agreements within the scope of this provision. Instead, by requiring that a settlement agreement must be entered into “by or on behalf of a public body” to be subject to disclosure, the legislature unambiguously excluded private agreements from FOIA's reach. Until this case, no reported Illinois court decision has ever applied or even suggested that FOIA reaches settlement agreements of private parties performing a governmental function.

The negative implication canon of construction, "expressio unius est exclusio alterius," compels this result. See, e.g., Metzger v. DaRosa, 209 Ill. 2d 30, 44 (2004). As this Court described the canon, "the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another." Id. In other words, "[w]here a statute lists the things to which it refers, there is an inference that all omissions should be understood as exclusions." Id. This maxim "is based on logic and common sense. It expresses the learning of common experience that when people say one thing they do not mean something else." Id. See also People v. Lisa (In re D.W.), 214 Ill. 2d 289, 308 (2005). Thus, the omission of private party settlement agreements from Section 2.20, must be read as a deliberate choice that settlement agreements between private parties are not subject to disclosure pursuant to FOIA.

Furthermore, because Section 2.20 addresses the specific context of settlement agreements, this Court need look no further in FOIA for other, more general disclosure provisions that might be read to reach settlement agreements between private parties. Section 2.20 is the exclusive specific statutory basis for disclosure of settlement agreements and it governs in this case—as opposed to the more generalized language of Section 7(2) noted above and discussed at length below in Argument Part A.2—because “it is a commonplace of statutory construction that when two conflicting statutes [or two provisions within the same statute] cover the same subject, the specific governs the general.” People ex rel. Madigan v. Burge, 2014 IL 115635, ¶ 31 (internal quotations omitted). See also Van Dyke v. White, 2019 IL 121452, ¶ 55 (invoking the general/specific canon to hold that “reliance on [a] ‘catch-all’ phrase . . . is unnecessary and inappropriate” given a more specific and contradictory statutory provision on the same issue).

b. Legislative History Demonstrates That Section 2.20 Excludes Settlements Between Private Entities From the Reach of FOIA.

FOIA’s legislative history confirms that the only settlement agreements subject to disclosure are those entered into by or on behalf of public entities. In Public Act 96-542, the legislature amended FOIA in two significant ways. First, it added Section 2.20 to include disclosure of settlement agreements entered into by or on behalf of public entities, and second, it added Section 7(2) to create a limited disclosure obligation for private entities’ records. See Pub. Act 96-542 (eff. Jan. 1, 2010) (adding 5 ILCS 140/7(2) and 5 ILCS 140/2.20).

The focus of the legislature in enacting Section 2.20 was clear. As Illinois Senator Harmon explained during the floor debate, the bill was “intended to deal with situations where a government shields a settlement agreement behind the exemption for insurance-related matters” and to clarify that public settlement agreements are subject to disclosure, but “may be redacted to prevent other information that is protected from being disclosed.” See 96th Ill. Gen. Assem., Senate Proceedings, April 2, 2009, at 239. Moreover, the legislative discussion regarding Public Act 96-542’s enactment made no mention whatsoever of FOIA’s potential application to settlements exclusively between private parties. 96th Ill. Gen. Assem., House Proceedings, May 27, 2009, at 89-118.

Significantly, six years later, the legislature amended Section 2.20 to include public severance agreements. See Pub. Act. 99-478 (eff. June 1, 2016) (amending 5 ILCS 140/2.20). As in 2010, the 2016 floor discussion referenced only public bodies. 99th Ill. Gen. Assem., House Proceedings, April 15, 2015, at 68-71. The legislature made no effort to expand Section 2.20 to require disclosure of settlement agreements between private parties.

c. The Simultaneous Passage of Section 7(2) and Section 2.20 Further Confirms That Section 2.20 Excludes Settlements Between Private Entities From the Reach of FOIA.

The contours of Section 7(2) are discussed below in Argument Part A.2, but for present purposes, it is sufficient to note that on the very same day the legislature added Section 2.20 to FOIA, the legislature also amended FOIA to include limited disclosure obligations for private entities under Section 7(2). There can be no credible claim, therefore, that the Illinois legislature simply overlooked private entities that perform governmental functions when it drafted and enacted Section 2.20 pertaining to settlement agreements. Indeed, the simultaneous creation and enactment of Section 7(2) and Section 2.20 readily demonstrates that the legislature was fully aware of the role of private entities in performing governmental functions, but chose, as was its prerogative, to limit disclosure obligations exclusively to public entities' settlement agreements.

In sum, the language of Section 2.20, the case law interpreting its reach, and the legislative history of Public Act 96-452 demonstrate that the Illinois legislature intended only those settlement agreements entered into "by or on behalf of public entities" to be subject to FOIA disclosure.

2. Private Records That Do Not "Directly Relate[] to the Governmental Function" Are Not Subject to Disclosure.

As described above, this Court need not consider the contours of Section 7(2), which generally governs the limited disclosure of private records, in light of Section 2.20, which specifically governs settlement agreements. Nevertheless, even if this Court were to reach Section 7(2), the outcome would be the same. The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement is not subject to disclosure under FOIA because Section 7(2) does not require disclosure of private records that do not directly relate to the governmental function.

Section 7(2) of FOIA addresses the limited disclosure obligations of private parties performing a governmental function. It states:

A public record that is not in the possession of a public body but is in the possession of a party with whom the agency has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the public body, and that directly relates to the governmental function and is not otherwise exempt under this Act, shall be considered a public record of the public body, for purposes of this Act.

5 ILCS 140/7(2) (emphasis added).

a. Section 7(2) Applies A Heightened Nexus Standard For Disclosure of Private Records.

In analyzing the scope of Section 7(2), the Court must begin with the plain and ordinary meaning of the text. See Better Gov't Ass'n, 2019 IL 122949 ¶ 23. Here the plain meaning of “directly relates” demonstrates that the public may not access all of a third party’s records merely because there is some tangential relationship between the document and the governmental function. Instead, a requesting party must show a “direct” relationship. And that relationship must be established on a document by document basis. See, e.g., id. at ¶¶ 38-39, 49 (exempting nearly all documents from FOIA disclosure but remanding for in camera review and analysis of itemized invoices and billing records).

This Court has explained that it must view the FOIA statute “as a whole” and construe provisions’ language “in light of other relevant statutory provisions and not in isolation.” Better Govt’s Ass’n, 2019 IL 122949 ¶ 23. Section 2(c), which focuses on public bodies, provides exactly this “other relevant statutory provision.” Pursuant to Section 2(c), in the context of a public entity’s documents, FOIA requires a far weaker nexus to public business:

“Public records” means all records, reports, forms, writings, letters, memoranda, books, papers, maps, photographs, microfilms, cards, tapes, recordings, electronic data processing records, electronic communications, recorded information and all other documentary materials pertaining to the transaction of public business, regardless of physical form or characteristics, having been prepared by or for, or having been or being used by, received by, in the possession of, or under the control of any public body.

5 ILCS 140/2(c) (emphasis added).

The clear distinction between the exacting “directly relates” standard for private documents and the more lax “pertain” standard for public documents reflects the legislature’s deliberate decision to substantially limit the disclosure obligations of private parties performing governmental functions.

b. Legislative History Further Confirms Section 7(2)’s Heightened Nexus Standard for Disclosure of Private Records.

The legislative history of the “pertains” and “directly relates” language further the differences between these disclosure obligations. In Public Act 96-542—the same Public Act that added Section 2.20, discussed above—the legislature amended FOIA to add these two distinct nexus requirements. Specifically, the following changes were made to Section 2(c), with additions highlighted with capitalized text and deletions noted with strike-through text:

“Public records” means all records, reports, forms, writings, letters, memoranda, books, papers, maps, photographs, microfilms, cards, tapes, recordings, electronic data processing records, ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS, recorded information and all other documentary materials PERTAINING TO THE TRANSACTION OF PUBLIC BUSINESS, regardless of physical form or characteristics, having been prepared BY OR FOR, or having been or being used BY, received BY, IN THE POSSESSION OF, ~~possessed~~ or under the control of any public body.

Pub. Act 96-542 (eff. Jan. 1, 2010) (amending 5 ILCS 140/2(c)) (emphasis added).

In the very same Public Act, the legislature added Section 7(2), which required that records exclusively held by private entities be disclosed only if they “directly relate” to the governmental function and [are] not otherwise exempt under this Act.” Id. (adding 5 ILCS 140/7(2))(emphasis added).

By simultaneously creating two different standards in the Act, the legislature intended the two sections of FOIA to have differing applications. As the United States Supreme Court noted in Bates v. United States, 522 U.S. 23, 29-30 (1997), “[w]here Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another section of the same Act, it is generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion.” No less is true with respect to actions by the Illinois legislature.

Relatedly, the legislature’s decision to craft these different standards reflects the legislature’s longstanding decision to balance the goals of public disclosure in government and fostering successful partnerships with private entities that benefit the people of Illinois. For example, in drafting the FOIA exemption for trade secrets, 150 ILCS 140/7(g), Illinois Representative Currie highlighted and justified the broad definition of “trade secrets” under FOIA. As she explained:

We do define trade secrets broadly in this Bill, and we certainly intend that term to be interpreted so as to include business strategies and information that, if it were disclosed, might cause harm to the competitive person . . . position of the person in the business community. We really do not intend, by this Bill, to have a chilling effect on private parties interest or willingness in doing business with the state. That's what we intend by trade secrets.

83d Ill. Gen. Assem., House Proceedings, May 25, 1983, at 184 (Statements of Representative Currie) (emphasis added). Like the broad definition of “trade secrets” under FOIA, the clear distinction between the “directly relate” nexus standard for private documents and the “pertain” nexus standard for public documents achieves this balance.

c. Caselaw Likewise Confirms Section 7(2)'s Heightened Nexus Standard for Disclosure of Private Records.

This Court recognized the higher standard for private entities in IHSA, rejecting the idea that the performance of governmental functions alone could “transform a private entity into a public body for purposes for the FOIA.” 2017 IL 121124 ¶ 55. “To hold otherwise would mean that any private entity that merely provides education services to public schools would risk being transformed into a public body. The General Assembly could not have intended such a result.” Id. Accordingly, this Court framed the analysis as asking “whether the IHSA has contracted with District 230 to perform a governmental function on its behalf and, if so, whether the requested records are directly related to that governmental function.” Id. at ¶ 63 (emphasis added).

Similarly, the Second District recognized the distinct standards for private and public entities in Chicago Tribune v. College of DuPage, where it stated: “The fact that a private company’s acts may be connected with a governmental function does not create a public body where none existed before.” 2017 IL App (2d) 160274, ¶ 53. The court explained that, while the FOIA statute has broad reach in the arena of public bodies’ documents, for private parties’ documents, “a record must ‘directly relate’ to the governmental function performed on behalf of a public body.” Id. at ¶ 53. The court emphasized that the “directly relates” standard “makes clear the legislature’s intention that the general public may not access all of a third party’s records merely because it has contracted with a public body to perform a governmental function. FOIA is not concerned with private affairs.” Id.

Finally, a sister State’s application of the heightened nexus standard for private entity records under a FOIA-equivalent statute with the same “directly relates” language also provides helpful guidance. Pennsylvania’s “Right to Known Law” “authorize[s] access to the records of a third party contractor ‘with whom the agency has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the agency,’ provided that the requested record ‘directly relates to the governmental function.’” Mid Valley Sch. Dist. v. Warshawer, 2013 Pa. Dist. & Cnty. Dec. LEXIS 469, 16 (Pa. Commw. Ct 2013). Importantly, in applying this nexus standard that tracks the language of Section 7(2), Pennsylvania courts have consistently acknowledged and enforced the exacting nature of the required nexus. Id. at 35 (holding that records from private contractors may be subject to disclosure “only if the function is governmental in nature, and the precise information sought directly relates to performance of that governmental function.”) (emphasis added). See also Allegheny Cty. Dep’t of Admin. Servs. v. A Second Chance, Inc., 13 A.3d 1025, 1038 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2010) (“Access is further restricted to records that ‘directly’ relate to carrying out the governmental function, to avoid access that may relate to the contract but do not relate to its performance.”); Allegheny Cty. Dep’t of Admin. Servs. v. Parsons, 61 A.3d 336, 346 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2013) (“Section 506(d) prescribes more restricted access precisely because it applies to private entities. Section 506(d) does not reach all records in possession of a private contractor that relate to the governmental function; rather, the records reached are only those that relate to performance of that function.”); Buehl v. Office of Open Records, 6 A.3d 27, 31 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2010) (Pricing records are not subject to disclosure because they “do not directly relate to providing commissary services to inmates,” and therefore what the vendor paid for the items “is beyond the parameters of its contract with IDOC—it does not directly relate to performing or carrying out this governmental function.”).

In sum, for records of private entities, Section 7(2) unquestionably requires a heightened nexus between the specific record at issue and the private entity’s governmental function.

B. The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement is Not Subject to Disclosure.

1. The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement is Not Subject to Disclosure Under Section 2.20 Because it is Not a Settlement Agreement Entered into “By or On Behalf of” a Public Body.

As discussed in Argument Part A.1 supra, FOIA’s Section 2.20 delineates which settlement agreements are subject to disclosure under FOIA: only those agreements “entered into by or on behalf of a public body” are potentially subject to disclosure. 5 ILCS 140/2.20. There can be no credible claim that the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement was entered into by or on behalf of a public body. No public body was named as a party in the litigation; no public body (or its representative) reviewed, approved, or contributed to the settlement; and no public body receives any benefit under the settlement agreement.

Accordingly, this private document fails to meet FOIA’s requirements for disclosure of a settlement agreement, 5 ILCS 140/2.20. Absent statutory authority under Section 2.20, this settlement agreement is not subject to FOIA.

2. The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement is Not Subject to Disclosure Under Section 7(2) Because It Does Not “Directly Relate” to a Governmental Function.

Because Section 2.20 specifically governs which settlement agreements potentially fall within the scope of FOIA, Section 7(2)’s more general reference to private entities’ records does not encompass settlement agreements. For that reason, Section 7(2) cannot provide a basis for FOIA disclosure of the settlement agreement here.

But even if Section 7(2) were (erroneously, in Wexford's view) determined to potentially apply to settlement agreements, it would not require disclosure of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement at issue in this case. Wexford's governmental function, per its contract, is the provision of healthcare to IDOC inmates. To be sure, Mr. Franco's underlying complaint pertained to the healthcare he received as an inmate. Wexford acknowledges that documents such as Mr. Franco's treatment history, prescription records, and similar medical records would "directly relate" to that governmental function.

It is not so with the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. An in camera review, as was conducted by the Circuit Court and noted on the record (A 015), confirms that the document lacks any reference to Mr. Franco's medical conditions or the care he received at Wexford. It is entirely devoid of any mention of: (1) any aspect of any medical conditions Mr. Franco ever experienced; (2) any aspect of any healthcare Wexford personnel ever provided to Mr. Franco at any time; or (3) any assessment or analysis of Wexford's provision of healthcare to inmates (i.e., the governmental function). Indeed, the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement specifically states that the document does not constitute any kind of assessment of or determination regarding the medical care Wexford provided to Mr. Franco. C 501, SEC C3-18 at § 6; C 18-19.

Instead, the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement focuses exclusively on the resolution of legal proceedings, the discharge of legal claims, execution of release documents, and the legal covenants governing all past, present, and future claims. As the Circuit Court correctly observed, the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement memorialized a “business decision that is not directly related to the provision of medical services pursuant to the contract between Wexford and IDOC.” A 048-49. Wexford’s governmental function is simply not addressed in this document. Because of this wide gulf between the contents of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement and Wexford’s governmental function, this document cannot be said to “directly relate” to the governmental function. It therefore falls outside of Section 7(2).

The Fourth District concluded that the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement satisfied Section 7(2) “because that settlement agreement involved the settling of a claim arising out of its rendering of medical care.” A 008. Respectfully, this conclusion applied Section 7(2) at too high a level of generality. The test must, again, be conducted at the document level. See Better Gov’t Ass’n, 2019 IL 122949 at ¶¶ 38-39, 49 (exempting nearly all documents but remanding for in camera review and analysis of itemized invoices and billing records). Instead, the Fourth District looked only at the general subject matter of the litigation. While the backdrop of the Franco lawsuit was the healthcare Wexford provided to Mr. Franco, the specific Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement fails to “directly relate” to Wexford’s governmental function. A 010-11.

Because this document fails to satisfy the requirement of Section 7(2) that the material “directly relates to the governmental function,” the Fourth District erred in concluding that Section 7(2) provides a basis for disclosure.

C. Reversal of the Fourth District Will Restore The Balance The Legislature Struck Between The Goals of Governmental Transparency and Private Partnerships.

As noted above, the Illinois legislature has long recognized the need for a balanced, carefully-crafted FOIA statute as applied to the interests of private parties who, through doing business with the State, may come under the purview of certain FOIA obligations. This Court has likewise repeatedly recognized that the FOIA statute is a powerful tool with wide-reaching impact, and that ensuring its proper interpretation and application is of great public importance. See, e.g., Better Gov’t Ass’n, 2019 IL 122949 (protecting grand jury materials from FOIA disclosure); Perry v. Dep’t of Fin. & Prof’l Regulation, 2018 IL 122349 (adjudicating retroactivity of statute barring disclosure of certain materials under FOIA); IHSA, 2017 IL 121124 (holding that the Illinois High School Association was not a “public body” under FOIA). This careful analysis reflects the statute’s deliberate balancing of interests and its implicit acknowledgement of various principles important to the State of Illinois, such as protecting deliberately confidential information (including grand jury information) and the privacy interests of private bodies (such as the IHSA).

Upsetting that careful balance disrupts these principles and violates the legislature's intent.

The Fourth District's broad ruling neither promotes the balance struck by the Legislature nor exercises the caution employed by this Court. And, if it is left to stand, the Fourth Circuit's sweeping view of Section 7(2) will impact far more than just private settlement agreements. Indeed, absent guidance from this Court enforcing the appropriate limits on FOIA's disclosure requirements, a vast array of private companies' documents the legislature never intended to subject to disclosure could be sought and disclosed, simply because the private company in question contracts to perform a governmental function. Such uncalled-for disclosure of private companies' documents is exactly the kind of development that can create the "chilling effect on private parties interest or willingness in doing business with the state" that the legislature has long sought to avoid. 83d Ill. Gen. Assem., House Proceedings, May 25, 1983, at 184.

Importantly, the impact from such a "chilling effect" in this case is not an abstract or academic matter. Instead, it has the potential to fundamentally impact the expansive public-private partnerships Illinois has relied on for decades to deliver critical services to the people of Illinois. The State purchases over $10 billion worth of products and services each year. See Sell2Illinois: Make the State of Illinois Your Next Customer, STATE OF ILLINOIS DEPARTMENT OF CENTRAL MANAGEMENT SERVICES, <https://tinyurl.com/Sell2Illinois>. Each of the State of Illinois' 934 government agencies relies on the services of private party vendors to at least some extent, whether as a supplier, a contractor, a partner, or a direct service provider. See ILLINOIS PURCHASING GROUP, <https://tinyurl.com/bidnetdirect>. Illinois state and municipal governments turn to private parties to effectively and efficiently provide a wide variety of products and services, including, as described in Wexford's Petition for Leave to Appeal (at 14), services that the government would not be able to provide on its own. Indeed, it is difficult to conceive of an arm of government that does not rely, at least to some extent, on private providers.

Illinois state and municipal leaders have, through their extensive and ongoing engagement in this practice, demonstrated their belief in the benefits of partnering with private entities. And these leaders have good reason to be confident. There is extensive evidence of the value that public-private partnerships bring to governments and the people they serve. In such arrangements, the “[p]rivate sector contractor accepts risks and responsibility for (some or all of) design, construction, financing, maintenance and operations” of a project, while the “[p]ublic sector retains strategic control over service delivery.” 2016 Engineering & Construction Conference, DELOITTE (June 15-17, 2016), <https://tinyurl.com/yxc4t5sj>. State entities “have [also] used [public-private] partnership agreements successfully to gain access to capital, develop capital assets, provide services more efficiently, or provide large infusions of cash to help fund other organizational priorities.” Public-

Private Partnerships (P3), GOVERNMENT FINANCE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION (Jan. 2015) <https://tinyurl.com/P3GFOA>. Moreover, “[a] variety of [government] agencies have explored and even embraced such partnerships as a solution to some of the most intractable and complex problems agencies face.” Public-Private Partnerships: A Legal Primer, AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, 7, <https://tinyurl.com/ABAP3primer>.

Illinois’ ability to continue to effectuate this model, however, depends on fostering a legislative environment conducive to such partnerships. Critical to this environment is recognition of the value companies place on protecting their private information when doing business with the government. Indeed, companies will make decisions based, in part, on such considerations, as noted in the Amazon headquarters example previously discussed in Wexford’s Petition for Leave to Appeal (at 15-16).

It now falls to this Court to protect and effectuate the legislature’s dual goals of public disclosure and effective public-private partnership. Otherwise, the State of Illinois and its citizens will suffer the consequences—including governmental bodies distracted and burdened with the task of responding to increased FOIA requests seeking documents in the sole possession of private parties; the use of scarce governmental resources to obtain documents from the private parties who possess them (as FOIA does not authorize requestors to seek those documents directly from private parties), see 5 ILCS 140/3(c); and strained working relationships between government entities and their private partners. All of these consequences will negatively impact governmental bodies' ability to serve the people of Illinois.

VIII. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Wexford respectfully seeks this Court's recognition that Section 2.20 is the exclusive statutory authority for the disclosure of settlement agreements pursuant to FOIA, and this section does not permit disclosure of the Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement. If this Court concludes that Section 7(2) could apply to settlement agreements, Wexford asks this Court to hold that it would not so apply here. The Confidential Franco Settlement Agreement does not meet Section 7(2)'s heightened nexus test because it does not "directly relate" to Wexford's governmental function. For all of these reasons, Wexford respectfully asks this Court to reverse the Fourth District's decision.

OPINION

¶ 1 Wexford Health Sources, Inc. (Wexford), provides medical, dental, vision, pharmaceutical, and mental health services to prisoners in the Department of Corrections (Department). In August 2015, Wexford entered into a confidential settlement agreement with the estate of a prisoner who allegedly died from inadequate medical care. Later that month, Bruce Rushton and the Illinois Times (plaintiffs) filed a freedom of information request pursuant to the Illinois Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) (5 ILCS 140/1 et seq. (West 2014)) in which plaintiffs requested a copy from the Department of Wexford's settlement agreement.

¶ 2 In September 2015, the Department requested an unredacted copy of the settlement agreement from Wexford, but Wexford refused this request. In December 2015,

Wexford provided a redacted copy of the settlement agreement to the Department. However, Wexford would not give the Department an unredacted version of the settlement agreement. Ultimately, the Department gave plaintiffs a copy of the redacted settlement agreement.

¶ 3 In April 2017, plaintiffs filed a complaint against the Department requesting the release of the unredacted settlement agreement. Later that month, Wexford intervened in the lawsuit and stated that the Department did not have an unredacted version of the settlement agreement in its possession.

¶ 4 In December 2017, Wexford filed a motion for summary judgment in which it argued that the confidential settlement agreement is not covered by FOIA because it is not a public record that “directly relates” to a governmental function. See 5 ILCS 140/7(2) (West 2016) (“A public record that is *** in the possession of a party [who] *** has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the public body, and that directly relates to the governmental function ***, shall be considered a public record of the public body ***.”). Alternatively, Wexford argued that portions of the settlement agreement should be redacted pursuant to FOIA. See id. § 7(1). In February 2018, the trial court granted Wexford’s motion for summary judgment, concluding that the settlement agreement did not “directly relate” to a governmental function.

¶ 5 Plaintiffs appeal, arguing that the settlement agreement “directly relates” to a governmental function. We agree and reverse and remand for further proceedings.

¶ 6 I. BACKGROUND

¶ 7 A. The FOIA Request

¶ 8 Bruce Rushton is a journalist for the Illinois Times, which is a newspaper based in Springfield, Illinois. In August 2015, pursuant to FOIA, plaintiffs requested that the Department turn over “[a]ll settlement agreements pertaining to claims and/or lawsuits filed in connection with the death of Alfonso Franco, a former inmate at [the] Taylorville Correctional Center who died from cancer in 2012.” Plaintiffs elaborated that “[t]his request includes but is not limited to settlement agreements involving any private entities charged with providing health care to Mr. Franco, including but not limited to Wexford Health Sources.”

¶ 9 In relevant part, FOIA provides as follows:

“A public record that is not in the possession of a public body but is in the possession of a party with whom the agency has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the public body, and that directly relates to the governmental function and is not otherwise exempt under this Act, shall be considered a public record of the public body, for purposes of this Act.” (Emphasis added.) 5 ILCS 140/7(2) (West 2014).

¶ 10 In September 2015, the Department requested an unredacted copy of the settlement agreement from Wexford, but Wexford refused this request. In December 2015, Wexford provided a redacted copy of the settlement agreement to the Department.

¶ 11 In August 2016, the Department renewed its request for an unredacted copy of the settlement agreement. The Department intended to review the unredacted copy and, if applicable, redact the agreement pursuant to FOIA and provide it to plaintiffs. The Department stated that if Wexford did not give it an unredacted copy, it would provide the redacted copy to plaintiffs. However, Wexford would not give the Department an unredacted version of the settlement agreement. Ultimately, the Department gave plaintiffs a copy of the redacted settlement agreement.

¶ 12 In April 2017, plaintiffs filed a complaint against the Department in which it requested the release of the unredacted settlement agreement. Later that month, Wexford was given leave to intervene in the lawsuit. Wexford filed an answer in which it noted that the Department did not have an unredacted copy of the settlement agreement.

¶ 13 B. The Motions for Summary Judgment

¶ 14 In December 2017, Wexford filed a motion for summary judgment in which it argued that (1) the confidential settlement agreement is not covered by FOIA because it is not a public record that “directly relates” to a governmental function or, in the alternative, (2) portions of the settlement agreement should be redacted pursuant to FOIA. 5 ILCS 140/7(1), (2) (West 2016).

¶ 15 Later that month, plaintiffs filed a motion for summary judgment in which they argued (1) the settlement agreement “directly relates” to a governmental function, (2) Wexford had waived any redaction argument, and (3) the settlement agreement should not be partially redacted.

¶ 16 C. The Trial Court’s Order

¶ 17 In February 2018, the trial court granted Wexford’s motion for summary judgment. The court concluded that FOIA did not require the disclosure of the settlement agreement because it did not “directly relate” to a governmental function. Id. § 7(2). As a result, the court did not consider whether the settlement agreement should be partially redacted pursuant to FOIA. Id. § 7(1).

¶ 18 This appeal followed.

¶ 19 II. ANALYSIS

¶ 20 Plaintiffs appeal, arguing that the settlement agreement “directly relates” to a governmental function. We agree and reverse and remand for further proceedings.

¶ 21

A. The Applicable Law

¶ 22

Summary judgment is proper only if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. 735 ILCS 5/2-1005(c) (West 2016). When parties file cross-motions for summary judgment, they agree that only a question of law is involved and invite the court to decide the issues based on the record. Pielet v. Pielet, 2012 IL 112064, ¶ 28, 978 N.E.2d 1000. An order granting summary judgment is reviewed de novo. Uphoff v. Grosskopf, 2013 IL App (4th) 130422, ¶ 11, 2 N.E.3d 498.

¶ 23

FOIA requires that a public body “make available to any person for inspection or copying all public records, except as otherwise provided.” 5 ILCS 140/3(a) (West 2016). A public body includes “all legislative, executive, administrative, or advisory bodies of the State.” Id. § 2(a). A public record is “all records, reports, forms, writings, letters, memoranda, *** and all other documentary materials pertaining to the transaction of public business.” Id. § 2(c).

¶ 24

FOIA can also require the production of public records that are in the possession of private parties. Section 7(2) of FOIA provides as follows:

“A public record that is not in the possession of a public body but is in the possession of a party with whom the agency has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of the public body, and that directly relates to the governmental function and is not otherwise exempt under this Act, shall be considered a public record of the public body, for purposes of this Act.” (Emphasis added.) Id. § 7(2).

The purpose of FOIA is to open public records “to the light of public scrutiny.” (Internal quotation marks omitted.) City of Champaign v. Madigan, 2013 IL App (4th) 120662, ¶ 29, 992 N.E.2d 629. “In furtherance of this policy, FOIA is to be liberally construed while exemptions are to be read narrowly.” State Journal-Register v. University of Illinois Springfield, 2013 IL App (4th) 120881, ¶ 21, 994 N.E.2d 705; see also Peoria Journal Star v. City of Peoria, 2016 IL App (3d) 140838, ¶ 13, 52 N.E.3d 711.

¶ 26 In Better Government Ass’n v. Illinois High School Ass’n, 2017 IL 121124, ¶ 62, 89 N.E.3d 376, the supreme court interpreted the purpose of section 7(2) and concluded as follows:

“The BGA [(Better Government Association)] asserts that in adding section 7(2), it was the General Assembly’s intent to respond to the growing concern related to the privatization of government responsibilities and its impact on the right of public information access and transparency. As the BGA points out, when governmental functions are privatized, there is a risk of decreased accountability and transparency. We agree that such an interpretation is consistent with the purpose of the FOIA, which is expressly based on a policy of full, complete disclosure regarding the affairs of government to promote accountability in government and an informed citizenry. 5 ILCS 140/1 (West 2014); Bowie v. Evanston Community Consolidated School District No. 65, 128 Ill. 2d 373, 378-79 (1989). To that end, we agree that section 7(2) ensures that governmental entities must not be permitted to avoid their disclosure obligations by contractually delegating their responsibility to a private entity.”

¶ 27 In Chicago Tribune v. College of Du Page, 2017 IL App (2d) 160274, ¶ 47, 79 N.E.3d 694, the Chicago Tribune requested that the court define the term “ ‘governmental function’ ” as it relates to section 7(2) of FOIA. The Second District declined this request, reasoning as follows:

“[W]e are hesitant to adopt a sweeping pronouncement of black letter law in this case, because it might prove to be insufficiently flexible to account for the myriad of governmental entities to which FOIA applies, to say nothing of the individualized governmental functions they each perform. Rather, we believe that such analysis must be subject to a fact-specific inquiry ***.” Id. ¶48.

¶ 28 The primary rule of statutory construction is to ascertain and give effect to the intent of the legislature. In re Jarquan B., 2017 IL 121483, ¶ 22, 102 N.E.3d 182. The best indicator of the legislature’s intent is the plain and ordinary meaning of the statute. In re J.C., 2012 IL App (4th) 110861, ¶ 19, 966 N.E.2d 453. When the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous, it should be applied as written without resort to extrinsic aids of construction. Poris v. Lake Holiday Property Owners Ass’n, 2013 IL 113907, ¶ 47, 983 N.E.2d 993. “Additionally, in determining the legislative intent of a statute, a court may consider not only the language used, but also the reason and necessity for the law, the evils sought to be remedied, and the purposes to be achieved.” Prazen v. Shoop, 2013 IL 115035, ¶ 21, 998 N.E.2d 1. Courts should construe words and phrases in light of other relevant provisions. In re C.P., 2018 IL App (4th) 180310, ¶ 18. Statutory interpretation is a question of law reviewed de novo. City of Champaign, 2013 IL App (4th) 120662, ¶ 28.

¶ 29 B. This Case

¶ 30 We initially note that FOIA does not define the term “directly relates,” which appears in section 7(2). See 5 ILCS 140/2, 7(2) (West 2016). However, similar to the Second District in College of Du Page, we decline to define this term because any definition might prove to be insufficiently flexible in future cases. College of Du Page, 2017 IL App (2d) 160274, ¶ 48. Instead, we conclude that whether a public record “directly relates” to a governmental function is a fact-specific inquiry. Id. Furthermore, the term “directly relates” must be liberally construed in light of FOIA’s purpose. City of Champaign, 2013 IL App (4th) 120662, ¶ 29; Peoria Journal Star, 2016 IL App (3d) 140838, ¶ 13.

¶ 31 In this case, Wexford contracted to provide medical care to prisoners in the Department. In so doing, Wexford, a private party, contracted with the Department, a public body, to perform a governmental function. See People v. Manning, 371 Ill. App. 3d 457, 462, 863 N.E.2d 289, 295 (2007) (“[t]he eighth amendment to the federal constitution [citation] requires that prison officials ensure that inmates receive adequate medical care.”)

¶ 32 Here, plaintiffs requested “[a]ll settlement agreements pertaining to claims and/or lawsuits filed in connection with the death of Alfonso Franco, a former inmate at [the] Taylorville Correctional Center who died from cancer in 2012.” Plaintiffs elaborated that “[t]his request includes *** settlement agreements involving any private entities charged with providing health care to Mr. Franco, including but not limited to Wexford Health Sources.” The Department tried to accommodate this request, but Wexford refused to give an unredacted copy of the settlement agreement.

¶ 33 Based on the unique and undisputed facts of this case, we conclude that Wexford’s settlement agreement directly relates to a governmental function because that settlement agreement involved the settling of a claim arising out of its rendering of medical care. See 5 ILCS 140/7(2) (West 2016); Manning, 371 Ill. App. 3d at 462. This conclusion is buttressed by the purpose of section 7(2), which is to address “the growing concern related to the privatization of government responsibilities and its impact on the right of public information access and transparency.” Illinois High School Ass’n, 2017 IL 121124, ¶ 62. Accordingly, we hold that the trial court erred when it concluded that Wexford’s settlement agreement did not directly relate to a governmental function. See 5 ILCS 140/7(2) (West 2016).

C. Redactions

¶ 35

Because the trial court wrongly concluded that FOIA did not require the disclosure of the settlement agreement, it did not consider whether the settlement agreement should be partially redacted. On remand, the trial court should consider this secondary issue.

III. CONCLUSION

¶ 37

For the reasons stated, we reverse the trial court's order and remand for further proceedings.

Case No. 17-MR-324

ORDER ON CROSS-MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter comes before this Court on the Plaintiff's request for documents pursuant to the Illinois Freedom of Information Act, 5 ILCS 104/1 et seq. ("FOIA"). At issue is a settlement agreement entered into between the estate of former Illinois Department of Corrections ("IDOC") inmate Alfonso Franco and Intervenor Wexford Health Services, Inc. ("Wexford"), a private company that contracts with the State of Illinois to provide healthcare services to IDOC inmates. The parties agree that Wexford is a private party with whom IDOC has contracted to perform a governmental function on behalf of a public body.

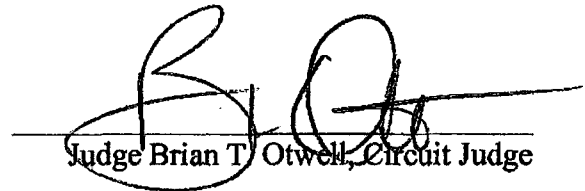

At issue in this case is whether the settlement agreement is subject to disclosure pursuant to Section 7(2) of FOIA or any other provision of FOIA. The parties have submitted cross-motions for summary determination on that question, and oral argument was heard on both motions on February 16, 2018 at 10:30 a.m.

For the reasons stated on the record at the February 18, 2018 hearing, the Court finds that 5 ILCS 140/7(2) does not authorize disclosure of the settlement agreement because the business decision to settle claims does not "directly relate" to the governmental function performed by Wexford. The Court further finds that 5 ILCS 140/2.20 does not authorize disclosure of the settlement agreement because Wexford is not a public body.

Accordingly, for the reasons stated on the record, which shall be incorporated by reference as part of this Order, Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment is denied and Intervenor Wexford Health Services, Inc.'s Motion for Summary Judgment is allowed. Exhibit A to Defendant Wexford's Index of Withheld Documents (the settlement agreement) shall remain sealed in the record. This is a final and appealable order with no just cause to delay its enforcement.

Entered 2/26/18, 2018.

1           THE COURT: This is case number 2   17-MR-324, Rushton vs. Illinois Department of 3   Corrections, Defendant, and Wexford Health 4   Services as Intervenor. Matter comes on for 5   hearing on cross motions for summary judgment 6   by Rushton and Wexford. Counsel, you want to 7   go clockwise from my perspective and 8   introduce yourselves and the parties you 9   represent, please.

10          MR. DEVOOGHT: Good morning, your Honor,
11   Andrew DeVooght, D-E-V-O-O-G-H-T. I
12   represent Wexford.

13          THE COURT: Thank you.

14          MR. RAMAGE: Andy Ramage, your Honor, 15   Wexford.

16          MS. RUVINSKY: Nina Ruvinsky,
17   R-U-V-I-N-S-K-Y, Wexford.

18          MR. GRADY: Dylan Grady on behalf of 19   IDOC, your Honor.

20          THE COURT: All right, thank you.

21          MR. CRAVEN: Don Craven and John Myers 22   on behalf of Mr. Rushton, who is also 23   present.

24          THE COURT: Very good. As I indicated,

1 I'll hear from the Plaintiff on its Motion
2 For Summary Judgment in this matter. I will 3 indicate for the record that I have received
4 the Index and unredacted Settlement Agreement
5 and have reviewed same prior to today's 6 hearing. Those are sealed -- the unredacted 7 copy of the settlement document is sealed in 8 the record and will remain so pending the 9 outcome of this hearing. All right, so I'll 10 hear from the Plaintiff.

11 MR. CRAVEN: Thank you, your Honor.
12 This is a FOIA request for a Settlement
13 Agreement between the former inmate or 14 inmate's family and Wexford, and we think 15 this is a case that is tailor made for the 16 application of Section 7(2) of the Freedom of 17 Information Act, which was inserted into the 18 Act in 2010 to allow access to public records
19 in the possession of contractors for public 20 bodies when those records are related to the 21 services to be performed by that contractor.
22 In this case, we're dealing with IDOC and its 23 obligations, its very broad obligations under 24 Illinois law and the constitution to provide

1 health care to the inmates held in the 2 Department. We've quoted the law. We've 3 also quoted the language in the Wexford IDOC
4 contract, establishing again the very broad 5 parameters of the obligations of the State
6 under the law and the obligations of Wexford 7 to IDOC to provide health care to the 8 inmates. In this case, we're asking for a 9 Settlement Agreement which is related not 10 necessarily to the performance of duties by 11 Wexford, but perhaps more properly said, the 12 alleged failure of performance of duties by 13 Wexford. Wexford, a broad variety of Wexford
14 employees were sued by an inmate for failure
15 to perform or failure to provide adequate 16 health care, and that lawsuit was then 17 settled. We had provided the Court with a 18 variety of Attorney General's opinions on the 19 issue of access to settlement agreements and 20 the application of 7(2). We provided the 21 Court with the College of DuPage decision 22 related to the proper application of 23 Section 7(2) of FOIA, and we think that under 24 Section 7(2) and the applicable law, this

1 Settlement Agreement is a public record
2 subject to disclosure, technically under the 3 Act by IDOC, not necessarily by Wexford, but 4 it is a public record subject to disclosure
5 under the Act. Wexford raised no exemptions
6 to disclosure in their pleadings. They have 7 raised some in their Motion For Summary
8 Judgment. They allege that this is private 9 information, that some of the redacted 10 information might be private information as 11 defined in the Act, and, frankly, if there 12 are that kind of information in the 13 Settlement Agreement such as Social Security
14 numbers and that kind of stuff
15 (unintelligible), but as to the other, I
16 think that list of what's private information 17 is in the Act; the Court is well aware of 18 that; it's quoted in the pleadings, and that 19 information may remain redacted. They also 20 make an argument that this is trade secret
21 information because it's not paid. It's paid 22 by Wexford or their insurer, not paid with 23 public funds. Those kinds of arguments
24 frankly we have dealt with for many years,

1 and the courts and the public access
2 counselor have been rather consistent that 3 settlement agreements by or on behalf of 4 public bodies, even if paid by an insurance 5 company, aren't trade secrets. Clearly in 6 this case and Wexford makes the interesting 7 announcement that any monies that it would 8 pay or its insurance company would pay to 9 inmates or families of inmates at DOC would 10 have no impact on the amount of money paid by 11 DOC, insert taxpayers, in future contracts 12 for services. That's just silly. It's 13 rather elementary that you have to factor in 14 the cost of these sorts of unfortunate
15 circumstances into the cost of doing business 16 with the Department of Corrections. They 17 allege that the names of their employees, the 18 release of the names of their employees would 19 be an invasion of privacy. The names of at 20 least some of the employees are contained in 21 the public record also attached to our Motion
22 For Summary Judgment, and I would also point 23 the Court to the PAC opinion attached to our 24 motion, indicating that a settlement

1 agreement in a sexual harassment case is a
2 public record, even when paid by an insurance 3 company, and it's a public record including 4 the names of the victims of sexual 5 harassment; those names must be produced. I
6 simply don't see the logic behind a claim
7 that the names of people paid by a public 8 contractor, the release of those names would 9 be an invasion of privacy when the release of 10 the name of a victim of a sexual harassment 11 claim must be released. In short, Judge, we 12 think this is -- this is why 7(2) was 13 inserted into the Act. We would ask the 14 Court to find that it's public record and to 15 order its disclosure. I would note, and I 16 have to say that I'm very sad that 17 Ms. McNaught couldn't be here today because 18 she's left the AG's office, but this would be 19 the first time in many years that in a FOIA 20 case we agree that it's a public record and 21 should be disclosed, and the general counsel 22 for IDOC agreed that this was a record that 23 is subject to the provisions of the IDOC 24 Wexford contract and should likewise be

1 disclosed. We would ask the Court to agree
2 with us, the Department, and IDOC and order
3 the disclosure of the Settlement Agreement.
4 Thank you.

5 THE COURT: All right, thank you. I'll 6 hear from Defendant Wexford.

7 MR. DEVOOGHT: Thank you, your Honor.
8 Your Honor, before I start, if I may 9 approach, I just have a couple --

10 THE COURT: You may.

11 MR. DEVOOGHT: -- a couple handouts,
12 statutory, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Very good.

14 MR. DEVOOGHT: Your Honor, we agree, 15 Wexford agrees this case is about whether or 16 not Section 7(2) applies, and I have these 17 very basic pieces of paper here because what 18 I want to do is focus on the actual statute, 19 because we have, with all respect, a sort of 20 broad, sweeping argument about the statute,
21 and there was suggestion that Mr. Rushton's 22 counsel has pointed your Honor to all the 23 applicable law, but it's just not true, and 24 when one looks at the standard, we have a

1 public record that is not in the possession 2 of a public body, but is in the possession of 3 a party with whom the agency has contracted 4 to perform a governmental function on behalf 5 of the public body. That's Wexford. The 6 last part, and it directly relates to the 7 governmental function, and, your Honor, what 8 Mr. Rushton's counsel is going to highlight 9 for your Honor is when you look at the 10 statute, you can understand what directly 11 relate action means by looking at the other 12 provisions of the statute and understand that 13 in this the FOIA context there is a balance 14 that's been struck between when you are 15 dealing with a private party and its 16 documents and a governmental entity and its 17 documents, and even a private party,
18 your Honor, that is providing governmental 19 function, and that section is the actual 20 definition of public record. Your Honor, the 21 second piece of paper in the stack, public 22 records mean, and then they cite all these 23 different types of materials. All other 24 documents or materials pertaining to the

1 transaction of public business, regardless of 2 physical form or characteristics, having been 3 prepared by or for or having been or being 4 used by, received by, in the possession of or 5 under the control of any public body, and so,
6 your Honor, when you hold these two statutes, 7 these two provisions together, which is the 8 next slide, the language and that directly 9 relates to the governmental function, it
10 means something. It means it is a heightened 11 standard. There's more of a connection, when 12 you're talking about a private party's 13 document, to the actual performance of the 14 governmental function than if you simply have 15 a document that is IDOC, that is a document 16 that IDOC created or a document that was 17 prepared for IDOC, and that matters in this 18 case, and that's not my argument, Judge; 19 that's a recognition of the statute, and 20 frankly the Tribune case that Mr. Craven 21 cites, your Honor, the Tribune case, which we 22 quote in paragraph 21 of our brief, says,
23 referring to Section 7(2), this requirement 24 makes clear the legislature's intention that

1 the general public may not access all of a 2 third party's records merely because it is 3 contracted with a public body to perform a 4 governmental function. FOIA is not concerned
5 with private affairs. The fact that a 6 private company's acts may be connected with 7 a governmental function does not create a
8 public body or non exist it, and, your Honor, 9 this document is exactly the case. When you 10 look at other types of documents in this 11 litigation, there's no question Wexford
12 provides health care, that the underlying 13 lawsuit involved health care, but as 14 your Honor knows as well as anyone, this is a 15 document-by-document analysis, and that 16 standard means something when you're talking
17 about a document in IDOC's possession
18 pertaining to the transaction of public
19 business. That's unquestionably a lower 20 standard, and this balance is struck all 21 across the statute. Your Honor, there's a 22 reason for example, the trade secrets
23 exemption, the trade secrets exemption for 24 documents of private parties, the Courts have

1 said -- again I can't take credit for this 2 argument, but as Mr. Craven is aware, we just 3 had a lawsuit with Judge Schmidt, who we all 4 continue to miss, involving our manuals and 5 our manuals, some of which were involved in 6 providing care, and if those manuals were 7 actually involved in providing care, we 8 didn't say they didn't directly relate to the 9 provision of the governmental function.
10 Wexford wasn't trying to hide it; that's a 11 document that directly related. Similarly in 12 this litigation, a document talking with 13 HIPAA concerns and the like, Judge, it's 14 outside the scope of this, but a doctor's 15 notes and diagnoses, a document regarding 16 care that was given or not given, but 17 your Honor has the document. This is a 18 business decision, and Section 6 specifically 19 denounces the notion that this document
20 somehow -- the Plaintiffs acknowledge that 21 it's somehow an acknowledgment of guilt or 22 that it's any sort of discussion of,
23 assessment of, or critique or acknowledgment 24 of any fault in the medical care, and the

1 point is that in this case, the argument that 2 Mr. Craven makes at the superficial level 3 sounds good, but there is a balance that the 4 legislature and the courts have drawn, have 5 struck, and it's implicated here. This 6 language directly relates has to mean 7 something more than simply pertaining to the 8 transaction of public business. And,
9 your Honor, all you have to do is look at the 10 cases that Mr. Craven has cited throughout 11 the course of this discussion. They're all 12 cited and discussed in our brief, Judge, so I 13 won't go through everything, but just to give 14 you some examples. And this is the thing, I 15 think the most important take-away, it is a 16 document-by-document analysis. It's not -- I 17 mean the argument is because Wexford provides 18 health care, all their documents and the 19 lawsuit relates to health care, that every 20 document, and that's not -- that's just not 21 the law, and the examples that they rely on, 22 Judge, they involve instances where the 23 documents do directly relate. City of 24 Martinsville is the first public access

1 opinion Mr. Craven has cited. The City of 2 Martinsville case, Judge, they were asking 3 for -- they built a sidewalk, and they were 4 asking for the engineering records in that 5 case regarding the materials used, the hours
6 worked, things that directly, clearly 7 directly related to the building of the 8 sidewalk. The second case, Northstar
9 Lottery, Judge, Northstar Lottery is the case
10 where the Illinois -- the government farmed
11 out a component of running the Illinois 12 Lottery, and there, there were contracts at 13 issue, Judge, and there, the decision was 14 made that those contracts directly related.
15 Well those contracts, Judge, specifically 16 outlined the price, and more importantly the 17 services that the third party was providing, 18 Judge. The document laid out exactly what 19 the governmental function was that they were 20 going to perform. Well that makes sense that 21 that directly relates. So those two 22 examples, and the last example that 23 Mr. Craven cites, your Honor, is the charter 24 school case. As your Honor knows, it's

1 attached, and I'm sure your Honor has 2 reviewed it, nine or ten of those eleven 3 pages or twelve pages focus on do those two 4 entities, are they one entity or are they 5 separate entities, and because the opinion 6 finds them to be the same entity, says, those 7 documents in your possession are considered
8 those documents in your possession, Judge.

9 THE COURT: Now that case was a case
10 where, if I recall, and I haven't -- it's 11 been a while since I read it, but that was an 12 issue as to -- that was a public body issue, 13 was it not?

14 MR. DEVOOGHT: It was, and there is a 15 last paragraph, Judge, and, you know,
16 Mr. Craven is an excellent attorney and 17 enjoyed working with. There's one paragraph 18 at the end that says, assuming, arguendo,
19 Judge, that you are separate entities, it 20 says the documents related to the 21 construction of the charter school directly 22 relate. So there is one paragraph that is 23 arguably -- it's not the dispositive part of 24 the decision; it's arguably dicta, but it's

1 in there, and I still think it's instructive,
2 because in that case, Judge, Mr. Craven notes 3 that they're charged with the management of 4 the Charter Schools. The Charter Schools
5 didn't exist; they created them. They had to 6 build them, and so these are documents where 7 they literally are physically through brick
8 and mortar building there, with the State
9 funds, which I'll get to in a second, with 10 the State funds that are given to them 11 specifically to build these buildings that 12 they then in turn manage. So I think even 13 then, Judge, it's apples to oranges, and it's 14 really important to me, your Honor, that we 15 are not in here arguing about even other 16 settlement agreements or other documents that 17 may come down the pipe; we are talking about 18 a specific document and whether or not that 19 specific document directly relates. In this 20 case, we believe that when you look at it and 21 if you look at it, this balance struck in the 22 statute that I think respectfully is not 23 highlighted by the Plaintiffs but is 24 highlighted by the Chicago Tribune case,

1 your Honor, that not every document becomes a 2 public document just because you are 3 performing a governmental function, and I'd 4 like to then, Judge, address if I may the 5 argument and the reference to these 6 settlement agreements and this notion that 7 they have been dealing through the years with 8 cases that are analogous to this case.
9 Respectfully that's just not true. It 10 actually highlights another bargain or 11 balance in the statute. The cases that 12 Mr. Craven is citing, every single one, 13 Judge, every one deals with Section 2.20 and 14 this idea of a settlement on behalf of or by 15 a public body, not -- and the statute clearly 16 recognizes and Chicago Tribune clearly 17 recognizes that just because you perform a 18 governmental function, you don't become a 19 public body, and it shows -- the legislature 20 is able to write with precision. If 21 Mr. Rushton wants to go lobby the legislature 22 to add a Section 2.21 that says, and also the 23 settlement agreements of third-party vendors
24 who provide a governmental function, he can

1 do that, but Section 2.20, Judge,
2 specifically says, by or on behalf of a 3 public body, so respectfully, those cases are 4 not applicable, because that provision is not 5 at issue, but to the extent to which counsel
6 is asking your Honor to glean a policy
7 argument from a statute that we argue I think 8 you look at the statute doesn't apply and 9 this argument of public funds, it's similarly 10 different, because in those cases, Judge, 11 those funds, they are either directly 12 allotted for those payments, for those 13 services, or as here we have a private party 14 making a decision and settling a case, and 15 the government and the -- and actually in the 16 decision, Judge, where Section 2.20 is 17 interpreted by the -- where we cited, Judge,
18 in our brief where the Attorney General -- 19 the policy arguments, Mr. Craven says we 20 articulate and how they apply to us, the 21 Attorney General highlights the clear
22 statutory language of Section 2.20, Judge, 23 and the clear statutory language, and that's 24 the last page of my handout, Judge,

1 Section 2.20, settlements and severance
2 agreements. All settlements and severance
3 agreements entered into by or on behalf of a 4 public body are public record subject to 5 inspection (unintelligible). Judge, when you 6 take 2.20 and you hold it up with 7(2), to 7 suggest that 2.20 paints with such a broad 8 brush that Wexford should be considered a 9 public body or that on behalf of a public 10 body, that that's just not correct, because 11 7(2) acknowledges, as the Tribune case, again
12 I don't mean to -- I very rarely quote a case
13 in an opening brief and a reply brief, but I 14 did it just because I think when you look at 15 the Tribune language, which a case Mr. Craven 16 touts, Judge, it explicitly says not every 17 third party becomes a public body, and that's 18 really critical for this case. It's really 19 critical given the specific, explicit 20 language of 2.20. The last thing, Judge, I 21 wanted to mention in terms of policy, and 22 this is important; these cases have no real 23 consequences, and Wexford, you know, this 24 notion that Wexford has not been transparent

1 or that Wexford's argument relates to not 2 being transparent, transparency, it's just 3 not true. Again with Section 7(2), if there 4 is a document that directly relates to the 5 carrying out of the governmental function,
6 then that document has to be disclosed.
7 There is no argument. That's exactly again, 8 Judge, I mean we prevailed with 9 Judge Schmidt. He read thousands of pages of 10 our manuals. As your Honor knows, that's the 11 type of judge that he was, and he read 12 literally thousands of pages of our manuals, 13 eight or nine manuals, and we gave those to 14 Plaintiffs' counsel under seal, just as we do 15 in any case if a Plaintiff needs those for an 16 underlying litigation, subject to protective 17 order, and having read those, acknowledge 18 yeah, they directly relate, but there's an 19 exemption for those, and I think when you 20 juxtapose the types of documents we're 21 talking about and we recognize the difference
22 in the statute, this particular document, 23 just this document, doesn't directly relate;
24 and the last part, in terms of those public

1 policy issues, Judge, and I argue public
2 policy only because I firmly believe -- I 3 wrote that memo that is attached that was 4 given to IDOC two or three years ago now 5 where I researched all the fifty states and 6 all I could come up with, as your Honor will 7 see, is the Pennsylvania case that I think 8 cuts in our favor, in terms of precision, the 9 information, the link it has to have when 10 you're talking about directly relate, so that 11 that language means something. It doesn't 12 mean the same thing as simply pertained, but 13 in this case, there are real world
14 consequences, and the most important one 15 isn't about money. Frankly, Mr. Rushton was 16 at a hearing that I was at -- it's all public 17 record -- in January, the Rasho case, Judge, 18 and I'm sure you're aware of it. It's the 19 case involving mental health and the 20 provision of mental health, and the biggest 21 issue after you read Mr. Rushton's scathing, 22 you know, review of IDOC and Wexford; it's no
23 secret, his view, but looking, as Judge Mihm 24 will, at the underlying issues, the biggest

1 issue in that case is staffing. Wexford has 2 hired -- it's all public record -- over five 3 hundred people in the last five years just 4 related to mental health, and we've lost more 5 than 250 of them because of, as your Honor 6 knows, the challenges that correctional 7 medicine presents in terms of unique
8 atmosphere, despite paying way above market, 9 one psychiatrist being paid six hundred 10 thousand dollars to try to get this talent in 11 there, and this lawsuit made public 12 invariably if it leads to more lawsuits, it's 13 yet another reason that we are going to have 14 a hard time retaining staff, and it has a 15 real-world impact, because the very subject 16 of the underlying Rasho case relates to 17 staffing and the difficulty in keeping our 18 staff, and when you add something like this,
19 a document that doesn't directly relate, it
20 has a real-world consequence, but more
21 importantly, under the statutes, 7(2) Section
22 2C and the 2.20, this document does not fall
23 within those provisions, and respectfully,
24 your Honor, we believe that your Honor ruling

1     that this particular document is not subject
2     to FOIA, it will not result in a lack of 3     transparency for the very arguments we're 4     making, because we are never going to stand 5     before this Court or any Court and argue that 6     a document doesn't directly relate when it 7     does. We are going to hope that there is an 8     exception or an exemption, and if not, we're 9     going to disclose it, which is the last point
10    I want to make, because as your Honor knows, 11    the reason that that legal memo is attached 12    as an exhibit, I wrote it, and when 13    Mr. Rushton came back and asked for 14    documents, I was driving to Springfield and I
15    called then General Counsel, now Judge Hunt, 16    and said, you have got to produce that memo; 17    we don't believe you have to produce the 18    settlement, but you have to produce the memo
19    I wrote because it's in your possession; it 20    was prepared for you. When you look at the 21    statute, that document need only pertain to 22    government business, but it's a different 23    standard in this case, and we would ask 24    your Honor to find that under that standard,

1 this particular document not be subject to 2 FOIA.

3 THE COURT: All right, so what about the 4 argument that the settlement record and 5 presumably one of the main things that is of 6 interest and certainly newsworthy would be 7 the amount of the settlement affects future
8 benefits, and if I'm wrongly paraphrasing
9 your argument, Mr. Craven, you can correct
10 me, but the amount of the settlement pertains 11 to any future contracts that Wexford may 12 enter into with DOC because Wexford is going 13 to have to include the amount of insurance 14 premiums that are paid in the future due to 15 past settlements, again correct me if I'm 16 wrong but --

17 MR. CRAVEN: -- fair summary.

18 THE COURT: -- and therefore that's a 19 matter of certainly of public interest, but 20 it's a matter that pertains to, to use the 21 language, it's a matter pertaining to the 22 transaction of public business because of the 23 amount of taxpayer money that's going to be 24 required to fund future contracts. Is that a

1 fair representation of your argument?

2 MR. CRAVEN: Yes.

3 THE COURT: Can you respond to that?

4 MR. DEVOOGHT: Yes, your Honor. In the 5 first instance, I don't think the fact that 6 even if it has that impact, that it means
7 that it directly relates to the performance 8 of the government function, because you are 9 talking about in this instance a document
10 that reflects the settlement of a case with a 11 backdrop being prior medical services
12 provided, and in this instance when you're 13 looking to something directly relate to the 14 performance of that governmental function.
15 It may be that first of all Wexford in terms
16 of talking to IDOC about the litigation, you 17 know, IDOC is aware of the litigation.
18 Second of all, even if it has an impact in 19 terms of the amount of money we have to 20 charge going forward, it still, Judge, when 21 you look at how the statute is balanced, it
22 doesn't mean that that document itself 23 directly relates to the provision of the 24 health care, and I think that that's the

1 balance that's struck here, because when you
2 look you have a private party versus a 3 government body, and in all those funds
4 cases, Judge, they are specifically with 5 Section 2.20, and if this a concern that 6 Mr. Rushton can persuade the legislature it's 7 of sufficient concern, I think actually the 8 argument highlights why did the government
9 feel the need to have specifically
10 Section 2.20 if that argument on its face 11 brings the document by itself back into the 12 statute. I mean if you think about it, 13 Judge, why did they add Section 2.20. To 14 make clear that a Settlement Agreement, which 15 we all know often says nothing about the 16 underlying subject, they literally added a
17 specific provision, Judge, to bring that type 18 of document under FOIA. Did they do that 19 because they didn't think (unintelligible)
20 fell under this broad language of pertains, 21 which is much broader than directly relates.
22 So I think it's really important to look at 23 when we have this specific provision, 2.20, 24 that specifically addresses that issue, and,

1 your Honor, it is in that context,
2 your Honor's good question, it's in that 3 context of 2.20, the public access opinion in 4 our brief, where the Attorney General first 5 articulates those policy arguments, but again 6 that's the same opinion where the 7 Attorney General, not us, not Wexford, says,
8 the clear unambiguous language of 2.20 9 relates to a public body. So if the 10 legislature decides that those same policy 11 arguments should apply to a third party, they 12 can tweak the statute, but as written and as 13 applied and even as argued by the 14 Attorney General, who Mr. Craven is asking 15 you to follow their view here, the 16 Attorney General emphasized that that statute 17 applies to public bodies and that its 18 language is clear, and although those policy 19 arguments in theory may transfer over, the 20 statute only authorizes it with respect to 21 public bodies, and so the fact that you have 22 that specific provision of settlement
23 agreements I think undercuts the notion that 24 one can shoehorn in the settlement agreement

1 under directly relates.

2 THE COURT: Let me ask because I'm 3 interested in today's environment, Mr. Craven
4 made reference to the settlement agreements 5 involving sexual harassment and the 6 requirement that those -- that the FOIA
7 provides for disclosure or requires 8 disclosure, and frankly I cannot recall the 9 authority that's being cited in that regard 10 so.

11 MR. CRAVEN: It's a PAC opinion,
12 your Honor.

13 MR. DEVOOGHT: First of all, Judge, if 14 that's one of the cases we've cited, I'd go 15 back to two things. One, all of the public 16 cases that I'm aware of that he cites in 17 terms of public, all the settlement
18 agreements he cites, none of them is with a 19 private party. It may be an insurer on 20 behalf of the public body, Judge, first of 21 all, but it is not a private party with 22 (unintelligible). That's number one. Number 23 two, the extent to which -- yeah, the extent 24 to which it involves sexual harassment,

1 Judge, all those cases that he cites -- this 2 is critical -- involve a public body and 3 public employees. They do not involve 4 private parties, and that really is the 5 dispositive difference, and it may be that 6 Mr. Craven and Mr. Rushton want the statute 7 to be broader than it is, but 2.20 is very 8 specific. It says, by or on behalf of a 9 public body, and the reason that that's so
10 critical and dispositive, if the whole
11 statute didn't have any other distinctions it 12 would draw, that argument might have more
13 traction, but when you look at 7(2) and it 14 talks about the idea of there being third
15 parties that provided governmental function
16 but they're not called public bodies, or you
17 read the Tribune case and they talk, Judge, 18 about just because you are a private party
19 performing a governmental function, you don't 20 become a public body, that underscores the 21 same is true; these are public employees, and 22 so I'm not aware of a specific -- again if 23 the legislature wants to have a specific 24 provision about all sexual harassment cases,

1    whether they're public or private bodies,
2    public employees, private employees, they can 3    do that, but under the existing law and the 4    framework, there is a clear distinction that 5    is drawn, and again this is I think the most 6    important point. It is not a matter of there 7    not being transparency; it is a balance that 8    is struck between, if you're talking directly 9    about a public body or if you're talking 10   about a private party, it's performing a 11   service, and if it's a private party 12   performing a service, there has to be more of 13   that connection, and so, you know, in this 14   case, you think about it, Judge, IDOC wasn't 15   a party to this lawsuit; they weren't a party 16   to this settlement. They didn't even have 17   this document. That goes to that when you 18   look at public record, they never had it;
19   they never asked for it before this; it 20   wasn't something prepared for them; they 21   didn't know anything about it, because it was 22   a private business decision by Wexford, and I 23   think, you know, the reason I keep harping on 24   transparency is because I understand that

1 someone would say, well if you have these 2 policy arguments that you think underscore 3 why your client is a public body, aren't 4 those important when they apply to a private 5 party. They are, but there's also -- again
6 this isn't my argument, Judge; this is across 7 the statute and across the courts -- a
8 balance that is struck, and more is required
9 when you are talking about a private party.

10 THE COURT: All right, thank you,
11 Mr. DeVooght. Before I hear your response, 12 Mr. Craven, Mr. Grady, do you have?

13 MR. GRADY: Your Honor, the AG's Office
14 defers to Wexford and Plaintiff. It's their 15 fight, and we'll follow the Court's order.

16 THE COURT: All right, thank you. All 17 right, Mr. Craven.

18 MR. CRAVEN: Counsel said very clearly
19 that not every body becomes a public body 20 just because they have a contract with the 21 State. This is not a public body case.

22 THE COURT: Right.

23 MR. CRAVEN: This case is about a
24 contract that IDOC and the Attorney General

1 say should have been turned over to the 2 Department when they asked for it, and 3 Wexford, in the interest of transparency, 4 refused. If they had complied with the 5 contract as IDOC and the Attorney General set 6 forth in the pleading, if they had complied
7 with the contract, this very clearly falls
8 within the definition of public record, 9 because it was then in the possession of and 10 received by IDOC, and their arguments are 11 gone. Why Section 2.20? And I'll be brief, 12 but I was sort of there, and Section 2.20 was 13 put into the statute in a naive effort to 14 avoid this very argument that somehow the 15 payment of settlement agreements is a trade 16 secret, is a commercial decision. No, it's 17 not. A settlement agreement impacts 18 fundamentally the amount of money paid by 19 taxpayers for services either by public
20 bodies or contractors for public bodies.
21 Many of the cases involving settlement
22 agreements that I made reference to earlier
23 predate 2.20, but we had the argument over 24 and over and over, so 2.20 was inserted into

1 the statute in an effort to avoid further
2 arguments about the secrecy of settlement
3 agreements, and obviously, given this case
4 and the number of PAC opinions, was an 5 unsuccessful effort to avoid further 6 arguments, but that's why it was inserted.
7 This directly relates to the governmental 8 function of providing adequate health care to 9 inmates in the Department and the cost of 10 providing adequate health care to the inmates
11 in the Department. There is a real-world
12 consequence to hiding settlement agreements.
13 There's a real-world consequence to the cost 14 of injured and now deceased inmates not 15 receiving the adequate health care that IDOC 16 thought they were paying for. This is a 17 document dead center under 7(2), and we would 18 ask that it be released.

19 THE COURT: All right, thank you.
20 Mr. DeVooght, since you also filed a Motion 21 For Summary Judgment, I suppose it's 22 appropriate to allow you to respond.

23 MR. DEVOOGHT: Just very briefly and 24 just to the reply. Number one, there's no

1 case support citation for this notion that 2 2.20 applies to private parties, first of 3 all. It says what it says; it says public 4 bodies on or behalf, and that's the statute;
5 that's the applicable law. There's no case
6 citation whatsoever by Mr. Craven anywhere in 7 his papers that 2.20 should apply to a 8 private party, number one. Number two,
9 Judge, I only cited Chicago Tribune because 10 that was a case, your Honor, the first time
11 we were in court that counsel touted,
12 specifically mentioned that case orally in 13 court, and when one looks at that case, I 14 just think, Judge, that case underscores the 15 real world pragmatic approach the courts have 16 taken. Number three, I didn't address, with 17 all respect, verbally the four points the 18 contract argument. I think if your Honor
19 just reads our provision 4.6, this notion 20 that somehow our contract says that we 21 acknowledge that's a public document,
22 respectfully, but if your Honor will just go
23 back and read Section 4.6 in our contract, 24 that's not what it says. It says, a

1 document, we are going to be exchanging 2 confidential information throughout the 3 course of their work and providing care; if 4 we provide something to them during the 5 course of providing care and we provide that 6 document to them and we don't say that it's 7 subject to FOIA confidential, then it's 8 public, and we actually did a block quote, 9 which not a huge fan of, but I think it's 10 easiest for your Honor, and the contract is 11 attached as an exhibit. So this notion that 12 -- I mean that would blow up the entire 13 balance if a party is signing on, and 14 Mr. Craven I think understands that it would 15 blow up the entire balance, Judge, if a party 16 is signing on and saying every single 17 document they have becomes -- and that's also 18 rejected in Tribune. Finally this notion of 19 funding and the impact, I think it's very 20 important on 2.20 that it's public bodies, 21 and Mr. Craven's argument is not for this 22 Court; it's for the legislature on that 23 provision. So we'd respectfully ask,
24 your Honor, that you find this one particular

1 document to not be subject to FOIA. Thank 2 you, your Honor.

3 THE COURT: All right, thank you. Well
4 I mean as far as contract is concerned I 5 suppose if that provision was interpreted as 6 requiring Wexford to provide unredacted 7 settlement records to DOC in performance of 8 the contract, then that would be between DOC
9 and Wexford. Obviously as we all 10 acknowledge, once if DOC had obtained an 11 unredacted copy of the settlement record,
12 then they'd be required to turn it over 13 pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act, 14 but that wasn't done here. You know I'm all 15 about transparency; I'm all about First 16 Amendment rights, but I think that 17 Section 2.20 acts as a -- in a relatively 18 recently enacted provision that acts as a 19 restriction on relatively broader language
20 contained in 7(2). I think that the argument 21 that the amount of the settlement impacts the 22 amount of taxpayer money going forward with 23 respect to any future contracts between 24 Wexford and DOC is a good argument; it's a

1 good policy argument, but it's speculative 2 for one thing that they are going to enter 3 into any future contracts as opposed to some 4 other vendor, but more importantly, I think 5 that's an indirect result or an indirect 6 consequence of the Settlement Agreement in 7 this matter, which I do find to be a business 8 decision that is not directly related to the 9 provision of medical services pursuant to the 10 contract between Wexford and IDOC. So I will 11 allow the Defendant's Motion For Summary
12 Judgment, deny the Plaintiff's Motion For 13 Summary Judgment. I think it's a close case, 14 and if I'm wrong, I suspect that I'll find 15 out. So does Wexford wish to prepare a 16 written order consistent with my ruling?

17 MR. DEVOOGHT: We will, your Honor.

18 THE COURT: All right. I'll look for 19 that, and I'll note the docket with my 20 rulings and set that with Plaintiff and I'll 21 sign that. Anything else then for today?

22 MR. DEVOOGHT: Not from Wexford.

23 MR. CRAVEN: Thank you, your Honor.

24

1           THE COURT: Thank you, counsel. We're
